In the case before us Kabuliyats were signed annually by the Khots for many years; they are the only written evidence of the conditions on which the plaintiffs have the Khoti management of the village. The terms of the later series of Kabuliyats were arrived at after the survey settlement of 1865-66 and, we are told, have not since been materially varied. For practical purposes the Khots cannot exercise the management of the village unless they sign the Kabuliyat, for, on refusal to sign, the Government have the power to attach and usually do attach a Khoti village. On their side, therefore, the Khots obtain the management of the village and so much of the dues paid by the cultivators as are Khoti Fayda; on the other the Government receive from the Khot the assessment and secure to the cultivators certain valuable rights by reason of the conditions stated in the Kabuliyat. The Kabuliyat is the result of consideration of their rights by each side and each side has something to gain and lose in the matter. If he so choose, the Khot can refuse to sign the Kabuliyat and can stand on his own rights as Sadashiv Abaji Bhat did [Secretary of State v. Sadashiv Abaji Bhat (1)]. But if he signs the Kabuliyat he is bound by its terms so long as it is in force. There was a Kabuliyat in force when the trees were sold and cut. That Kabuliyat by clause 11 provided that as to teak trees in lands such as those in suit one-third share of the proceeds was to go to the Khots. They had thus bargained their dubious right to the whole proceeds for a certain one-third. It was argued that the Khots' right to the trees remained unaffected by the Kabuliyat. But it is not, as it seems to me, open to a party to an agreement to repudiate the arrangement because he thinks it is turning out unfavourably to him. I do not myself doubt that the agreement as to trees was intended to and did cover the case of trees on the lands described as Varkas; indeed to me it seems that the Kabuliyat was intended to prevent

(3) 12 B. 534 at p. 548; 5 Ind Dec. (N. S.) 840.
(4) 4 B. 264; 7 I A. 55; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 93; 3 Suth. P. C. J. 700; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 683 (P. C.).

*Since reported as 36 B. 290 — Ed.

such a dispute as that which has arisen in this case. Therefore, as between the Khot and the Government the matter in dispute is, in my opinion, concluded by the Kabuliyat and the Khot cannot in this case obtain more than one-third of the proceeds of the sale of the trees.

This, however, is a very small part of the case as argued and I now turn to the first matter, the application and effect of Dunlop's Proclamation. There is a great mass of evidence and there have been days of argument directed on the one side to show that the Khots were under this Proclamation the owners of the trees; on the other that the Government was the owner. There is a third possibility: that the Khatedars are the owners. The evidence and circumstances were all carefully considered by the District Judge but as I have said, in my opinion, the matter is concluded by the Kabuliyats and, therefore, it is unnecessary for me to embark on a consideration of this lengthy and difficult aspect of the case.

It is contended that the claim of the Khots to the one-third must also be dismissed because the notice of suit was defective. No doubt it was in a way defective; but all the same there was substantial notice of the claim and on the circumstances appearing, we cannot, in my opinion, dismiss the claim to one-third on so technical a ground. That claim is good and must be awarded. I would, therefore, award the claim to the extent of one-third and order that the parties bear their own costs throughout.

SHAH, J.—The plaintiffs in this case, who are the Khots of the villages of Girne and Naravali in the Mangaon Taluka of the Kolaba District, seek to recover the price of certain teak trees realised by the Government by the sale thereof to the occupants of the lands, on which the trees stood in 1909, or in the alternative one-third of the amount. In the lower Court they based their claim, firstly, on the ground of the proprietorship of the soil, secondly, on the allegation that the trees in question were really the subsequent growths of the original teak trees which were cut in 1862 or thereabout and that they belonged to the Khots according to certain Government Resolutions, thirdly, on Mr. Dunlop's Proclamation and, lastly as regards the alternative prayer on the Kabuliyats. The defendant, the Secretary of State for India in Council, resisted the claim principally on the ground that the lands were Varkas lands, that the plaintiffs were not the proprietors of the soil, that the trees were not cut before as alleged by the plaintiffs, that Mr. Dunlop's Proclamation had no application to the lands in question, and that, if at all, the occupants and not the Khots should have the benefit of that Proclamation, that the rights of the Khots to the trees were regulated by the terms of the Kabuliyats, and that the claim to one third of the price of the trees could not be allowed for want of a specific notice.

The District Court of Thana, which tried the suit, has disallowed the plaintiff's claim.

One of the Khots has preferred the present appeal.

It has been argued at length before us, and though all the four grounds in support of the Khots' claim have been urged, the first two grounds have not been seriously pressed.

These are Varkas lands and whatever the extent of the Khots' interest either as Khots or occupants in the particular lands may be, it is clear that they are not the proprietors of the soil. The question has been fully dealt with in the case of Vasudev Bhaskar Pendse v. Collector of Thana (5). Mr. Nijsure did not press the point in view of this decision.

The second ground of the plaintiffs' claim is equally untenable. Not only is it not shown that the teak trees in question are the subsequent growths but it is shown that most of the teak trees could not be the subsequent growths as alleged by the plaintiffs. The trial Court has dealt with the evidence on the point; and no good reason has been shown by the appellant why the trial Court's conclusion on this point should not be accepted.

The third ground of the plaintiff's claim relates to Mr. Dunlop's Proclamation. The main controversy between the parties has ranged round this part of the plaintiff's case in the appeal. It will be convenient to note here a few facts bearing on this point, which are either proved or admitted. The villages of Girne and Nanavali are within the area to which Mr. Dunlop's Proclamation applies. These villages were originally surveyed in about 1855 and the survey settlement was first introduced in 1865-66. The revision survey settlement was introduced in 1902, and at the date of the sale of the trees, the revision settlement was in force. The lands in question are described as Varkas and particular survey and Falni Numbers are given to the lands in question in the settlement register of 1865 65. They are described as Khoti Nisbat land. The occupants or tenants in whose names these lands are entered have to pay a certain fixed assessment and Fayda to the Khots. Sections 37 and 38 of the Bombay Survey and Settlement Act (I of 1865) are applicable to them. The present Khots and their predecessors-in-title have been Khots of these villages since the times of the Peshwas. Their position as Khots was recognised when the British Government acquired this territory. Prior to the first settlement they used to pass Kabuliyats and after 1870 they have passed annual Kabuliyats, to the Government, of which Exhibits 47 and 72 are types. Though their position as hereditary Khots is not admitted by the Government Pleader, it is clear to my mind that for the purposes of this case they must be treated as Khots, whose rights from long standing have become hereditary, and who represent the same class of Khots as the Khots in the case of Tajubai v. Sub-Collector of Kulaba (2).

(5) (1879) P. J. 274.

Mr. Dunlop's Proclamation was published in 1824, and it is common ground now that in spite of the attempt to cancel the grant in 1851, it is still in force.

The Khots sought to establish their claim against the occupants in the first instance but failed. The occupants are not parties to the present suit, and in this appeal we are not directly concerned with their rights, if any, to the trees. The Khots had to pay a certain fixed amount in the respect of the Varkas lands of these villages every year to the Government, and they used to recover the customary dues from those who used or were in occupation of the Varkas lands prior to the settlement of 1865 66. After the settlement the dues payable to the Khots by the occupants in respect of the Varkas land were the fixed assessment and the Fayda.

These are the important facts which relate to the contentions of the parties as to Mr. Dunlop's Proclamation.

The appellant contends that the Khots have sufficient interest in the lands to invite the application of the Proclamation in their favour, that the persons, in whose names the lands are entered, are really their tenants, and that their claim under the Proclamation is independent of and not affected by the terms of the Kabuliyats. The learned Government Pleader contends that the Proclamation can have no application to the Varkas lands, that the Khots have no such interest in the lands in question as would enable them to take the benefit of the Proclamation, that the occupants in whose names the lands are entered are not shown to have been the tenants of the Khots prior to the settlement of 1865-66, that even if the occupants in whose names the lands were entered in 1865 66 were to be treated as having been in occupation of the lands in 1824 in their own right they, and not the Khots, would be entitled to the benefit of the Proclamation and that the rights, if any, of the Khots under the Proclamation, are modified and regulated by Kabuliyats which the Khots passed from year to year.

I shall first deal with the argument that the Proclamation cannot apply to the Varkas lands. I am unable to accept this argument. It is proved in this case that the Khots had to pay a certain amount every year to the Government in respect of the Varkas lands. Undoubtedly the Khot is a farmer of the village. But as pointed out in Tajubai's case (2) the right to cultivate such waste or other lands as may be at the Khot's disposal or to give them out in cultivation under such terms as may be most to his advantage must be viewed as a recognised mode of his remuneration for the services rendered, and that whenever he ceases to be the Khot, he becomes liable for the full amount of the assessment as an ordinary cultivator in respect of lands which he may have brought under cultivation or disposed of for his own benefit. It follows that it would be open to the Khot to dispose of plots of Varkas lands in a manner as may be most to his advantage, of course subject to the rights of other tenants already in occupation of the Varkas lands, and to acquire such interest in the lands as would enable him to retain the lands subject to his paying the full assessment or customary dues when he ceases to be the Khot of the village. It is open to him to acquire the interest practically of an occupant in any plot of Varkas land. Such an interest, if proved, would entitle him to the benefit of the Proclamation on the principle recognised in In re Antaji Keshav Tambe (6) and in Secretary of State v. Sitaram Shivram (7). No doubt both these cases related to the Khoti Khasgi lands. But it seems to me that the principle of the decisions is not necessarily confined to the Khasgi lands. Fulton, J., while referring to the Proclamation, observed in In re Antaji Keshav Tambe (6) as follows: "The correspondence preceding the issue of this document shows that it was intended to be of wide application, and it is difficult to imagine to what class of lands it was intended to apply, if it did not include those of which the Khot was entitled to the permanent occupation so long as he paid the assessment due on the village." If a person—not necessarily a Khot—can prove that he was in permanent occupation of a plot of Varkas land in his own right, I do not see any reason why he is not the person whose land it is, within the meaning of the last sentence of the Proclamation. I have not set forth the whole Proclamation here; but it has been fully set forth in both these cases, and the material part is quoted in Marathi by Parsons, J., in his judgment in Secretary of State v. Sitaram Shivram (7). Of course any preson who claims the benefit of the Proclamation must prove that the land, on which the trees stand, is his in a popular sense, i.e., it is sufficiently marked out as being in his permanent occupation in his own right so as to make it properly describable as his land.

The learned Government Pleader has relied upon Vasudev Bhaskar Pendse's case (5) in support of his argument. But that was a case in which the basis of the claim was the proprietorship of the soil. It was not a case to which Mr. Dunlop's Proclamation could apply. The point was not considered and could not have been decided. The general conclusions of the learned Judges at page 286 have reference to the proprietorship of the soil and have no application whatever to Mr. Dunlop's Proclamation. The only other case relied upon in support of this view by the Government Pleader is the unreported case of Secretary of State for India in Council v. Balkrishna Antaji Bhagwat, First Appeal No. 73 of 1910 decided on 24th March 1914. I have read the interlocutory judgment of this Court in the case. I do not think that the point could be treated as decided in favour of the Government. At the most it may be treated as an instance in which, if the land was proved to be Varkas, it was assumed that the trees would not belong to the Khot. But even as to that I am very doubtful. The possibility of the Proclamation being applicable to ordinary Varkas land was recognised by the Court, the plaintiff in that case having been expressly permitted to adduce evidence on the point. I am, therefore, of opinion that the Proclamation may apply even to the Varkas land, provided the necessary facts are established.

The second general argument, which I propose to deal with, relates to the Kabuliyats. Assuming for the sake of argument that the Khot has a right to the trees on a certain plot of Varkas land under the proclamation, I do not think that the right is affected by these Kabuliyats. It seems to me that the purpose of clause 11 of the Kabuliyats, with which we are concerned, is to define the rights of the executants as Khots, and not to include within its scope such rights as may be independent of the Khotship, though they may have been acquired in consequence of the Khotship. For instance the trees on the Khoti Khasgi lands would belong to the Khot in spite of clause 11. In the case of Secretary of State v. Sadashiv Abaji Bhat (1), clause 10 of the Kabuliyat in which corresponded to clause 11 of the

(6) 18 B. 670 at p. 678; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 955.
(7) 23 B. 518; 1 Bom. L. R. 19; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 345.

Kabuliyats in the present case, the decision of the District Judge that Dunlop's Proclamation applied in respect of the trees growing on the Khoti Khasgi lands was accepted by the High Court. Similarly, if Dunlop's Proclamation applies to trees on Varkas lands proved to be in the permanent occupation of a person, I do not see how clause 11 can be used to deprive a Khot of the rights to trees, if he is proved to have such rights. I quite agree that such rights to trees as a Khot enjoys only as a Khot, and which would come to an end if he ceased to be the Khot, would be regulated by the Kabuliyats. I do not think that this view conflicts in any way with the decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Nagardas Sanbhagyadas v. Conservator of Forests, Bombay (4). It seems to me that the learned District Judge's view on this point is right.

The next question is whether the Khots are proved to have such interest in these Varkas lands as would bring them under the terms of the Proclamation. This is entirely a matter of evidence. The oral evidence is not of much use. It is necessarily vague and indecisive, when we have to deal with the state of things as it obtained prior to the settlement of 1865-66. There is no register. There are only the appraisement papers, which show that certain lands were cultivated by the persons who were entered in 1865-66 in the settlement register as occupants, or their predecessors. But the lands are described by the names, and it is not shown whether the lands mentioned in these papers refer to the particular plots with which we are concerned. The plaintiffs have not been able to show that any of the occupants or their predecessors were in occupation of the Varkas land as the tenants of the Khots and not in their own right, liable only to pay the customary dues to the Khots. The appraisement papers merely show that they cultivated the lands. But the nature and extent of their rights in relation to the lands are not shown. The plaintiffs have produced a number of rent notes; but they have not proved that a single one of them was executed by the present occupants or their predecessors. Under these circumstances it seems to me to be quite impossible to hold that the Khots were in permanent occupation of the lands in question or that they had such interest in the lands as would enable them to obtain the benefit of Dunlop's Proclamation. I have not discussed the evidence in detail. It was discussed at length before us. On no essential points it could bear examination; and it is unnecessary to deal with it at any length.

In view of this conclusion it is unnecessary to examine the further argument that the right to the trees is vested, if at all, in the tenants or occupants and not in the Khots. The learned District Judge has expressed a strong opinion that the Khatedars have the same rights over the lands in their Khatas except the right of alienation otherwise than by inheritance as the Khots have in respect of their private lands (Khasgi lands). This is not a claim by the Khatedars against the Government; and it is not necessary to express any opinion as to their rights to the trees.

It remains only to deal with the argument of Mr. Nijsure based on sections 37 and 38 of the Bombay Survey and Settlement Act, I of 1865, and section 40 of the Land Revenue Code of 1879. No doubt after the settlement the rights of the occupants and the Khot are regulated by sections 37 and 38 of the Act of 1865. The Khot has the right of reversion, and the occupants' rights of transfer are restricted. It may be that the occupants are the tenants of the Khots within the meaning of section 38. But I do not think that that consideration affects the question of the ownership of the trees apart from Dunlop's Proclamation. Section 40 of the Land Revenue Code, which relates to the rights of the occupants to trees, cannot help the Khots. In the first place the Khots are not the occupants within the meaning of section 40. Even assuming that they are the occupants it is clear from the Proclamation of 1870 (Exhibit 70), and the Proclamation of 1912, which has been admitted in evidence in appeal with the consent of parties, that the teak trees on the Varkas lands were reserved by the Government. The Khots have no claim to the teak trees under section 40 of the Land Revenue Code, and they have failed to prove that they are entitled to the benefit of Dunlop's Proclamation in respect of the Varkas lands in question.

As regards the alternative claim to one-third of the price of the trees, it is resisted mainly on the ground of the want of a proper notice. There is no answer to the claim on the merits; and the terms of clause 11 of the Kabuliyats are clear. The notice, though not explicit, is sufficient, in my opinion, to cover this claim.

I, therefore, concur in the decree proposed by my learned brother.

Decree accordingly.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 2801 OF 1915.

December 15, 1917.

Present:—Mr. Justice Shadi Lal and Mr. Justice Chevis.

MUHAMMAD ABDUL KADIR AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

Musammat HUSSAIN BIBI AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 92—Suit by alleged gaddinashin of Takia to eject trespasser—Trespasser found to be manager of waqf—Sanction of Collector, whether necessary—Religious institution—Takia of Rasul Shahi Faqirs in Lahore, whether wakf—Alienations by trustee, validity of—Trustee alleging himself to be owner, effect of.

The Takia of Rasul Shahi Faqirs in Lahore is a religious institution and waqf property. [p. 880, col. 1.]

In a suit by the plaintiff for possession and management of waqf property, on the allegations that he was the gaddinashin of the Takia, that the property in dispute was the trust property attached to that institution, that the defendant being a mere trespasser had no sort of right to remain in possession of that property and that the alienations made by her of the waqf property were invalid, it appeared that the property was waqf property and that the defendant was not a trespasser but the trustee and manager thereof:

Held, (1) that upon that finding it was clear that a prayer for defendant's removal would convert the suit into one described in section 92 of the Civil Procedure Code and that there being no consent in writing of the Collector as required by the said section, the prayer for her removal could not be adjudicated upon; [p. 880, col. 2.]

(2) that no issue having been framed by the lower Court as to the necessity for the alienations of the waqf property made by the defendant, they could not be set aside until the alienees had been afforded an opportunity, and had failed, to establish the circumstances which would justify the transactions and render them binding upon the persons interested in the institution. [p. 881, col. 1.]

It was urged that no person other than the duly authorised trustee could alienate the property of a religious trust by sale or mortgage and that as the defendant was never appointed a trustee, the alienations made by her were not binding upon the persons interested in the institution:

Held, that this matter as well as the matter relating to the necessity for the transactions could properly be decided in a suit framed for the purpose of contesting alienations made by a de jure or de facto trustee and that as the plaint did not assign to the defendant the position of a trustee, but described her as a mere stranger to the institution, the lower Court was not called upon to decide these points and the Chief Court was not willing to pronounce any opinion thereon. [p. 881, col. 1.]

Where the father of the defendant was recorded in the revenue papers as the trustee of a shrine and remained in possession in that capacity up to his death, after which the property was held by or on behalf of the defendant:

Held, that the mere fact that after repeatedly describing herself as trustee, the defendant began to claim a higher status, did not alter her real position. [p. 880, col. 2.]

Where property belongs to a religious institution, the person in charge thereof cannot divest himself of his fiduciary position by merely asserting his title thereto [p. 880, col. 2.]

Where the pleadings of both parties leave the Court in the dark as to the nature of the real contest between them, the proper course to follow is not to allow costs to any of them. [p. 881, col. 2.]

First appeal from the decree of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Lahore, dated 23rd August 1915, decreeing plaintiffs' claim for declaration and dismissing as regards ejectment.

Mr. Oertel, Bakshi Gokal Chand and Malak Muhammad Hussain, for the Appellants.

The Hon'ble Mr. Fazl-i-Hussain, for Musammat Hussain Bibi, Mr. Nihal Chand Mehra, for all other Respondents.

Mr. Tirath Ram, for the Vendees (Appellants).

JUDGMENT.—This was an action brought originally by one Hassan Shah on the allegations that he was the Gaddi Nashin of the Takia of the Rasul Shahi Fakirs in Lahore, that the property in dispute was trust property attached to the institution, and that he was entitled to the possession and management thereof. The suit was directed mainly against Musammat Hussain

Bibi, who was according to the plaintiff a mere trespasser having no sort of right to remain in possession of the property. It appears that this lady had sold two plots of land to defendants Nos. 2 and 3 respectively, and the plaintiff in the original plaint demanded possession of these plots also; but subsequently amended the plaint stating that he had obtained possession thereof, and confined himself to the prayer for a declaration that the alienations, having been made by a person without any shadow of a title, were null and void.

At a subsequent stage of the suit two persons, Abdul Kadir and Muhammad Khan, who claimed to be the worshippers of the shrine, were added as plaintiffs, but their addition did not bring about any amendment in the substance of the plaint. The suit was resisted on several grounds which need not be detailed here. The learned Subordinate Judge, upon an examination of the oral and documentary evidence, has held that (a) the property in suit is waqf, (b) the plaintiff Hasan Shah is not the Gaddi Nashin of the shrine, (c) Musammat Hussain Bibi is the manager of the institution and in charge of the property as trustee thereof, and (d) the alienations in favour of defendants Nos. 2 to 3 being in respect of waqf property are invalid. Upon these findings the learned Judge has dismissed the suit for possession as against Musammat Hussain Bibi, but has granted a decree declaring that the sale-deeds of the waqf property are null and void. Against this decree two appeals have been preferred to this Court, one (Civil Appeal No. 2801 of 1915) by the plaintiffs and the other (Civil Appeal No. 3516 of 1915), by the vendees; and both these appeals may conveniently be disposed of by one judgment.

The findings (a) and (b) have not been challenged before us either by the plaintiffs or by Musammat Hussain Bibi, and we must, therefore, take it that the conclusions of the learned Judge on both these points are correct. The result is that Hassan Shah stands on no better footing than the other plaintiffs; and the suit must, therefore, be treated as one brought by certain persons who claim to be the worshippers of the shrine and beneficiaries in the property attached thereto.

Mr. Oertel on behalf of the plaintiffs confines his attack to the status of Musammat Hussain Bibi and contends that she is merely a trespasser and has no right to remain in possession of the property. The learned Counsel invites our attention to the fact that she herself claimed to be the owner of the property, and did not assert that she was holding it in her capacity as the manager of the institution. Now it is true that she has of late been regarding herself as proprietor, but there can be little doubt that previously she repeatedly described herself as the trustee and claimed no higher status than that. Indeed, there are several documents upon the record filed by the plaintiffs as their exhibits, which show that she called herself the Gaddi Nashin of the shrine and stated that the property was waqf and belonged to the institution; vide, inter alia, Exhibits P. 3, P. 14 and P. 26. The learned Subordinate Judge finds, and there is ample evidence to support that finding, that her father Nazir Hassain was recorded in the revenue papers as the trustee of the shrine and remained in possession in that capacity up to his death in 1899, and that since then the property has been held by or on behalf of Musammat Hussain Bibi. The mere fact that after repeatedly describing herself as trustee she began to claim a higher status does not alter the real position. It is now common ground that the property belongs to a religious institution, and there can be no manner of doubt that the person in charge thereof cannot divest himself of his fiduciary position by merely asserting his title thereto.

We must, therefore, hold that Musammat Hussain Bibi is the trustee of the property; and upon that finding it is clear that the prayer for her removal would convert the suit into one described in section 92 of the Civil Procedure Code. There being no consent in writing of the Collector as required by the said section, the relief for the removal of Musammat Hussain Bibi cannot be adjudicated upon. The plaintiffs' appeal must, therefore, fail, and is hereby dismissed with costs.

As regards the appeal preferred by the vendees, the contention urged by their learned Pleader is that no issue on the question of necessity for the alienations was framed by the lower Court and no enquiry into the matter has consequently been made. It appears that upon the allegations in the plaint that the alienor had no sort of connection with the two plots of land and was merely a trespasser, the issue as to necessity did not arise; but considering that she has been found to be the manager of the institution, the alienations cannot be set aside, until the alienees are afforded an opportunity, and fail to establish the circumstances which would justify the transactions and render them binding upon the persons interested in the institution. That such an issue was not raised is due mainly to the incorrect allegations made by the plaintiffs in their plaint.

Mr. Tirath Ram further contends that the plots of land sold to his clients did not form part of the trust property, and that Musammat Hussain Bibi was, consequently, fully entitled to dispose of them in any manner she liked. There is no evidence upon the record that these two plots of land are in any way different from the rest of the property, or that the alienor acquired them with her own money. We are not, therefore, prepared to accede to this contention; and we hold that the entire property, which is the subject matter of this litigation, is trust property, and is attached to the shrine.

Mr. Oertel on behalf of the plaintiffs argues that no person other than the duly authorized trustee can alienate by sale or mortgage the property of a religious trust; and that as Musammat Hussain Bibi was never appointed a trustee, the alienations made by her are not binding upon the persons interested in the institution. It seems to us that this matter as well as the question relating to the necessity for the transactions can properly be decided in a suit framed for the purpose of contesting alienations made by a de jure or de facto trustee; and as the plaint in the present case does not, as stated above, assign to Musammat Hussain Bibi the position of a trustee, and describes her as a mere stranger to the institution, we are not called upon to remand the case for inquiry into, and decision upon these points, and we accordingly refrain from pronouncing any opinion thereupon. In view of our findings that Musammat Hussain Bibi is the trustee, and that the entire property in dispute belongs to the religious institution, we hold that the suit as framed does not lie, and we accordingly accept the appeal of the vendees and setting aside the decree of the lower Court dismiss the suit. Considering that the pleadings of both the parties left the Court in the dark as to the real position of Musammat Hussain Bibi and as to the nature of the property involved in the case, we direct the parties to bear their own costs in both the Courts.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

RULE Nisi No. 602 OF 1917.

February 8, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Teunon and Mr. Justice Newbould.

MADHUSUDAN GOPE—PLAINTIFF —PETITIONER

versus

BEHARI LALL GOPE AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 24—Courts of Small Causes, what are—Small Cause suit transferred from Court of Sub-Judge to Court of Munsif—Munsif's Court, whether Court of Small Causes—Jurisdiction.

A Court of Small Causes under section 24 (4) of the Code of Civil Procedure includes Courts vested with Small Cause Court jurisdiction as well as the special Courts constituted under the Provincial Small Causes Courts Act. [p. 882, col. 2.]

A suit of the value of Rs. 140 cognizable by a Court of Small Causes was transferred by the District Judge from the Court of a Subordinate Judge vested with Small Cause powers not exceeding Rs. 500 to the Court of a Munsif with Small Cause powers up to Rs. 100 only:

Held, that the Court of the Munsif to which the suit was transferred must be deemed to be a Court of Small Causes under section 24 (4) of the Code of Civil Procedure so as to permit the trial of the suit by that Court. [p. 882, col. 2.]

Rule against the order of the Munsif, 4th Court, Dacca, in Suit No. 616/706 of 1917.

MADHU SUDAN GOPE v. BEHARI LALL GOPE.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

Babu Bepin Behary Biswas, for the Petitioner.—The learned Munsif, to whom the case was transferred by the order of the District Judge made under section 24 of the Civil Procedure Code, had no jurisdiction to try the suit, because the value of the suit is more than the extent to which the Munsif could exercise his pecuniary jurisdiction as a Small Cause Court Judge. Though the Munsif could try ordinary suits of the value of Rs. 1,000, yet his powers as Small Cause Court Judge extended up to Rs. 100 so this suit, which is evidently a Small Cause Court suit and the value of which exceeds Rs. 100, should not have been tried by the Munsif. See Dulal Chandra Deb v. Ram Narain Deb (1). Before the transfer of the suit the District Judge should have considered the competency of the Court to which he was transferring the suit.

See section 24 (1), clause (b), sub clause (ii) of the Civil Procedure Code. See also sections 16 and 33 of the Provincial Small Causes Courts Act.

Babu Romesh Chundra Sen, for the Opposite Party.—Under section 24 (4) of the Civil Procedure Code the Munsif, who had jurisdiction to try the suit up to the value of Rs. 1,000, had jurisdiction to try this suit which was transferred to his Court by the order of the District Judge. Section 16 of the Provincial Small Causes Courts Act is limited by the general provisions made in section 24 (4) of the Civil Procedure Code. Therefore, under section 24 (4) the Munsif's Court is, for the purposes of this suit, to be deemed a Court of Small Causes having jurisdiction to try this suit. See Sankarama Aiyar v. Padmanabha Aiyar (2), Sukha v. Raghunath Das (3).

JUDGMENT.—In this case it appears that a suit of a Small Cause Court nature valued at Rs. 140 was instituted in the Court of the Subordinate Judge at Dacca vested with powers under section 25 of the Bengal, Agra and Assam Civil Courts Act for trial of suits cognizable by Courts of Small Causes up to a value not exceeding Rs. 500. For certain special reasons into which we need not enter the District Judge of Dacca by an order, made under the provisions of section 24 of the Civil Procedure Code, transferred the suit for trial to the Court of a Munsif at Dacca vested with Small Cause Court powers, but exercising jurisdiction in such cases only up to a value not exceeding Rs. 100. The suit was tried by the Munsif without objection taken by the plaintiff who is the petitioner before us, and it resulted in a decree for a sum of about Rs. 75.

The petitioner now comes to this Court and contends that by virtue of the provisions of section 16 of the Provincial Small Causes Courts Act and by reason of the pecuniary limitation on his Small Cause Court jurisdiction, the Munsif was not competent nor had he any jurisdiction to try the suit in question.

The answer to this contention put forward by the opposite party is that by virtue of the provisions of sub-section (4) of section 24 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the Court of the Munsif must, under the circumstances, be deemed to be a Court of Small Causes within the meaning of section 16 of the Provincial Small Causes Courts Act. In support of this contention he refers us to the cases reported as Sankarama Aiyar v. Padmanabha Aiyar (2), Sukha v. Raghunath Das (3). By the petitioner we have been referred to the case reported as Dulal Chandra Deb v. Ram Narain Deb (1), in which the learned Judges who heard and decided that case intimated that they were inclined to a contrary view. That expression of opinion was not, however, as indeed the learned Judges themselves have pointed out, necessary to the decision of the case before them and must, therefore, be regarded as an expression of opinion and no more. With all deference, we are unable to agree in that opinion and for the reasons given in the case decided by the Madras and Allahabad High Courts to which we have referred we are of opinion that a Court of Small Causes under section 24 (4) of the Code of Civil Procedure does include Courts vested with Small Cause Court jurisdiction as well as the special Courts constituted under Act IX of 1887. It follows, therefore, that the Court of the Munsif to which the suit in question was transferred must be deemed to be a Court of Small Causes, so at least, as to permit the trial of the said suit by such Court. What procedure the

(1) 31 C. 1057 at p. 1062.
(2) 17 Ind. Cas 425; 38 M. 25; 23 M. L. J. 373; (1912) M. W. N. 1086.
(3) 37 Ind Cas. 809; 15 A. L. J. 69; 39 A. 214.

Munsif should have adopted and what finality attaches to his decision it is not necessary for the purpose of this Rule to determine.

In the view we take this Rule must be discharged with costs, the hearing fee being assessed at one gold mohur.

Rule discharged.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 1825 OF 1914.

January 15, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Scott-Smith and Mr. Justice Shadi Lal.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

SOHAN LAL—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Land Acquisition Act (I of 1894), ss. 9, 25 (2)—Notice to persons interested—Failure to make claim on date fixed, effect of—Collector, jurisdiction of, to consider claim before award – Cost of construction, whether can be taken into account.

In a suit for compensation for a house acquired by the Government it appeared that the notice issued by the Collector under section 9 of the Land Acquisition Act directed the persons interested to appear and state their objections on the 20th July 1912. The plaintiff failed to appear on that date inspite of the fact that the notice was duly served upon him. Eventually he appeared on the 21st August and filed written objections, which were considered by the Collector who made his award. The plaintiff objected and a reference was made to the Court in accordance with law:

Held, (1) that the plaintiff could not be said to have omitted to make a claim pursuant to the notice given under section 9 merely because he did not make it by the date originally fixed in the notice; [p. 884, col. 1.]

(2) that at any time before giving his award the Collector had jurisdiction to deal with any claim made to him under section 9 (2) of the Act; [p. 884, col. 1.]

Secretary of State for India in Council v. Gobind Lal Bysak, 12 C. W. N. 263, Secretary of State v. Bishun Dutt, 9 Ind. Cas. 423; 33 A. 376; 8 A. L. J. 115, distinguished.

(3) that the cost of construction of the house could be taken into account in fixing its market value. [p. 884, col. 2.]

Land Acquisition Act, 1894, In re, 9 Bom. L. R. 1232, Government of Bombay v Karim Tar Mahomed, 3 Ind. Cas. 273; 33 B. 325; 10 Bom. L. R. 660, Collector of Hooghly v. Raj Kristo Mookerjee, 22 W. R. 234, Secretary of State for India in Council v. Kartic Chandra Ghose, 9 C. W. N. 655, distinguished. Government v. Dayal Mulji, 9 Bom. L. R. 99, Sukhanand Gurumukhrai, In re, 4 Ind. Cas. 278; 34 B. 486; 11 Bom. L. R. 1176, followed.

First appeal from the order of the Divisional Judge, Delhi, dated the 26th May 1914, awarding Sohan Lal respondent Rs. 4,830 as compensation on a reference by the Collector under the Land Acquisition Act.

The Government Advocate, for the Appellant.

Lala Moti Sagar, R. S., for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal on behalf of the Secretary of State for India from an order of the Divisional Judge of Delhi awarding Sohan Lal respondent Rs. 4,830 as compensation on a reference by the Collector under the Land Acquisition Act. The Court has enhanced the Collector's award by Rs. 1,061-7-2 and the appeal is that the order of the Court be set aside and the award of the Collector be confirmed.

The first point urged by the learned Government Advocate on behalf of the appellant is that as the objector-respondent made no claim in pursuance of and in accordance with the notice issued under section 9 of the Land Acquisition Act, therefore, the Court had no jurisdiction in view of the provisions of section 25 to increase the award. The notice issued by the Collector under section 9 of the Act was for the appearance of persons interested and the stating of their objections, etc., on the 20th July 1912. The notice was duly served upon the objector respondent, but he did not appear on the day fixed. The proceedings were adjourned and fresh notices were issued to certain persons who had not already been served. Eventually on the 21st August Sohan Lal appeared and filed written objections in which he claimed Rs. 10,000 on account of compensation. The objections were considered by the Collector who in due course made his award. Sohan Lal objected to the award and a reference was made to the Court in accordance with law.

Mr. Petman's argument is that Sohan Lal should have made his objections, if any, on the 20th July 1912 as the notice under section 9 directed his appearance on that date, and that he had no right to make any objections to the Collector at any later date. He bases his argument upon section 25, sub-section 2, of the Act which is as follows:—

"When the applicant has refused to make such claim or has omitted without sufficient reason (to be allowed by the Judge) to make such claim the amount awarded by the Court shall in no case exceed the amount awarded by the Collector."

In support of his argument he has cited Secretary of State for India in Council v. Gobind Lal Bysak (1) and Secretary of State v. Bishun Dutt (2), but, in our opinion, those cases are distinguishable from the present one, for there the objector never appeared at all before the Collector or made any claim prior to the award. No authority directly in support of his argument has been cited by the learned Government Advocate, and we do not think it can be said that Sohan Lal omitted to make a claim pursuant to the notice given under section 9 merely because he did not make it by the date originally fixed in the notice. Proceedings before the Collector were adjourned from time to time and we consider that the claim made by Sohan Lal on the 21st August was a claim pursuant to the notice given under section 9. In our opinion at any time before giving his award the Collector had jurisdiction to deal with any claim made to him under section 9 (2) of the Act. We consider, therefore, that the first objection raised on behalf of the appellant has no force.

The house for which compensation has been awarded to Sohan Lal was built by him upon land belonging to a Jain Temple and appears to have been of a quasi-religious character. It is, therefore, improbable that it could have been sold in the open market to any person who might desire to purchase it. But we see no reason why it should not have been sold to a member of the Jain community to which Sohan Lal himself belongs. As the house had never been rented, and in the absence of evidence of sale of similar houses in the neighbourhood, the Court in order to ascertain the market value enquired into the cost of construction of the building.

The learned Government Advocate's second point is that the cost of construction should not have been taken into account in fixing the market value. In support of his argument he referred to Land Acquisition Act, 1894, In re (3), Government of Bombay v. Karim Tar Mahomed (4), Collector of Hooghly v. Raj Kristo Mookerjee (5) and Secretary of State for India in Council v. Kartic Chandra Ghose (6).

These rulings do not deal with cases of buildings. They lay down, generally speaking, that the amount of compensation is to be calculated on the actual value to the owner and that the costs of improving the land or of preserving it are not of much use in estimating this. There is nothing in any of these rulings to the effect that in no case can the cost of construction be taken into account in fixing the market value of a building.

On the contrary in the case reported as Government v. Dayal Mulji (7) the actual cost of constructing buildings was taken into account by the Court and in Sukhanand Gurumukhrai, In re (8), it was held that where there is a demand the original cost of building is the most important element for consideration in fixing the market value.

Something was said in argument before us about the re-instatement principle which is referred to in Lord Halsbury's Laws of England, Volume VI, page 37, where we find the following:—

"When the land is used for some particular purpose not of a commercial nature, such as for a public park, or for a church or school, it is very difficult to estimate the loss. One method adopted is that known as re-instatement, by which is meant that the amount of compensation to be awarded shall be assessed according to the cost of acquiring an equally convenient site and erecting equally convenient premises."

(1) 12 C. W. N. 263.
(2) 9 Ind. Cas. 423; 33 A. 376; 8 A. L. J. 115.
(3) 9 Bom. L. R. 1232.
(4) 3 Ind. Cas 273; 33 B. 325; 10 Bom. L. R. 660.
(5) 22 W. R. 234.
(6) 9 C. W. N. 655.
(7) 9 Bom. L. R. 99.
(8) 4 Ind. Cas. 278; 34 B. 436; 11 Bom. L. R. 1176.

AVANASHI CHETTI v. MUTHUKRUPPAN CHETTI.

The learned Government Advocate urges that the re-instatement principle is not in force in India. In support of his argument he has referred to an unreported case of a Division Bench of this Court (Civil Appeal No. 12 of 1898 decided on the 29th July 1898) which supports his contention. Without, however, deciding whether the re-instatement principle is or is not in force in India, we are clearly of opinion that there is no authority for the proposition that the original cost of construction of a building can in no case be taken into consideration in assessing the market value thereof.

In the present case where there have been no sales in the neighbourhood and where the house in question has never been rented, we think that the best method of ascertaining the market value is to enquire into the original cost of construction. The Court below has assumed that there is a demand for such house property in the neighbourhood and we think it was justified in making this assumption. It points out that there are other houses of similar design in the neighbourhood and that this house is a large and well-constructed one, well fitted to hold the family of a Hindu gentleman. We see no reason to suppose that it could not have been sold to some other member of the Jain community.

As to the cost of construction there is a good deal of evidence on the record. No less than three experts have made estimates. These have been discussed by the lower Court. The expert called by the objector estimates the cost at some Rs. 6,000, whereas Mr. Croad, Assistant Engineer of the Public Works Department, made an estimate for Rs. 3,600 only. The experts have criticised each other's estimates, and what the Court has done is to adopt a middle line. It thought Mr. Croad's criticisms would bring Rai Babu Mal's estimate down say to Rs. 4,500, whereas Mr. Croad's own estimate appeared to it to be an optimistic one. Considering all the circumstances of the case and having regard to its own inspection of the spot it thought a fair award would be Rs. 4,200.

After a careful consideration we consider this estimate to be a reasonable one and we see no sufficient ground for differing from it. The appeal, therefore, fails and is dismissed, but considering that Sohan Lal made an exorbitant claim before the Collector and in the lower Court we leave the parties to bear their own costs.

Appeal dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

APPEALS AGAINST ORDERS NOS. 107 AND 108 OF 1917.

October 10, 1917.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sadasiva Aiyar and Mr. Justice Bakewell.

A. M. V. AVANASHI CHETTI—PURCHASER—APPELLANT IN BOTH

versus

MUTHUKARUPPAN CHETTI AND OTHERS—PETITIONERS—RESPONDENTS IN A. A. O. No. 107 OF 1917

AND DORAISAMI alias DEVANNA GOUNDAN AND ANOTHER—PETITIONERS—RESPONDENTS IN A. A. O. No. 108 OF 1917.

Provincial Insolvency Act (III of 1907), s. 22—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 90, applicability of, to contracts of sale by Receiver—Jurisdiction—District Court, powers of superintendence of, over acts of Receiver.

A District Court has no jurisdiction to entertain an application under Order XXI, rule 90, Civil Procedure Code, to annul a contract of sale completed by a Receiver. Its powers are limited to applications preferred within 21 days of the contract under section 22 of the Provincial Insolvency Act. [p. 886, col. 1.]

The District Court has, however, powers of supervision over the Official Receiver and can give him directions not to complete a contract of sale in exercise of such powers. [p. 886, col. 1.]

Appeals against the order of the District Court, Trichinopoly, in Civil Miscellaneous Petitions Nos. 742 and 743 of 1916, in Insolvency Petition No. 14 of 1915.

FACTS.—The Official Receiver of Trichinopoly having concluded the sale of a property of an insolvent to the appellant, the respondents, who were the creditors, applied to the District Court to annul the contract under Order XXI, rule 90, Civil Procedure Code. No application was, however, made within the 21 days allowed by section 22 of the Provincial Insolvency Act. The District Court purporting to act under the powers vested in it under the Code of Civil Procedure cancelled the sale to the appellant. The respondents appealed against the order to the High Court.

Mr. S. T. Srinivasagopalachariar, for the Appellant in both.

Mr. K. Bhashyan Aiyangar, for the Respondent in both.

JUDGMENT.—The only power of the District Judge to interfere judicially with the contract of sale entered into by the Receiver is under section 22 of the Provincial Insolvency Act. No application was made under that section to the District Court within 21 days of the contract of sale and hence the District Judge had no power to set aside the contract of sale in a judicial proceeding.

The respondent, in filing a petition under Order XXI, rule 90 of the Code of Civil Procedure, wholly misconceived his remedy.

The District Judge might have the powers of supervision over the Receiver and give directions to the Receiver not to complete a contract of sale in exercise of such powers of supervision, but that is not what he has done in this case. He has held that an application under Order XXI, rule 90 of the Code of Civil Procedure, could be entertained by him in respect of a contract of sale concluded by the Receiver and has passed an order purporting to be passed under that provision of the Civil Procedure Code.

The order was, therefore, passed without jurisdiction and is set aside. As this objection seems not to have been taken before the District Judge, there will be no order as to costs throughout.

Appeal allowed.

M. C. P.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION No. 625 OF 1917.

November 30, 1917.

Present:—Mr. Justice Shadi Lal.

THE FIRM BHAGAT RAM-GANPAT RAI THROUGH KALA RAM AND GIRDHARI LAL —PLAINTIFFS—PETITIONERS

versus

CHHAJJU RAM—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Mortgage—Mortgagee giving up rights under mortgage in consideration of Hundi—Hundi insufficiently stamped—Mortgagee, whether can sue on mortgage.

When a cause of action for money is once complete in itself, whether for goods sold, or for money lent or for any other claim, and the debtor then gives a bill or note to the creditor for payment of the money at a future time, the creditor, if the bill or note is not paid at maturity, may, always as a rule, sue for the original consideration, provided that he has not endorsed, or lost, or parted with, the bill or note, under such circumstances as to make the debtor liable upon it to some third person. But when the original cause of action is the bill or note itself, and does not exist independently of it, then the bill or note is the only contract between the parties, and if for want of proper stamp or some other reason it is not admissible in evidence, the creditor must lose his money. [p. 887, col. 1.]

Plaintiff gave up his rights under a mortgage in consideration for cash payment and a Hundi executed in his favour by the mortgagor. He made an endorsement on the back of the mortgage-deed that he had received the full amount of the mortgage-debt from the mortgagor. The Hundi executed by the mortgagor in his favour was not properly stamped:

Held, that the plaintiff by acknowledging the receipt of the entire money due on the mortgage-deed had discharged the mortgagor from his liability on the deed, the Hundi being the only contract between the parties, and that for want of proper stamp the Hundi being inadmissible in evidence the creditor must lose his money and could not sue on the original mortgage-deed. [p. 887, col. 2.]

Petition for revision of the decree of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Hissar, dated the 10th April 1917, reversing that of the Munsif, 1st Class, Hissar, dated the 16th March 1917, decreeing the claim.

Lala Faqir Chand, for Bakhshi Tek Chand, for the Petitioners.

Mr. Manohar Lal, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—There can be little doubt that the plaintiff Kalu Ram gave up his rights under the mortgage-deed, dated the 10th November 1908, for Rs. 1,400 in lieu of Rs. 1,000 paid in cash and a Hundi for Rs. 400 executed in his favour by the mortgagor. That the cause of action on the mortgage-deed was extinguished is clear from the fact that the creditor wrote an endorsement on the back of the deed to the effect that Rs. 1,400 had been received in full from the mortgagor. Now, the Hundi is admittedly inadmissible in evidence for want of sufficient stamp; and the only question for consideration is whether the plaintiff can prove his claim aliunde. The rule of law applicable to a case of this kind is enunciated in a Division Bench judgment of the Calcutta High Court in Sheikh Akbbar v. Sheikh Khan (1) and is to the effect that when a cause of action for money is once complete in itself, whether for goods sold, or for money lent, or for any other claim, and the debtor then gives a bill or note to the creditor for payment of the money at a future time, the creditor, if the bill or note is not paid at maturity, may, always as a rule, sue for the original consideration, provided that he has not endorsed, or lost, or parted with, the bill or note, under such circumstances as to make the debtor liable upon it to some third person. But when the original cause of action is the bill or note itself, and does not exist independently of it, then the bill or note is the only contract between the parties, and if for want of proper stamp or some other reason it is not admissible in evidence, the creditor must lose his money. This principle of law is beyond doubt, and the difficulty arises in ascertaining to which class any particular case belongs.

I have considered the arguments advanced by the learned Counsel on both sides, and I am of opinion that the case before me belongs to the second class, and that the plaintiff has no cause of action independently of the Hundi. Indeed, the facts of this case are, in the application of the principle, very similar to those dealt with in the aforesaid Calcutta judgment. It appears that the plaintiff in that case had a claim against the defendant for the value of his share in a partnership business, and it was verbally agreed between the parties that in settlement of that claim Rs. 250 should be taken as the value of the share, out of which Rs. 25 were paid to the plaintiff and for the balance the plaintiff gave the defendants a receipt and took in return a promissory note for that amount executed by the defendants. The learned Judges held that the transaction was one of loan of Rs. 225 to the defendants upon the terms contained in the promissory note, and as there was no loan independently of the note, the note itself was the best evidence of the transaction, and as it could not be proved for want of a proper stamp, the plaintiff could not recover upon it. Now, in the present case the plaintiff by acknowledging the receipt of the entire money due on the mortgage-deed discharged the mortgagor from his liability on the deed, and then entered into a loan transaction for Rs. 400 upon the terms contained in the bill of exchange. In this view it is quite clear that the decision in the Calcutta case fully applies and that the lower Appellate Court has rightly dismissed the suit.

The learned Pleader for the petitioner has cited a number of judgments, but as pointed out above the Court has upon the circumstances of each case to determine whether it belongs to one or the other of the two classes referred to in Sheikh Akbar v. Sheikh Khan (1). The judgment of the Allahabad High Court in Hira Lal v. Datadin (2), to which my special attention has been drawn by Mr. Faqir Chand, is a very brief one, and apparently proceeded upon the ground that there was a contract independently of the promissory note which was inadmissible in evidence. That ruling consequently has no application to the facts before me.

For the aforesaid reasons I am not prepared to interfere on revision, and dismiss the application with costs.

Application dismissed.

(1) 7 C. 256; 8 C. L. R. 528; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 713.

(2) 4 A. 135; A. W. N. (1881) 144; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 705.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEALS NOS. 486-501 OF 1917.

February 20, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Roe.

ERNEST MYLNE—APPELLANT

versus

NATHU SUNDI AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Provincial Small Causes Courts Act (IX of 1887), ss. 15, 16—Suit to recover mutharfa, whether cognisable by Small Causes Court—Jurisdiction, question of, consideration of—Procedure—Ground rent and house rent, distinction between.

ERNEST MYLNE v. NATHU SUNDI.

A Court in order to satisfy itself as to its jurisdiction is required to examine the plaint and decide on the plaint and not on the written statement what is the nature of the claim. [p. 888, cols. 1 & 2.]

A suit to recover a sum from a tenant levied as mutharfa, irrespective of the area of the land upon which the tenant builds and of the dimensions of the house built by him, is cognisable by a Court of Small Causes, whether the sum is regarded as rent or as a tax. [p. 888, col. 2.]

The distinction between a house rent and a ground rent lies in the contract between the lessor and the lessee. If a lessee takes a parcel of land and then builds a house upon it, the rent that he pays to his lessor is a ground rent. If the lessor builds the house and then lets house and land together, the rent is a house rent. [p. 888, col. 1.]

Second appeals from the decisions of the Subordinate Judge, Shahabad.

Messrs. Kulwant Sahay and Mrityunjoy Lal, for the Appellant.

Mr. Atul Krishna Ray, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—These appeals arise from decisions of the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Shahabad confirming a decree of the Munsif of Arrah, rejecting the plaintiff's claim for what he called in his plaint "Mutharfa rents." The learned Munsif had held on the third issue framed that the suits were cognizable by a Small Cause Court, but instead of returning the plaints to be presented in the Small Cause Court he proceeded to dismiss them upon the merits. On appeal the issue was again raised, whether the lower Court had jurisdiction to try the suits. Upon this question the learned Subordinate Judge decided that Mutharfa rents were ground rents and that suits for such rents were not cognizable by a Small Cause Court. The distinction between a house rent and a ground rent lies in the contract between the lessor and the lessee. If a lessee takes a parcel of land and then builds a house upon it, the rent that he pays to his lessor is a ground rent. If the lessor builds the house and then lets house and land together, the rent is a house rent. This I understand to have been the basis of the decision in the case decided as Uma Churn Mandal v. Bijari Bewah (1). In my view the learned Munsif should have gone into the issue whether he had jurisdiction to try the cases or not, before he proceeded to try them, and to satisfy himself as to his jurisdiction he was required to examine the plaint and decide on the plaint and not on the written statement what was the nature of the claim. The plaint has been read out to me. I do not find in it one word regarding land or any contract to pay rent for land. It is said that the defendants have houses, and that for the privilege of occupying those houses they are liable to pay yearly a certain sum. On the plaints as framed clearly the sums claimed were either house rents or as set out in the judgment of Chamier, C. J., in the case of Mahboob Momin v. Bhagwati Prasad (2), taxes and not rents at all. The evidence given in the case by the plaintiff's agent (which evidence may be now taken for the purposes of the argument as a statement explaining the nature of the claim) shows that the sum levied as Mutharfa is levied irrespective of the area of the land upon which the tenant builds and irrespective of the dimensions of the house which the tenant has built upon the land. Whether we regard such a levy as a rent or a tax a suit to recover it is cognizable by the Small Cause Court. The learned Munsif had, therefore, no jurisdiction to try it, and the learned Subordinate Judge, had he decided this point in this way, would have set aside his order and directed him to return the plaint for presentation in the proper Court, as was done in the case of Musammat Edoo v. Shaikh Hefazut Hossein (3).

If I am wrong on this point and if the suits can be regarded as suits for ground rent, I may say that in my view the appeal is concluded by findings of fact. The expressions used by the learned Subordinate Judge are not peculiarly happy, but he does find as a fact that there has been no satisfactory evidence to show that these defendants voluntarily agreed to pay Mutharfa rents after 1310 F. S., nor is there any satisfactory evidence to prove usage or custom. If the sums be regarded as ground rents it was necessary for the plaintiffs to show an attornment to them by the defendants as tenants. Both the Courts below are agreed that there was no such attornment and if indeed any rents were realized they were realised by force and not under any contract. They were in a sense bribes to the landlords to be left in peace and not acknowledgments of any liability to pay yearly rent. The payment of such bribes would not create the relationship of landlord and tenant and, therefore, the suits as suits for ground rent were not maintainable. The order of the Court is that the Munsif be directed to return the plaints to the plaintiffs in these sixteen cases. The costs of this appeal and of the appeal to the lower Appellate Court will be paid by the appellants to the respondents.

(1) 15 C. 174; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 700.

(2) 39 Ind. Cas. 949; 1 P. L. W. 541; (1917) Pat. 250.

(3) 13 W. R. 358; 5 B. L. R. App. 15.

There will be no order as to the costs of the Munsif's Court.

Appeal allowed.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 467 OF 1917.

July 12, 1917.

Present:—Mr. Shah Din, Chief Judge.

SURJAN DAS—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

GANDA MAL AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Registration Act (XVI of 1908), s. 49—Unregistered deed of gift, admissibility of, to explain origin of possession.

In a suit for possession the lower Court held that although an unregistered deed of gift relied upon by the defendant was inadmissible in evidence for want of registration and could not, therefore, affect the subject of the gift, yet it was admissible for a collateral purpose, viz., for the purpose of proving that defendant took possession of the subject of the gift from the date of the gift and remained in adverse possession of it for more than twelve years before the date of suit. There was no reference to delivery of possession in the deed of gift:

Held, that the deed was inadmissible in evidence even for the purpose of showing that the defendant had been in adverse possession of the property from the date of the deed.

Second appeal from the decree of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Gurdaspur, dated the 18th January 1917, affirming that of the Munsif, 2nd Class, Batala, dated the 31st October 1916, dismissing the plaintiff's claim.

Lala Hargopal, for the Appellant.

Pandit Ram Bhaj Datta, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—Both the lower Courts have held that although the unregistered deed of gift, dated the 8th November 1896, which was executed by the plaintiff in favour of his brother, defendant No. 1, is inadmissible in evidence for want of registration and cannot, therefore, affect the half share of the house which was the subject of the gift, yet it is admissible for a collateral purposes, viz., for the purpose of proving that defendant No. 1 took possession of the half share of the house in question from the date of the gift and remained in adverse possession of it for more than 12 years before the date of suit. This view is clearly incorrect, as has been held in Ali Bakhsh v. Raushan (1), Jaman v. Chandiya Ram (2), Jut Mal v. Beli Ram (3) and Muthukaruppan Samban v. Muthu Samban (4).

I may note here that in the unregistered deed of gift there is no reference to delivery of possession of the portion gifted by the donor to the donee; and there is no evidence on the record that, apart from the alleged exclusive possession of defendant No. 1 by reason of the gift, his possession was that of a sole owner for a period of 12 years prior to the institution of the present suit.

I accept this appeal, set aside the judgment and decree of the Subordinate Judge and give the plaintiff a decree with costs throughout, which will be paid by defendant No. 1.

Appeal accepted.

(1) 102 P. R. 1900. P. L. R. (1900) p. 481.

(2) 18 Ind. Cas. 978; 196 P. L. R. 1913; 83 P. R. 1913; 69 P. W. R. 1913.

(3) 33 Ind. Cas. 948; 35 P. R. 1916; 52 P. W. R. 1916.

(4) 25 Ind. Cas. 772; 1 L. W. 754; 16 M. L. T. 344; (1914) M. W. N. 768; 27 M. L. J. 497; 38 M. 1158 at p. 1161.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

LETTERS PATENT APPEAL No. 76 OF 1917.

November 14, 1917.

Present:—Sir John Wallis, Kt., Chief Justice,
Mr. Justice Sadasiva Aiyar and
Mr. Justice Kumaraswami Sastri.

KEELANGOTI NARAYANA TANTRI—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

NAGAPPA AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXIII, HUKAM SINGH v. SHAHAB DIN.

r. 1—Withdrawal of suit with liberty to file fresh suit, petition for—Order, construction of—Leave granted by implication.

Where, on a petition praying for withdrawal of a suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit, the Court simply endorsed the word 'permitted':

Held, that the order should be construed as having impliedly granted leave to file a fresh suit.

Golam Mahomed v. Shibendra Pada Banerjee, 35 C. 990; 12 C. W. N. 893, followed.

Appeal, under clause 15 of the Letters Patent, against the judgment of Mr. Justice Bakewell, in Second Appeal No. 669 of 1915, preferred against the decree of the Court of the District Judge of South Kanara, in Appeal Suit No. 260 of 1914, preferred against the decree of the Court of the District Munsif of Kasargod, in Original Suit No. 437 of 1912.

FACTS.—In the course of proceedings in a suit the plaintiff applied for leave to withdraw a suit with liberty to file a fresh suit. On the petition the Court simply endorsed the word 'permitted'. Plaintiff then instituted a fresh suit, when it was objected by the defendant that it was not maintainable as no leave had been granted under Order XXIII, rule 1, Civil Procedure Code. In appeal, Seshagiri Aiyar and Bakewell, JJ., differed in the construction of the order, the former holding that the Court impliedly granted leave, and the latter being of opinion that no leave was granted.

The plaintiff preferred an appeal under section 15 of the Letters Patent.

Mr. A. Srirangachariar, for the Hon'ble Mr. T. Rangachariar, for the Appellant.

Mr. B. Sitarama Rao, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—In the original vernacular petition it is quite clear that what the petitioner asked for was the liberty to withdraw with permission to bring a fresh suit.

In these circumstances, following Golam Mahomed v. Shibendra Pada Banerjee (1), we think that the order 'plaintiff is permitted to withdraw from the suit' must be read with the petition and construed as granting it. On the other construction the order was most misleading to the petitioner and not an order contemplated by the Code.

We allow the Letters Patent Appeal with costs, set aside the decree of the District Judge and remand the appeal to the District Judge for disposal according to law. Other costs will abide the result.

Appeal allowed; Case remanded.

M.C.P.

(1) 35 C. 990; 12 C. W. N. 893.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 232 OF 1917.

July 20, 1917.

Present:—Mr. Justice Leslie Jones.

HUKAM SINGH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

SHAHAB DIN—PLAINTIFF AND RAMZAN BEG AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), ss. 3, 6—Minor, assignee of, whether can take advantage of s. 6—Limitation, plea of, not taken in lower Court—Appellate Court, duty of—Appeal on particular point—Suit, whether can be dismissed in toto*—Court-fee, payable.*

An assignee of a minor cannot avail himself of the benefit conferred upon the minor by section 6 of the Limitation Act. [p. 891, col. 1.]

The abandonment of a point of limitation in a lower Court does not relieve an Appellate Court of the duty of taking notice of the Statute. But the plea of limitation in order to be effective must be properly before the Court. [p. 891, col. 1.]

Where a defendant appeals only on a particular point and not on the whole case, the Appellate Court is precluded from taking up a point which would involve the dismissal of the suit in toto. [p. 891, cols. 1 & 2.]

Where the plea of limitation involves the dismissal of a suit in toto, the defendant must appeal on the whole case and not merely on a particular point, and must pay Court-fee on the whole claim. If he fails to pay full Court-fee within the time limited by the law, the appeal must be dismissed. [p. 891, col. 2.]

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Amritsar, dated the 4th December 1916, modifying that of the 1st Class, Munsif, Amritsar, dated the 24th May 1916, decreeing the plaintiff's claim on payment of Rs. 234.

Mr. Lal Chand Mehra, for the Appellants.

Mr. Jai Gopal Sethi, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff in this case is the assignee of a Muhammadan minor and as such claimed to recover certain property which had been sold by the minor's mother. A plea of limitation was overruled, and the plaintiff obtained a decree for possession on payment of Rs. 243, viz., Rs. 119 for benefit received in the shape of the redemption of a mortgage; and Rs. 115 for improvements. The plaintiff only appealed to the District Judge, who thought that the sum of Rs. 115 should not have been allowed to the defendants, and granted the plaintiff a decree for possession on payment of Rs. 119 only.

The defendants then filed a second appeal in this Court, the original memoranda containing two grounds only. The appeal, however, was not admitted on those grounds, which have not been argued before me, but because the admitting Judge was of the opinion that the suit was clearly barred by time, in that a suit by the minor himself would only have been in time by virtue of section 6 of the Limitation Act and the assignee could not avail himself of the benefit conferred by that section.

The defendants afterwards, and apparently as the result of the order of the admitting Judge, put in, within time, a third ground of appeal in which the point of limitation was expressly taken.

It would appear that the mere fact that the question of limitation does not appear to have been raised in the lower Appellate Court, would not of itself relieve this Court of the duty of taking it up, see Muhammad Kamil v. Musammat Imtiaz Fatima (1), where Lord MacNaghten held that abandonment of a point of limitation in the Indian Courts would not relieve their Lordships of the duty of taking notice of the Statute; and again, Hari Bhusan Mukerji v. Upendra Lal Mukerji (2), where a point of limitation tacitly abandoned in the High Court was argued before the Judicial Committee.

But the plea must be properly before the Court, and in this case it is not so, in spite of the additional ground of appeal, in that the Court-fee has been paid on the sum of Rs. 115 only and for that reason it appears to me that I am precluded from taking up a point which would involve the dismissal of the suit in toto. The appeal has been stamped with reference only to a part of the claim. No offer has been made to make up the deficiency, and seeing that the defendants did not raise the point of limitation in this Court of their own motion, I do not think that I am in any way bound to grant an extension of time for which I have not even been asked, to enable them to pay the requisite Court-fee, the payment of which is long since barred by time. Compare Kandasamy Chetty v. Annamalai Chetty (3).

Akkaraju Narayana Rao v. Akkaraju Seshamma (4) is authority for the position that when this suit ought to have been dismissed in toto as time-barred, the defendants must appeal on the whole case and not merely on a particular point, and as owing to the failure of the defendants to stamp their appeal properly I am not in a position to dismiss the whole claim, I dismiss the appeal. But in the circumstances of the case parties will bear their own costs in this Court.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 4 Ind. Cas. 457; 10 C. L. J. 297; 11 Bom. L. R. 1210; 14 C. W. N. 59; 31 A. 557; 12 M. L. J. 697; 19 O. C. 183; 36 I. A. 211 (P. C.).

(2) 24 C. 1; 23 I. A 97; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 680; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 665 (P. C.).

(3) 28 M. 67; 15 M. L. J. 402.

(4) 26 Ind. Cas. 33; 27 M. L. J. 677.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 263 OF 1917.

February 5, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Chapman and Mr. Justice Atkinson.

BANKEY BEHARI AND ANOTHER—PETITIONERS

versus

RAM BAHADUR AND OTHERS—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Court-fee—Suit to set aside decree—Plaintiff entitled only to portion of property affected by decree—Court-fee payable—Revision—High Court, power of, to interfere at interlocutory stage.

Plaintiff brought a suit to set aside a compromise decree obtained on the basis of a mortgage. He was entitled to a portion only of the property affected by the compromise decree:

Held, that Court-fee was payable on the value of the share of the plaintiff, and not on the value of the whole of the property affected by the decree. [p. 893, cols. 1 & 2.]

Where the record of a case has been sent for by the High Court and there appears on the record an obvious error, it is right and proper that the High Court should dispose of the matter even at an interlocutory stage and thus save the parties to the litigation unnecessary expenses and undue delay. [p. 892, col. 2.]

Civil revision from an order of the Subordinate Judge, Shahabad.

Messrs. Sushil Madhab Mullick and Abani Bhusan Mukherji, for the Petitioners.

Messrs. Kulwant Sahai and Tirbhuban Nath Sahay, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.

ATKINSON, J.—The plaintiff instituted the present suit against the defendants seeking to set aside a mortgage decree which had been obtained on the 2nd of August 1915. The original mortgage was made by the father and grandfather of the plaintiffs in favour of the father of the defendants. The original mortgage was for a sum of Rs. 11,261 and the mortgage decree by way of compromise was for Rs. 12,200. The plaintiffs had not been born on the date of the execution of the mortgage-bond in 1905; but they were born when the decree by way of compromise was obtained. The plaintiffs bring this suit seeking to set aside the decree of the 2nd of August 1915; and the question which arises for our determination is: what is the proper sum for Court-fees payable on the plaint in this suit. The action is not one for a mere declaration; but for a declaration coupled with certain consequential reliefs which are specifically mentioned in the plaint.

The plaintiffs contend that they are only liable to be charged Court-fees upon the value of their share of the property; and not upon the entire value of the whole property affected by the compromise decree. They contend that the value of the entire property is Rs. 2,000 and that their share is two-thirds of Rs. 2,000. The learned Subordinate Judge has held that the plaintiffs are liable to pay a Court-fee on the total amount of the compromise decree sought to be set aside, on the ground that if the decree is set aside the plaintiffs will be benefited to the extent of the total value of the decree, and that, therefore, the proper Court-fee payable by them should be assessed upon the total amount of the decree.

Mr. Kulwant Sahay who appears on behalf of the defendants has raised two points for our consideration. The first is a mere technical point by which the learned Vakil submits that this Court ought not to interfere with the order of the Judge at this stage of the proceedings in revision; that the suit has not been disposed of; and that the proper procedure under the law would have been that the plaint should in the first instance be rejected by reason of the default of payment of the Court-fees ordered by the Court; and that when the plaint was so rejected, it would be open to the plaintiffs to come to this Court in appeal from the order rejecting the plaint.

There may be a good deal to be said in favour of Mr. Kulwant Sahay's contention with regard to the regularity of procedure; but this Court has, as a matter of fact, interfered in interlocutory matters like the present on former occasions; and it appears to us that where the record of the case has been sent for by this Court and there appears on the record an obvious error, it is right and proper that this Court should dispose of the matter even at this stage of the proceedings having regard to the erroneous finding touching a question of jurisdiction by the lower Court, and thus save the parties to the litigation unnecessary expenses and undue delay.

The second point raised by Mr. Kulwant Sahay is that what is really the subject-matter in the present suit is the validity of the compromise decree and that therefore Court-fee must be paid on the full value of that decree. Mr. Mullick on the other hand urges that it is not the value of the decree which is in dispute so far as his clients are concerned, but their two-thirds share in the property in suit which is valued at or about Rs. 1,300.

We have been referred to many cases by both sides. Mr. Kulwant Sahay in support of his argument refers us to a case reported as Hurihar Prasad Singh v. Shyam Lal Singh (1). In that case the plaintiff brought a suit to set aside a decree on the ground of fraud. The property in suit was valued at Rs. 7,000 and the decree which was sought to be set aside was valued at Rs. 2,794. Harrington, J., in delivering the judgment of the Court held that inasmuch as the real value of the relief claimed was Rs. 2,794, the plaintiff was liable to pay a Court-fee upon that amount. I think that this decision must be read in conjunction with the decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council reported as Phul Kumari v. Ghansbyam Misra (2), in which their Lordships say at page 43 as follows :—"The value of the action must mean the value to the plaintiff. But the value of the property might quite well be Rs. 1,000, while the execution debt was Rs. 10,000. It is only if the execution debt is less than the value of the property that its amount affects the value of the suit." In the case decided by Harrington, J., it is clear that the value of the decree was less than the value of the property and, therefore, it was rightly held in that case that the Court-fee should be assessed upon the value of the decree. In the case before us, however, the value of the property, so far as the plaintiffs' share is concerned, is only Rs. 1,300 odd, whereas the value of the decree sought to be set aside is Rs. 12,200, and applying the principle laid down in the judgment of their Lordships of the Privy Council it seems to us that the plaintiffs are only liable to pay Court-fees assessed upon their share of the property affected by the compromise decree. Mr. Kulwant Sahay refers us to another case viz., Umatul Batul v. Nauji Kuar (3). That was a decision of Mookerjee and Holmwood, JJ., but it is apparent that in that case, as also in the case reported as Harihar Prasad Singh v. Shyam Lal Singh (1), the person seeking to have the decree set aside was substantially entitled to the entire property which would be affected if the decree was set aside. In the case before us, however, the plaintiffs are not entitled to the entire property but only to a two thirds share in it. We are of opinion, therefore, that the learned Subordinate Judge was wrong in directing that the plaintiffs were liable to pay Court-fees assessed on the total value of the decree. This view is supported by the decision reported as Ganesh Bhagat v. Sarada Prasad (4). The facts of that case are not distinguishable from the facts of the case now before us. The decree sought to be set aside was for over Rs. 22,000, but the plaintiffs' share in the property in suit was valued at Rs. 9,000 only; and their Lordships who decided that case held that the Court-fee payable must be assessed not upon Rs. 22,000 but upon Rs. 9,000. In our opinion the same principle must apply to the case before us and accordingly we direct that the order of the learned Subordinate Judge, dated the 7th of September 1917, be set aside and that the Subordinate Judge do proceed with the hearing of the case upon the plaintiffs' paying a Court-fee assessed upon the value of their two thirds share in the property in suit.

(1) 21 Ind. Cas. 404; 40 C. 615.

This application succeeds and is allowed with costs measured at two gold mohurs.

CHAPMAN, J.—I agree.

Application allowed.

(2) 7 C. L. J. 36; 35 C. 202; 35 I. A. 22; 12 C. W. N. 169; 10 Bom. L. R. 1; 17 M. L. J. 618; 2 M. L. T. 506; 14 Bur. L. R. 41; 5 A. L. J. 10.

(3) 6 C. L. J. 427; 11 C. W. N. 705.

(4) 30 Ind. Cas. 111; 42 C. 370; 19 C. W. N. 895.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 810 OF 1916.

January 26, 1917.

Present:—Mr. Justice LeRossignol.

PARTAP SINGH—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

Musammat PARTAPI AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Custom—Marriage—Evidence—Long cohabitation—Man and wife, treatment as—Presumption.

When a man and a woman have long cohabited and have been treated by their acquaintances, and have treated each other, as man and wife, such long cohabitation plus such treatment is sufficient among Jats to establish a marriage and the legitimacy of the offspring. [p. 894, col. 1.]

Where, however, the parties have not treated each other as man and wife but as master and concubine, the same legal results do not flow from cohabitation even of long date. [p. 894, col. 1.]

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Hoshiarpur, dated the 24th December 1915, reversing that of the Subordinate Judge, 2nd Class, Hoshiarpur, dated the 6th July 1915, decreeing the claim.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri, for the Appellant.

Mr. Taj Din and Pandit Bindra Ban, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The lower Appellate Court finds that Musammat Partapi is the wife of Hakim Singh. This conclusion is based on:

1. Evidence of cohabitation for several years.

2. The supposed custom that such cohabitation is sufficient to establish marriage even in the absence of any ceremony.

The custom, however, is not correctly stated; when a man and a woman have long cohabited and have been treated by their acquaintances and have treated each other as man and wife, such long cohabitation plus such treatment is sufficient, among Jats, to establish a marriage and the legitimacy of the offspring.

When, however, the parties have not treated each other as man and wife but as master and concubine, the same legal results do not flow from cohabitation even of long date. The union remains a temporary illicit union. In this case the widow Partapi now states she is the wife of Hakim Singh, but there is not a single document on the record wherein she describes herself as his wife; on the other hand, there are many documents, including one subsequent in date to the First Court's decree, in which she describes herself invariably as the widow of Mahan Singh.

Even in the criminal proceedings in 1905 Hakim Singh did not allege that Partapi was his wife, he said she had lived in his house as a wife.

If she had married Hakim Singh, the land left by her husband would have been mutated not in favour of Hakim Singh alone, but in his and his brother's name.

There is no reasonable proof that Partapi and Hakim Singh are man and wife. The District Judge then finds that the whole transaction is fictitious, but he has not discussed all the details and he has failed to consider that Hakim Singh after 1907 abandoned Partapi and went to America, where he stayed for some four years.

How was Partapi to maintain herself and her children during that period, especially, as I understand, the whole of her late husband's estate was in the hands of mortgagees? The production by Partapi of stamps purchased in her name and thumb marked by her is quite inconclusive. As Musammat Partapi is held not to have remarried, the question of necessity falls to the ground, and the only question for decision is that of consideration. If any portion of the consideration has passed, the mortgage is security for that consideration. [Cf. Allah Ditta v. Nazar Din (1).] I remand the case to the lower Appellate Court for further enquiry whether the mortgage transaction is wholly fictitious.

Return in a month.

Case remanded.

(1) 33 Ind. Cas. 474; 51 P. W. R. 1916; 53 P. R. 1916.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL APPEALS NOS. 146, 228 AND 230 OF 1916.

November 29, 1917.

Present:—Sir John Wallis, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Sadasiva Aiyar.

IN APPEAL NO. 146 OF 1916

MUNA MUHAMMAD ROWTHER AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

IN APPEAL NO. 228 OF 1916

KATHIJA BIVI AMMAL AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

IN APPEAL NO. 230 OF 1916

THADAYPALLI PERIA SUBBA ROW AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

K. R. MUTHU ALAGAPPA CHETTIAR, PANCHAYAT OF SRI NAVANEETHEESWARA SWAMI TEMPLE AT SIKKIL AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFF AND OTHERS DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Landlord and tenant—Tharam Faisal Muchilikas, execution of, before passing of Madras Estates Land Act (Mad. I of 1908), effect of—Tenants described Ulavadai Kudikani Mirasidars, effect of—Occupancy rights, claim of—Lease by trustees of temple lands—Alienation by tenants without protest by trustees, effect of—Estoppel and prescription, acquisition of permanent occupancy rights by—Burden of proof—Temple lands in Tanjore District, incidents of.

MUNA MUHAMMAD v. MUTHU ALAGAPPA CHETTIAR.

In certain Tharam Faisal Muchilikas executed by the lessees in favour of their landlords, the trustees of a temple in a village in the Tanjore District, long before the passing of Madras Act I of 1908, it was recited that the tenants agreed (1) to accept the lands from the temple for purposes of cultivation from the current Fasli, (2) that they would pay the Melvaram Tirva due to Government in cash instead of in grain, though the said Tirva was directly due by the lessor (temple) to Government, (3) that they would pay the equivalent price of the paddy grain besides the Punja cash rent due to the temple as Swamibigam (soil proprietor's dues) and that such rent would be paid as long as the occupants were in possession, (4) that they would pay additional revenue to Government for raising garden crops, (5) that when waste lands were newly cultivated, they would pay additional tirva or Swamibogam to Government and (6) that they would supply Kudimaramath labour for repairs and men for carrying the temple paraphernalia in times of fairs and festivals. The tenants described themselves as Ulavadai Kudikani tenants:

Held, (1) that the executants of such Tharam Faisal Muchilikas could not be said to possess permanent rights of occupancy; [p. 904, col. 2.]

(2) that the mere assertion by the tenants that they were Ulavadai Kudikani Mirasidars in the village could not invest them with such rights; [p. 905, col. 1.]

(3) that the onus of proving the existence of occupancy rights lay on the lessees. [p. 899, col. 1; p. 904, col. 2.]

Nature and incidents of lands held by temples in Tanjore District discussed. [p. 897, col. 1 to p. 899, col. 1.]

(Authorities reviewed.)

The mere fact of the tenants alienating the lands without protest or demur by the temple trustees will not confer on the tenants a right of permanent occupancy by estoppel or prescription. [p. 900, col. 1; p. 906, col. 1.]

Appeals against the decree of the Court of the Temporary Subordinate Judge, Tanjore, in Original Suit No. 4 of 1913.

Messrs. M. D. Devadoss and T. R. Venkatrama Sastri, for the Appellants.

The Hon'ble Mr. T. Rangachariar and Mr. G. S. Ramachandra Aiyar, for the Respondents.

These appeals and the memoranda of cross-objections filed by the respondent in Appeal No. 146 of 1916 and by the 1st respondent in Appeals Nos. 223 and 230 of 1916 coming on for hearing on the 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th November 1917 and the cases having been posted to be spoken to on the 26th November 1917, and having stood over for consideration till this day, the Court delivered the following

JUDGMENT.

WALLIS, C. J.—These are appeals from the decree of the Subordinate Judge of Tanjore in a suit brought by the plaintiff as trustee of a temple to eject the defendants from the lands in their possession in the village of Sellur, on the ground that the lands are the properties of the temple. The Subordinate Judge, after a very careful examination of the evidence, decreed the plaintiff's suit and the defendants have appealed. The case, which is one of great importance to the parties, was again very ably and elaborately argued before us for several days, and we reserved judgment. The first question for consideration is, is the village of Sellur an estate within the meaning of the Estates Land Act of 1908, as, if so, the defendants are entitled to occupancy rights under the Act and the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts in ejectment is taken away. This question is closely connected with the question whether the defendants are entitled to occupancy rights apart from the Act, because in conferring or recognizing occupancy right the Legislature, speaking generally, has so far confined itself to cases where a presumption of occupancy right had been recognized by the Courts before the passing of the Act. Curiously enough the majority of cases which came before the Courts related to lands owned by temples like this or Mutts in Tanjore. In all these cases the decision was against the existence of occupancy right except in Krishnasami Pillai v. Varadaraja Ayyangar (1) and Chockalingam Pillai v. Mayandi Chettiar (2) and the latter decision was reversed by the Privy Council in Mayandi Chettiyar v. Chokkalingam Pillay (3). In the well-known Chockalingam case [Chockalinga Pillai v. Vythealinga Pundara Sunnady (4)] certain observations of the learned Judges questioning the decision in Venkataramanier v. Ananda Chetty (5) were thought to

(1) 5 M. 345 (F. B.); 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 240.
(2) 19 M. 485; 6 M. L. J. 247; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1043.
(3) 27 M. 291; 8 C. W. N. 545; 31 I. A. 83; 14 M. L. J. 200; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 587 (P. C.).
(4) 6 M. H. C. R. 164.
(5) 5 M. H. C. R. 120.

have gone far to negative the existence of occupancy rights in permanently settled estates, but the subsequent decisions in Appa Rau v. Subbanna (6) and Venkatanarasimha Naidu v. Dandamudi Kotayya (7) and Cheekati Zamindar v. Ranasooru Dhora (8) showed that this was not so, and recognized a presumption of occupancy right in Zemindari ryots on the ground that the Zemindars were largely in the position of assignees of land revenue, that the grants in their favour did not affect the ownership of the ryots in the soil and that, even as regards ryots admitted after the sunnads granted to the Zemindari proprietors under Regulation XXV of 1802, the presumption was that they had been admitted on the same terms as other ryots in the Zemindari, that is, with occupancy rights. On the other hand in Cheekati Zamindar v. Ranasooru Dhora (8), the latest and leading case on this subject, the learned Judges, Shephard and Subramania Aiyar, JJ., recognized that the presumption is the other way in cases where the landlord claiming to eject is not a mere assignee of land revenue, but is himself the owner of the soil—following the decision of Sir Arthur Collins, C. J., and Muthusami Aiyar, J., in Chidambara Pillai v. Thiruvengadathiengar (9). The learned Judges held that "the claim for an occupancy right as overriding the proprietor's right to cultivate his own land is of a special character and as such it is one which the party seeking to derogate from the ordinary incidents of property is bound to establish. Of course the appellants are entitled to the benefit of any presumption which may reasonably arise from the length of enjoyment and other special circumstances of the case. The contention that mere length of enjoyment in the capacity of tenants or Purakudies irrespective of other circumstances is prima facie proof of occupancy right cannot be supported." Applying the principles laid down by the Courts the Legislature in the Act of 1908 has conferred occupancy rights on ryots in Zemindaris, except as to Zemindari Pannai lands which the Zemindar cultivates as his own and except as regards lands which have never been in the hands of cultivators or have been relinquished and come within the definition of "old waste." The only villages outside such large estates that come under the operation of the Act and come within the definition of estate are villages "of which the land revenue alone has been granted as Inam to a person not owning the Kudivaram thereof.....or any separated part of such village." If the Inamdar or assignee in whole or in part of the Government revenue on the village, owns the Kudivaram, that is to say, is also a land-owner in the village, the presumption against him does not arise, the Act is not made applicable to his case, and the question whether those holding under him have occupancy rights is left to be decided by the Court, the presumption being that they have not.

Now in this case it is absolutely clear, as found by the Subordinate Judge, that, as regards this village, the temple is not a mere assignee of land revenue but the owner of lands in the village. We cannot indeed tell the date at which it was founded or became so, but we know that temples in this part of India are not at all infrequently the Mirasidars or hereditary owners of the cultivable lands in the village, and there is abundant evidence that this is so in the present case. It is sufficient to refer to the Paimash register of 1829 in which the temple is described as having the Ekabogam Miras of the village, a term which is well understood as meaning the whole ownership of the Mirasi right in the village as opposed to cases of Palabogam where the ownership is divided among many. Further the parties to Exhibit E, through whom the plaintiff claims, undertake in that instrument to pay Swamibogam and Odavarams to the temple. These payments, which are in the nature of rent and fees, are payable to a Mirasidar by those holding under him and the fact that they were payable by those under whom the plaintiff claims shows that they held under the temple.

(6) 13 M. 60; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 752.
(7) 20 M. 299; 7 M. L. J. 251; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 213.
(8) 23 M. 318; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 624.
(9) 7 M. L. J. 1.

The temple is then in the position of an ordinary ryot owning his holding subject to the payment of land revenue either to Government itself or, if the holding be situated in a Zemindari, to the Zemindar as assignee of the Government demand. Now as regards such ryots, whether they pay the revenue direct to Government or its assignees, the presumption in this Presidency, as laid down in Chidambara Pillai v. Thiruvengadathiengar (9) and recognized in Cheekati Zamindar v. Ranasooru Dhora (8), is against the existence of any occupancy rights in those holding under them and it is for those who set up such a right to prove it. This is the general law of the Presidency and the proper starting point from which to approach the question, but there are also, as I have already said, a long series of decisions as to these temple villages in Tanjore which have to be considered. They all recognize and enforce the presumption just referred to, but the result of course depended in each case on the materials put before the Court.

All these temple villages in Tanjore have certain features in common. They were all managed from 1802 by the Collector on behalf of the temple until the East India Company in deference to certain religious bodies in England began to withdraw from management in the forties of last century. They were all included in the Paimash or survey of Tanjore which, in this case, took place in 1829. They were also affected by the action taken by Mr. Kindersley, Collector of Tanjore, in 1830 and the following years in substituting money payments for the system till then prevailing of paying revenue in grain. As Collector he had to collect the revenue payable by the temples, and as manager he had to collect the rents payable to them. In these circumstances he took the engagements or Muchilikas, which are a feature of all these cases except Krishnasami Pillai v. Varadaraja Ayyangar (1), by which the executants undertook to pay directly to the Collector in money not only the Government revenue payable by the temple but also the Swamibogam or rent and other dues payable to the temple as land-owner. Much depends on the proper inference to be drawn from the execution of these documents. In the first case which came before the High Court in 1863, Alagaiya Tiruchittambala v. Saminada Pillai (10), Scotland, C. J., and Holloway, J., stated that the question was whether ryots under the Mirasidar have a title to the permanent occupancy of lands subject to the payment of the Mirasdar's share, and observed that such a tenure for the most part depended on long established usage and custom which had to be proved. They were of opinion, however, that the mere existence of a Muchilika, such as had been executed by the six ryots describing themselves as Ulavadi Kanikudi defining the terms of the ryots' holding, was opposed to the existence of an occupancy right, and they held that the terms of the particular Muchilika by which the executants agreed to surrender the lands if any one offered more were absolutely inconsistent with it. In the case of Subupalayi Ammal v. Appakutti Aiyangar (11) the Muchilika seems to have been taken from a single ryot, the 1st defendant's father. The 1st defendant claimed to be a perpetual lessee under it and the Court rejected his contention on the construction of the Muchilika which is not set out. In Chockalinga's case [Chockalinga Pillai v. Vythealinga Pundara Sunnady (4)] the defendant claimed to be a permanent lessee under an Izara Muchilika granted to him by Mr. Kindersley in 1837, and on the construction of the document the Court held that it evidenced a letting from year to year unless the defendant alleged and proved an established custom of permanent occupancy. The defendant was not precluded, they held, by the terms of the Muchilika from alleging and proving such a custom but he had not done so and it could not be presumed. No Muchilika was forthcoming in Krishnasami Pillai v. Varadaraja Ayyangar (1). We have next two judgments of the Court in the same appeal, one reported as Thiagaraja v. Gnanasambantha (12) and the other as Thiagaraja v. Giyana Sambandha Pandara Sannadhi (13), where the case was re-heard. Kernan, J.'s judgment is in the same terms in both cases, but there is a concurring judgment by

(10) 1 M. H. C. R. 264.
(11) 3 M. H. C. R. 106.
(12) 7 M. 374; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 844.
(13) 11 M. 77; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 54.

Kindersley, J., in the first case and by Brandt, J., in the second. As in Chockalinga's case (4) an inference against the existence of occupancy right was raised from the existence of the Muchilika. Both these decisions were approved of by the Privy Council in Mayandi Chettiyar v. Chokkalingam Pillay (3). In Chidambara Pillai v. Thiruvengadathiengar (9) there were a series of Muchilikas beginning in 1841 in which the executants bound themselves to cultivate for fixed periods and then restore the lands. The Muchilikas also contained other indications opposed to the existence of occupancy right. The learned Judges came to the conclusion that the five persons styling themselves Purakudis who executed the first Muchilika were not improbably cultivating Purakudis, "that they were expected to cultivate together with other Purakudis in the village, that they were selected as executants of the lease probably because they were the leading men or chief Purakudis in the village for the time being, and that the distribution of the cultivable area among themselves for purposes of cultivation was left to be adjusted by them at each lease or other interval of time". I think that this is probably true of most of the other Muchilikas produced in these cases. We have next the case of Chockalingam Pillai v. Mayandi Chettiar (2), which was overruled by the Privy Council in Mayandi Chettiyar v. Chockkalingam Pillay (3). In that case the High Court reversed the judgments of the two lower Courts in second appeal. The defendants in support of their claim produced two leases granted in 1813 which entitled the grantees to hold the lands permanently for all time to come by right of "Ulavadi Kani", and in the Muchilikas subsequently executed by the defendants who claimed under these leases they were described as Ulavadai Mirasidars. The Judicial Committee in their reversing judgment appear to have been of opinion that the leases of 1813 were of questionable validity and could not be relied on. On the other hand they laid great stress on the fact that the Darkast or application pursuant to which the Muchilika was taken by the Collector described the two applicants as Purakudis of the assessed lands in the village owned by the temple, and on the facts that in it they undertook to pay the revenue for one year and asked that a Dharkast Izara for one year might be granted in their names. The inferences to be drawn from these facts were not counterbalanced in their Lordships' opinion by the fact that in the Muchilika the two executants were styled Ulavadi Miras. On the materials before them and with reference to the observations of the Subordinate Judge, their Lordships treated the words Ulavadi Miras as of doubtful signification. Having regard to the further investigation which these tenures have received especially in the judgment of Spencer, J., in Chinnan v. Kondam Naidu (14) and in the Chingleput Mirasi case, Seshachala Chetty v. Para Chinnasami (15), I have no doubt that the word Miras in this part of India implies some sort of hereditary right. All that their Lordships said about it came to this, that on the materials before them it was of doubtful signification, and that therefore the decision could not be rested on it. After referring with approval to the decisions in Chockalinga Pillai v. Vythealinga Pundara Sunnady (4) and Thiagaraja v. Giyana Sambandha Pandara Sannadhi (13) and distinguishing Krishnasami Pillai v. Varadaraja Ayyangar (1), their Lordships finally observed that the question must be decided on the contract sanctioned by the Collector, that is to say, the Muchilika. In the next case, Mahomed Meera v. Ramalingam (16), which came before Munro and Sankaran Nair, JJ., the learned Judges held it sufficient to say that appellants had not proved that they had permanent occupancy rights in the village, and that it was not necessary to say that none of the tenants had it. As regards that particular village the question was again most elaborately considered by my learned brother sitting with Napier, J., in Naina Pillai v. Ramanathan Chettiar (17) and the same conclusion was come to.

The result is that in all these Tanjore temple villages which have come before the Court except one, occupancy right

(14) 23 Ind. Cas. 113; 26 M. L. J. 169 at p. 177; 1 L. W. 41.

(15) 40 Ind. Cas. 909; 40 M. 410; 32 M. L. J. Sup. 1.

(16) 8 Ind. Cas. 158; (1911) 1 M. W. N. 84; 8 M. L. T. 430.

(17) 41 Ind. Cas. 788; 33 M. L. J. 84.

has been held not to exist, and in that case no Muchilika taken by the Collector after 1830 was put in evidence. The onus is, therefore, very strongly on the defendants to make out their case. The evidence has been so very fully analysed by the Subordinate Judge and now by my learned brother that it is unnecessary for me to say more than that I agree generally with their conclusions. I think it would be altogether unsafe to act on the cadjan documents prior to 1830 produced on either side. Those produced by the plaintiff were put in at a very late stage of the case, and there is very little evidence as to how those produced for the defendants came to be preserved in the family of one of the former tenants who had long since parted with the bulk of his holding. Even assuming that they came from proper custody, the facilities for procuring such documents even bearing what purport to be Government stamps are unfortunately great. On the other hand, the undoubtedly authentic documents before 1829, which my learned brother has summarised, strongly support the plaintiff's case that there was no occupancy right. The strongest evidence in favour of the defendants is to be found in the Paimash register of 1829, Exhibit XI (b), in which the Nelkuthagai Miras is said to be Ekabogam or vested in one person, and the Ulavadai Kani Miras, or hereditary right to plough is said to be Palabogam or vested in several, and a number of persons are given as cultivating under this right. The temple itself is shown as cultivating 7 Velis and also 5 Velis which it is said to hold on mortgage from Appasami Appa, who is also shown as the mortgagor of Nayana Naick who is described as in the possession of 2 Velis. So far this is in favour of the defendants, but as my learned brother has pointed out, this is followed by a statement that no Melvaram as such is shown in the accounts and that the custom is to give Purakudivaram and enter it in the temple accounts. Thus the temple is treated as itself cultivating all these lands, and the occupants are shown as receiving as Purakudivaram, or cultivator's share, certain percentages, 40 or 30 per cent. of the outturn. On the whole it would seem as if some of the cultivators had induced the inferior officers who drew up the Paimash to insert entries indicated to serve at some future date as evidence of their claims to occupancy right. This would not be the only time such a thing has happened, and I agree that too much weight must not be given to these entries, inconsistent as they are with other entries in the Paimash itself and with the evidence as to periods immediately preceding and following. Much reliance is placed for the defendants on Exhibits XLVI and XLVI (a), which purport to be a mortgage in 1811 in favour of the temple and a receipt for the mortgage money by Ramasamia Pillai whose brother-in-law Sivaji was, it is suggested by the documents referred to by the Subordinate Judge, the father of Appasami Appa. I am willing to assume that these documents were produced in a Small Cause Suit in 1881 and that they bear the initials of the Subordinate Judge. What the suit was about is not in evidence, but Mr. T. R. Venkatrama Sastri suggests, and has asked leave to show, that it was a rent suit in which the amount of rent payable to the temple was in issue. They were not exhibited in that case and there was no finding as to their genuineness. At that time not only was there this dispute, but the question of occupancy right in these Tanjore temple villages was much before the Courts from 1863 onwards, and it is quite possible that these documents may have been prepared to meet a suit by the temple. There is a suspicious circumstance about them both, that the stamp-vendor's endorsement has been covered up in both cases in exactly the same manner so as to prevent us from ascertaining the year of issue which the plaintiff suggests is 1813, the date given in the copies put in evidence by the plaintiff Exhibits PPP and QQQ. It is remarkable, as the Subordinate Judge has pointed out, that Appasami Appa did not insist when the Muchilika Exhibit E was executed in 1831 on the ownership of these two extensive blocks of land in the village. The contents are not convincing to my mind. It is not stated by whom the money was advanced on behalf of the temple, and as the temple was then in the management of the Collector a transaction of this kind does not seem very probable, and I doubt if the documents represent any real transaction. On the whole, I do not think it would be safe to act on these two documents as affecting the plaintiff's title. In the Muchilika Exhibit E given to the Collector in 1831 the first of the executants is called a Purakudi and the next is styled Ulavadi Kani Miras. They undertake to pay as long as the lands are in their possession, and agree that their properties may be attached and sold for arrears. Nothing is said of realising the arrears by sale of their interest in the land itself. Exhibits F (19) and F (12) and Exhibits XIII series show that the Collector's system was to take security bonds from them for the lands actually in their cultivation. These lands do not correspond with the lands which were described as being in their possession in the Paimash register Exhibit XI (b). In another of these cases there was put in evidence a Karar or preliminary agreement by which the executants agreed among themselves as to the areas they should cultivate individually if they succeeded in getting the Collector to take the Muchilika from them. Possibly there was some arrangement of the kind in the present case.

On the whole I do not think there is sufficient evidence in the present case to rebut the inference against occupancy right which, according to so many decisions, arises from the execution of the Muchilika, Exhibit E, by the persons through whom the present defendants admittedly claim. If the defendants' predecessors had not occupancy rights in 1831, I do not think they can have acquired them since by reason of the fact that the trustees have raised no objection of late years to the transfer of the holdings by sale and mortgage. In Mayandi Chettiyar v. Chokkalingam Pillay (3) the Judicial Committee question the right of temple trustees to confer permanent rights of occupancy by express grant, and I think they can still less be held to have done so by implication. It is of course very unfortunate that the temple authorities should have thought it necessary to enforce the claims of the temple by seeking to eject all the tenants in the village but this is not a matter which can affect our decision.

I agree with the orders proposed by my learned brother as regards all these cases.

SADASIVA AIYAR, J.—These three appeals have arisen out of the same suit, Original Suit No. 4 of 1913 on the file of the Temporary Subordinate Judge's Court of Tanjore. The appellants are the important defendants in the suit. In Appeal No. 228 of 1916, which is the principal of the three appeals, the 43rd defendant is the 1st appellant. There are four other appellants in that appeal, namely, defendants Nos. 44, 137, 138 and 139 in the suit, but their only ground of appeal is that they should have been exonerated from all liability to the plaintiff as from the beginning they repudiated all interest in or possession of any of the properties in dispute. The plaintiff who brought the suit in April 1910 in the Nagapatam Sub-Court (from which Court it was transferred to the Temporary Subordinate Judge's Court of Tanjore) is the trustee of the famous and ancient Sri Navaneetha Ishwaraswami temple situated in the village of Sikkil near Negapatam. The temple owns lands in several villages. This suit was brought for recovery of lands, house sites and houses situated in the village of Sellur, the defendants being alleged to be tenants from year to year who refused to vacate their holdings after proper notices to quit had been given.

One hundred and fifty-seven defendants were impleaded at first and with the legal representatives of defendants who died during the pendency of the suit, the last number of the defendants became 176.

The most important question in this suit is whether the tenants have got occupancy rights in the cultivable lands in the village in their respective holdings. The other minor questions need not be referred to at present, as a detailing of them will unnecessarily distract the attention from the main issue and the conclusions in respect of several of them depend upon the decision on the main issue.

The principal question is covered by the first three issues framed in the suit which are as follows:

"1. Is the plaint temple the absolute proprietor of the entire village of Sellur?"

"2. Are the defendants tenants from year to year and is the plaintiff entitled to eject them?"

"3. Are all or any of the defendants entitled to a right of permanent occupancy by prescription or otherwise?"

The temple's right to and in the whole village of Sellur had its origin in such remote times that no grant or title-deed is forthcoming. The earliest document Exhibit, ZZ, in March of the year 1805 contains accounts showing that the temple harvested the produce of the lands in the village, allowed the temporary cultivators (called Purakudis) the Waram due for their labour at varying rates for the lands in the southern half and in the northern half of the village and retained the balance. (The word 'Kudivaram' means strictly the share given to or retained by the actual cultivator or 'Kudi'. The right of permanent occupancy, if it belongs to the 'Kudi' is sometimes known in the Zemindari and Inam tracts as 'Kudivaram right', but the mere receipt of Kudivaram by a tenant does not of course show he has the "Kudivaram right" in the larger sense, that is, that he has permanent occupancy right in the lands in his holding. Sometimes the Kudivaram right is shortly spoken of as "Kudivaram" and this occasionally leads to confusion). The next documents to be considered in order of date are Exhibits XLVI, XLVI (a), PP, and QQ. The plaintiff disputes the genuineness of Exhibits XLVI and XLVI (a) purporting to be dated in 1811. In the copy (Exhibit QQQ) of Exhibit XLVI (a) supplied by the 40th defendant himself (who is the defendants' 9th witness) the stamp-vendor's endorsement states that the stamp-paper was purchased in 1813, that is, two years after the date of the document. The defendants, when producing Exhibits XLVI and XLVI (a) into Court, have produced them in such a condition that the last figure relating to the year of the purchase of stamp-paper in both the documents is obliterated and both the papers have been torn at the top in such a manner that the tear proceeds just up to the obliterated figure. The learned Subordinate Judge has considered the question of the genuineness of the documents in paragraph 91 of his judgment. It may be that one of the several reasons he gives for deciding against their genuineness, namely, that relating to custody is rather weak, but the other reasons given by him for his conclusion appear to be sound and I do not see my way to differ from his said conclusion Even if Exhibits XLVI and XLVI (a) are genuine, they merely show that the temple trustee in 1811 accepted a usufructuary mortgage of a tenancy right vesting in one of the tenants of the temple, namely, Ramaswamia Pillai son of Muthia Pillai.

I might here at once state that several cadjan documents have been filed on both sides which I consider very unsafe to rely upon whether they are stamped or unstamped. Even stamped cadjans are easily manufactured, with endorsements of imaginary stamp-vendors showing the purpose why the stamp was required. The Subordinate Judge relies on cadjans Exhibits L series, M to M4, N and O (all except O dated before 1831 which is an important date in this case) ranging from 1785, as supporting the plaintiff's case. But I am not inclined to attach any weight to these documents. So also, the defendants rely on Exhibit LV (e), a cadjan document of 1826 which is probably spurious and even if genuine is not of much value. There are a few documents like Exhibits XII, F (4) to F (11), F (15) to F (18) which do not relate to the plaint village and which are, therefore, irrelevant.

We now come to the undisputed important Paimash account of 1816 which has not been marked as one single exhibit, but portions of which have been marked in a confusing manner as Exhibits H, HI, XI and XI (a). This Paimash account almost conclusively shows that the plaint temple was in 1816 (and had been before that) the sole proprietor of the actual soil of all the lands in the village of Sellur. The temple was paying Nelkuthagai (paddy revenue) to the Government and the village in question was known as the Nelkuthagai village belonging to the Sikkil Navaneetha Iswarasawmi temple. The lands, house-sites and every bit of soil in the village are mentioned as belonging to the big temple with its two sub-temples of Kailasanathaswami and Ananthanarayana Perumal, to which two sub-temples small areas had been given by the bigger temple as Sarvamaniyam. The whole area of the village is stated to be in the enjoyment of these "three individuals", that is, the three temples.

The only "Mirasi" right recognised in any others is in 7 dwellings of tenants, other tenants' houses being 38 in number and occupied by Purakudis (7), Kasavargam holders (service tenure) (10) and Adimais (slaves or serfs) (21). Then we come to another set of undisputedly genuine documents marked Exhibits F, F1, F4, F5, F13 and F14. The earliest of them is dated 30th October 1820 and the latest is dated in January 1825. It is well-known that these and other famous temples in Tanjore were managed by the Collector on behalf of Government for about half a century from about the beginning of the 19th century. The Collectors found that it was very difficult to make the cultivators (mostly fugitive) to properly cultivate the lands. So in 1820, the then Collector of Tanjore thought it best in the interest of the temples to obtain proposals from intending lessees for short periods of one to five years and to let the whole cultivable area in each temple village to that intending lessee who offers the highest rent (paddy for Nanja lands and cash for Punja lands), it being the successful offerer's look-out to bring cultivators upon the lands and to bring as much extent as he could under cultivation. Such leases are known as "proposal" leases. Exhibits F (1) and F (13) relate to the Izara Muchilika executed by one Chockalingam Pillai taking up the lands in this plaint (Sellur) village and another temple village (Abhishekakattalai) under the Collector from 1st July 1820 to 30th June 1823, that is for three years. Exhibit F (1) clearly shows that the actual cultivators were only Purakudis, that is, cultivators who had no definite term of incumbency and were entitled only to Purakudiwaram to be paid by the lessee out of the gross produce, that the lands themselves were let and that the Mirasi or occupation right in the lands belonged to the temple, the paddy revenue due to Government being the real Melvaram. The Mirasidar, when he cultivated through either his Pannai or Adimai (slave or serf) cultivators, takes the whole produce minus the Government paddy revenue, paying wages to his Pannaiyals and serfs. If he leases them to several Purakudies or to the proposal-lessee, what he gets from the lessee may be loosely called "Melvaram", the proposal-lessee taking the Kudivaram. In the case of the proposal-lessee again as between himself and the Purakudies, what he retains will be again "Melvaram" and what the Purakudis are given will be the "Kudivaram." But as I said, such loose language leads to confusion and in the old documents, "Melvaram" is used usually for the Government paddy revenue and Purakudivaram is used for the Purakudi cultivators' share given to them out of harvested produce, what the temple Mirasidar obtains being known as Swamibhogam (a very important term) to which Thunduvaram is attached in some cases.

The next document is Exhibit F (4). This is one of the proposals or offers made for the plaint Sellur village and the other Abhishekakattalai village in September 1823 by one of the intending proposal-lessees. This is for only one year. This proposer's proposal seems to have been accepted also for the three succeeding Faslis 1234 to 1236, that is, July 1824 to June 1827 (see Exhibit F), because he agreed to pay 3,850 Kalams of paddy rent per year instead of 3,750 Kalams which prevailed in the preceding 4 years. These documents, which had effect between 1820 and 1827 for 7 years, clearly establish the temple's proprietary Kudivaram right in the village lands and the fact that its lessees were changed even during this short period. See also Exhibit YY (1) account of the receipts and disbursements of the temple in the last year of the proposal-lease period. Then the lands were again taken up by the temple under Amani system and Exhibit N is the account of the year 1827-28. This account shows that the entire gross produce was harvested by the temple, Purakudivaram being paid out of it to the actual cultivators under the temple. (There are several mistakes in the translation of documents in this case, for instance, in this Exhibit N, instead of describing the Sellur and other villages as villages paying paddy revenue to Government, they are described as villages for "paddies leased out" which is unmeaning).

We now come to an important document of 1828-29, which is the Paimash Chitta of the Sellur village prepared in that year. This document again, like the Paimash of 1816, has been exhibited not as one document, but as several documents, namely, H(2), WWW series (5 in number), XI (6), XLVIII series (10 in number), LXXXIV and LXXVII. This Paimash account was laboriously prepared, though not by the higher grade Revenue Officers. Such an account, it is well known, while fairly reliable as regards the numbers, extents and character of the lands as mentioned in it and as regards broad statements as to rights, is also found to contain statements based on the allegations of interested and ignorant residents of the village, and such statements are of very little value especially when there has been no subsequent revision or check by an officer of one of the higher revenue grades. (See observations in the judgment in a similar case of Naina Pillai v. Ramanathan Chettiar (17) found at page 96*.) There are even statements of a somewhat (what I may call) absurd character found in such preliminary Paimash accounts. In the present case for instance, while Exhibits H2, WWW and in fact every portion of this Paimash Chitta account of 1829 acknowledges the temple to be the sole Ekabhogam Mirasidar entitled to the full occupancy and cultivation right in the whole of the village lands, we find in Exhibit XI(b) (see page 438 of the printed documents papers) that 11 persons are described as Ulavadai Kani Mirasi tenants (under the Ekabhogam Mirasidar) of the village Nanjah lands and one of these 11 persons is stated to be the temple itself, that is, the temple is a tenant of land under itself, which is absurd. Again the very next sentence in this Exhibit IX (b) is inconsistent with any Kudivaram or occupancy right in all but the temple, because it says that the custom in the village is that only Purakudivaram is entered in the Devasthanam accounts as given to tenants and that, because the Government gets its revenue in paddy, there is no Mirasivaram in the village. This sentence clearly means that the Mirasidar temple takes the whole produce under its Kudivaram or direct cultivation right and gives out of it to the Urakudi tenants the share due to them for the labour of cultivation.

Guarding ourselves then from giving too much weight to the inconsistent and contradictory statements sometimes found here and there in this Paimash account of 1829 (it seems not to have been checked by any higher Revenue Officer), the statements in this Paimash account clearly indicate that the Kudivaram right belonged to the temple alone as Ekabhogam Mirasidar.

Then we come to the last set of the really important documents in this case, namely, Exhibits E, F19, F20, XIII series, F2 and and F3. We have seen that the proposal-leases came to an end in 1828 and that the village lands were again harvested by the temple Manager, the Collector, on the Amani system. The then Collector, Mr. Kindersley, in the year 1830 desired to substitute money payments on what was known as a "permanent commutation" rate, that is, commutation as regards the value of the paddy revenue payable by the temples. (The word 'permanent' in some of these documents denotes only the permanency of the commutation rate at which the paddy grain due to the Government as Melvaram revenue was permanently settled. See at the end of Exhibit E, where the temple lessees consent to the following provisions: "As for the Nanjah Melvaram in respect of the said village, we shall pay Theervai according to the price permanently settled at 3 9/16 Pons per Kalam. Whether the price becomes more or less than that price, the profits or loss must go to us and not to the Government.") Mr. Kindersley also dropped the original Pannai, Purakudi and Adimai cultivation systems and the intermediate "proposal" system and let the entire cultivable lands in each temple village on what has become familiar as the "Tharam Faisal Muchilika" system to one or more lessees, such lessees (where there were several) being usually the prominent, influential and representative persons among the numerous cultivators in the village. Many of these Tharam Faisal Muchilikas have come in several cases before this Court. The important and operative clauses in them have always been substantially the same. The applications to the Collector by the intending lessees in respect of these Tharam Faisal Muchilikas have slightly differed in language, some of the applicants describing themselves as Purakudis alone, some as Kudimiras, some as Purakudimiras, some as Ulavadai Purakudimiras and some (as in this case) Ulavadai Kudikani Miras. Some applications mentioned only one Fasli, and others mentioned indefinite periods and so on, but the Muchilikas in which the applications culminated, and which were finally accepted by the Collector and were executed by the lessees, contained almost the same terms. In this plaint village of Sellur, the Tharam Faisal Muchilika executed to the Collector is Exhibit E. It was executed on 6th February 1831 by seven persons, two of them Brahmins (including a Brahmin lady), three of them Pillais and two of some other caste. In the body of the document, the male Brahmin executant describes himself as Purakudi Samu Iyer. One other executant describes himself as Ulavadai Kanimiras Arunachellam Pillai. Another executant Suppa Pillai signs at the end as Purakudi Suppa Pillai. But all of them jointly execute Exhibit E, agreeing to be jointly liable under it in identical terms. The document begins by describing the Nanjah and Punjah lands which these have jointly agreed to accept from the temple for the purpose of cultivation from the current Fasli. They agree to pay the Melvaram Theerva due to the Government (the Collector, who obtained Exhibit E, being both the Government agent and the temple Manager) in cash instead of grain, though the said Theerva was directly due by the lessor (the temple) to the Government. They further agree to pay the equivalent price of the paddy grain besides the Punjah cash rent due to the temple as Swamibhogam (soil proprietor's dues, see Wilson's Glossary). Then, they say that they will pay the rents as agreed upon as long as the lands are in their possession. There are also provisions for paying additional revenue to Government when garden crops such as betel, tobacco, plantain, onions, garlic, etc., are cultivated, besides an additional Thunduvaram (of the same nature as Swamibhogam or soil proprietor's share) to the temple. Provision is again made when waste lands are cultivated newly for paying additional Theerva and Swamibhogam to the Government and the temple respectively. They are also to supply Kudimaramath labour for repairs, etc., besides men for carrying the temple paraphernalia in times of festivals and so on.

*Page of 33 M. L. J.—Ed.

As I pointed out, none of the executants of the Muchilika claims a higher right in any portion of the lands than any of the other executants. I have dealt in my judgment in Naina Pillai v. Ramanathan Chettiar (17), the Mangal case, with the uniform interpretation which has been placed upon these Tharam Faisal Muchilikas by this High Court from Chockalinga Pilla[1] v. Vythealinga Pundara Sunnady (4), namely, that the lessees who execute those Muchilikas and agree to cultivate lands under them do so on a terminable tenure and cannot claim a permanent right of occupancy. It is contended that the executants could not be held to have agreed to relinquish their then existing permanent right of occupancy by executing this Muchilika, assuming that they had such a permanent right on the date of its execution. I shall shortly state three considerations which refute this argument:

Firstly, the burden of proving that on the date of this Muchilika of 1831 the executants had a permanent right of occupancy lies very heavily on them and on those claiming under them. (The contesting defendants have clearly admitted in this case that they claimed only under the executants of these Muchilikas.) It is not contended that in all the lands of the village taken together, the executants had a joint permanent occupancy right. That the temple was cultivating at least about one-third of the lands through Panai Purakudies then is admitted, the Paimash of 1829, as I said already, making the statement that as regards those lands the temple was its own Ulavadaikudikani tenant. It is also admitted that these Brahmins and Pillais (who executed Exhibit E) and numerous other tenants cultivated distinct plots in the village separately and not jointly. The permanent occupancy right was in fact claimed only for those who are described in the Paimash of 1829 as Ulavadai Kudikani Mirasidars and not for the numerous persons described as Purakudis, etc. Mr. T. R. Venkatrama Sastri for the 43rd defendant even argued strenuously that the occupancy right could not be claimed for the lands in the Vadapathi (northern half) portion of the village lands but only for the lands in the Thenpathi (southern half) portion in the holding of his client, the two halves being separated by a common irrigation channel. That the descriptions given of themselves by these tenants are of little value has been held in almost all the cases. Mere assertion by a tenant, especially where his landlord is a temple whose trustee cannot give an occupancy right without breach of trust, would not derogate from the plain rights of the temple

See Satya Sri Ghoshal v. Kartik Chandra Das (18) and Maharanee Shibessouree Debia v. Mothooranath Acharjo (19). In Chidambara Pillai v. Thiruvengadathiengar (9) followed in this respect even in Cheekati Zamindar v. Ranasooru Dhora (8), the presumption against the existence of occupancy rights in a tenant, holding under a person who himself owns the Kudivaram proprietary right in the soil, is stated to be a strong presumption. In the present case, except the vague description of some cultivating tenants in the Paimash of 1829 as Ulavadai Kudikani Mirasidars and the fact recorded in that Paimash account that some lands in the possession of one of these tenants were mortgaged to the temple and to another person (even assuming such statements to be true and even assuming that the mortgage was in 1811 under Exhibit XLVI), there is no other evidence to support the contention that in 1831, any cultivable lands, much less all the cultivable lands in the village, were held under permanent occupancy right, whereas the overwhelming probabilities are against the validity of that contention.

In the second place, I think, considering the influence of the old East India Company's Collectors and even of the Subordinate Revenue Officers, the executants of the Muchilika Exhibit E who represented all the cultivating tenants, must be deemed to have agreed thereafter not to claim any larger interest (assuming that they had any such plausible claims before that) when they accepted the lands for cultivation under the terms, of Exhibit E, than was expressly reserved to them thereunder. It seems difficult to hold that persons intending to claim varying rights (some superior and some inferior, the superior rights again to be attached to some only of the lands and the inferior rights to other lands) would jointly execute the same Muchilika clubbing all the cultivable lands together and agreeing to hold them on the same terms (with further provisions for cultivating additional lands not then held by any of them and so on) unless, as decided in some of the cases on similar facts, they intended that the newly created lease-hold rights under the Tharam Faisal Muchilika should supersede the vague and varying old rights, if any. The permanent right, alleged to have already existed, is again claimed not under any perpetual lease granted with reference to any specific area, but because the tenants were Ulavadai Kudikani Mirasidars of the entire village lands. The arguments at page 9 of the case Chidambara Pillai v. Thiruvengadathiengar (9) on this point are very instructive. "Further, the provisions which the several leases contain with reference to the cultivation of Poramboke, the protection of trees and the appropriation of trees seem to indicate that this Kudikani right, if any, did not extend to other than land under actual cultivation and this is not ordinarily the case where ryots have Kudikani right to the village as contra-distinguished from a perpetual lease granted with reference to a specific area. It is not the appellants' case that they or their ancestors had a perpetual lease from the temple." In Thiagaraja v. Giyana Sambandha Pandara Sannadhi (13), Kernan, J., says at page 79 "It is contended that long possession is evidence of right of occupancy. But when the right of possession or right to continue in possession is proved, as in this case, to have arisen under a written instrument which does not provide for right of permanent occupancy, then the right to possession must prima facie follow the terms of the instrument in the absence of any subsequent agreement." In that case, the defendants had been in possession since, at all events, 1827 (see page 78), that is, before the date of the Muchilika of 1830 which gave them the right to continue in possession under certain definite terms. The learned Judge, as I said above, held that the right to so continue must be governed by the terms of the Tharam Faisal Muchilika and not by any prior circumstance. Even when there was a regular perpetual lease granted to a tenant in 1820, it was held by the first two Courts in the case decided in Myyandi Chettiyar v. Chokkalingam Pillay (3) that by applying for a fresh grant and executing a Tharam Faisal Muchilika in 1832 "the tenant had either given up or had lost all his right to the perpetual lease granted to him by the temple authorities and that all he and his successors have to depend upon is the fresh contract made with the Collector in 1832 under which no permanent right of occupancy was conferred." This conclusion was approved of by their Lordships of the Privy Council.

(18) 13 Ind. Cas. 596; 15 C. L. J. 227; 16 C. W. N. 418.

(19) 13 M. I. A. 270; 13 W. R. P. C. 18; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 300; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 528; 20 E. R. 552.

Thirdly, the areas of the holdings after the date of this Tharam Faisal Muchilika, Exhibit E of 1831, do not correspond to the areas mentioned in the Paimash of 1829, Exhibit XI (b). In Exhibit XI (b) for instance Appasami Appa is alleged to be the tenant of 2 Velis plus 7 Velis 5 Mahs, total $9\frac{1}{4}$ Velis. But he is content to hold after the date of Exhibit E 2 Velis 2 Mahs and 65 Gulis (see Exhibit F20) and is described in Exhibit F20 as a mere Purakudi while in the Paimash account he is one of the eleven Ulavadai Kudikani Mirasidars. The learned Subordinate Judge has also shown how the descriptions as regards both the lands and the tenants mentioned in the Paimash of 1829 are full of inconsistencies and contradictions, adopting the statement prepared by the plaintiff's Vakil in the lower Court from the records (See Paragraph 104 of the Subordinate Judge's judgment and the statement marked A appended to that judgment.)

Another contention was that the conduct of the temple trustees, in standing by when the tenants were alienating by sale and mortgage and subdividing their holdings, conferred a right of permanent occupancy on the tenants by estoppel or by prescription. I have nothing to add to what I said to a similar contention in the case of Naina Pillai v. Ramanathan Chettiar (17) and I must, therefore, reject the contention. As Muthusawmi Aiyar, J., said in the case of Chidambara Pillai v. Thiruvengadathiengar (9): "seeing that the officers of Government had managed the temple villages for many years prior to 1857, it is not improbable that the consideration shown by them to Purakudies, as an incident of good management and the length of time for which the Purakudies cultivated, inspired them with a belief that they were not liable to be ejected as long as they were punctual in the payment of rent. This may account for sales and mortgages by the appellants and their predecessors accompanied with an assertion of Kudikani right, which may loosely be used to indicate a permanent tenure of some kind or other. It may be that the trustees took no notice of what the Purakudis did, as they undertook (with the Collector) not to interfere with their occupation so long as they regularly paid rent." I shall, therefore, not refer in detail to the numerous documents on the defendants' side subsequent to 1831 ranging from 1838 (see Exhibit LXXXVII) to January 1910 (see Exhibit IV, dated about 3 months before suit), indicating voluntary and involuntary alienations of the holdings and the recognition of the alienees as tenants by the temple.

In the result, I agree with the conclusions of the Subordinate Judge on the principal three issues. The Appeal No. 228 of 1916 therefore substantially fails except in two particulars, (1) the defendants Nos. 44, 137 138 and 139 will be exonerated from the plaintiff's claim as they disclaimed all interest in the lands, and (2) the mesne profits awarded would be separately assessed against the 43rd defendant as regards the lands in his possession. In other respects, the appeal is dismissed, the 43rd defendant paying proportionate costs to the plaintiff in both Courts on the value of the relief decreed against him.

APPEAL No. 146 OF 1916.—The appellants here are the defendants Nos. 45, 136, 160 to 163 and 166 to 171. Their contentions are the same as those of the 43rd defendant. The decree against them will be confirmed with costs except to this extent, that they will be made separately liable for the mesne profits of the lands in their respective possession. I might add that several pleas as to want of proper notice to quit, undervaluation of the plaint, excessive mesne profits and so on were not argued or pressed before us by the appellants.

APPEAL No. 230 OF 1916.—The appellants here are several other defendants including the 11th defendant. The appeal, so far as it relates to the contentions of the appellants other than the 11th defendant, must be dismissed with costs for reasons similar to those governing the decision in Appeal No. 228 of 1916. As regards the 11th defendant, however, he holds plots Nos. 6 and 8 in the plaint 3rd Schedule as the trustee of a charity called the Ariya Pillai Thiruvasal charity. The evidence clearly shows that the charity (more than a hundred years old) is being conducted by the 11th defendant. (See his evidence as defendants' witness No. 2.) The temple has no right to resume the charity lands from the Thiruvasal trustee and has not proved any such right, the said charity being mentioned in the earliest documents on the plaintiff's side itself. The appeal is allowed as regards plots Nos. 6 and 8 of the plaint 3rd Schedule with proportionate costs in both Courts. The 11th defendant, however, must pay proportionate costs in the appeal to the plaintiff so far as the appeal relates to other lands claimed by him in his own right. The mesne profits will be decreed separately against the respective defendants in this appeal also.

Lastly, there are the memoranda of cross-objections filed by the plaintiff as regards the house-sites and houses in the possession of the defendants. These properties are clearly not included in the Tharam Faisal Muchilika, Exhibit E, and the plaintiff has not shown any title to eject the defendants from the house-sites and houses. The other contentions except interest on mesne profits in the memoranda of cross-objections are not pressed. The memoranda are, therefore, dismissed with costs except as regards interest on mesne profits which will be allowed at 6 per cent. per annum from date of plaint.

Appeals, allowed in part.

M. C. P.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 810 OF 1916.

November 20, 1917.

Present:—Mr. Justice LeRossignol.

PARTAP SINGH—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

Musammat PARTAPI AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Remand—Further inquiry by lower Appellate Court, order for—Lower Appellate Court, whether can remand case to first Court for further inquiry—Procedure.

A case was remanded to the lower Appellate Court for further inquiry. On the return of the case a preliminary objection was taken by the respondent that the further inquiry should have been made by the lower Appellate Court itself and that it had no authority to remand the case to the first Court for the recording of further evidence but should have itself recorded any further evidence it deemed necessary:

Held, that it was not the intention of the Chief Court, when issuing the remand order, that the lower Appellate Court should be precluded from directing the first Court to record any additional evidence, if necessary.

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Hoshiarpur, dated the 24th December 1915, reversing that of the Subordinate Judge, Second Class, Hoshiarpur, dated the 6th July 1915, decreeing the claim.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri, for the Appellant.

Mr. Bindra Ban, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—By my remand order of 25th January 1917, I held that the re-marriage of Musammat Partapi with Hakam Singh was not proved and that consequently so long as Musammat Partapi remained in possession of the land, the only question between her and the mortgagee, since no collateral could intervene during her lifetime or widowhood, was whether the mortgage on which plaintiff sues was fictitious, and I remanded the case for further inquiry on this point to the lower Appellate Court.

A preliminary objection is now taken by the respondent that the further inquiry should have been made by the lower Appellate Court itself and that it had no authority to remand the case to the first Court for the recording of further evidence but should have itself recorded any further evidence it deemed necessary, and Lahore Bank, Ltd. v. Lakhi Ram (1) is cited.

The objection is highly technical and it was certainly not the intention of this Court, when issuing the remand order, that the District Judge should be precluded from directing the first Court to record any additional evidence if necessary. If then I remanded the case afresh, the course now suggested by the respondent, I should direct that to be done which has been done, which would be an absurdity.

[Note—The remaining portion of the judgment is not necessary for this report.—Ed.]

(1) 19 Ind. Cas. 970; 105 P. R. 1913; 242 P. L. R. 1913; 144 P. W. R. 1913.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 161 OF 1915.

December 4, 1917.

Present:—Mr. Justice Heaton and Mr. Justice Shah.

BAPUJI RAMCHANDRA KULKARNI—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

GUJA MHADU DHANGAR—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

*Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 11, 47—Mortgage—Redemption, suit for, decided on merits—Second suit for redemption, whether maintainable—*Res judicata.

In a suit for redemption of a mortgage a decree was passed under the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act directing delivery of possession of the mortgaged property to the mortgagor and ordering the latter to pay off the mortgage debt by instalments. Neither party executed the decree and possession of the property remained with the mortgagee. The mortgagor then mortgaged the property to the present plaintiff, who brought a suit to enforce the mortgage against the mortgagor and the prior mortgagee:

Held, (1) that the suit was practically one for redemption of the first mortgage and could be maintained only if it could be shown that the mortgagor could have maintained a second suit for redemption; [p. 909, col. 2.]

(2) that the first suit having been heard and decided on the merits in respect of the same matter, a second suit for redemption was not maintainable having regard to the provisions of section 11 of the Civil Procedure Code; [p. 909, col. 2.]

(3) that if the suit was to be treated as based on the previous decree, it was barred by section 47 of the Civil Procedure Code. [p. 909, col. 2.]

Second appeal against the decision of the First Class Subordinate Judge, Ahmednagar, in Appeal No. 200 of 1913, confirming the decree passed by the Second Class Subordinate Judge, Rahuri, in Civil Suit No. 124 of 1912.

Mr. N. V. Gokhale, for the Appellant.

Mr. P. V. Kane, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

SHAH, J.—The facts, which have given rise to this second appeal, are briefly these: One Dhondibai on behalf of her minor sons sued in 1897 to redeem a mortgage of the year 1859 in respect of the land in dispute. In that litigation a decree was passed by the Special Judge under the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act on the 8th April 1899, the material portion of which is as follows:—"I set aside the decree of the lower Court and order that plaint[illegible] the defendant Rs. 99 i[illegible] gage debt in res[illegible] to in the plain[illegible] give possession of the land in dispute to the plaintiff. Plaintiff do pay Rs. 99 to the defendant by annual instalments of Rs. 25 each...Plaintiff should pay the assessment of the land and take the profit. If any three instalments remain unpaid, defendant should recover the amount remaining due by sale (after obtaining the Court's permission for sale) of the mortgaged property or a sufficient portion thereof." This decree was not executed either by Dhondibai or by the defendant in that case. The possession remained with the defendant, who did not take any steps to have the property sold. On the 26th May 1899 Dhondibai mortgaged the property to the present plaintiff Bapuji Ramchandra Kulkarni. Though it purported to be a mortgage with possession, the mortgagee never obtained possession of the mortgaged property. The present suit was filed on the 19th June 1912 by Bapuji Kulkarni against the sons and heirs of Dhondibai to enforce this mortgage. The defendant, Jivraj Motiram, in Dhondibai's suit was joined in the present suit as defend[illegible] No. 3 as a party in possess[illegible] Though the suit in form was to enforce the mortgage, it was in substance a suit to redeem against defendant No. 3 on the footing of his being a mortgagee at the date of the suit, and was so treated by the trial Court. The defendant No. 3 pleaded the decree of 1899 as a bar to the suit. It is not necessary to refer to defendants Nos. 4 and 5 for the purposes of this appeal.

The trial Court dismissed the suit as against defendants Nos. 3 to 5 and the lower Appellate Court confirmed the decree of the trial Court. We are now concerned only with this part of the decree.

It is urged on behalf of the plaintiff, who has appealed to this Court, that his claim to redeem the mortgage is not barred. It is contended that as the decree of 1899 remained unexecuted, the original mortgagee (i.e., the present defendant No. 3) must be deemed to have continued in possession as a mortgagee, that the amount ascertained to be due to him under the decree of 1899 might be accepted as being payable to him and that his position would be for all practical purposes that of a mortgagee [illegible]ith possession after that decree. [illegible] of the CHAMPAYIL KOPPAN v. KOLASSERI KELAPPAN NAMBIYAR.

The making of the contract is part of the cause of action within the meaning of section 20 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code.

Miscellaneous first appeal from the order of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Ambala, dated the 15th January 1915.

Mr. Manohar Lal, for the Appellants.

Mr. Beni Parshad Khosla, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—On 27th April 1914, the plaintiffs-appellants instituted this suit claiming Rs. 14,000 from the defendants-respondents as due and payable undera contract made and registered in Jagadhri. The contract was to be performed at Tehri or in any case outside the jurisdiction of the Ambala Courts, and the breach or breaches alleged in the plaint occurred also outside the Ambala District.

The Senior Subordinate Judge ordered that "the plaint "and enclosures be returned to the plaintiff to be presented at the proper Court", holding that the Ambala Courts had no jurisdiction to try the suit, the mere execution or making of the contract at Jagadhri not giving him jurisdiction. The plaintiffs-appellants have appeared and for them I have heard Mr. Manohar Lal, while Mr. Khosla has addressed me on behalf of the defendants-respondents. In my opinion the matter is perfectly clear. It is admitted that under Explanation III to section 17 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882, the Senior Subordinate Judge, Ambala, had jurisdiction because the contract was made at Jagadhri. This explanation has not been re-enacted in the Civil Procedure Code of 1908, but owing to the addition of the words "wholly or in part" in section 20 (c) no change has been made in the law.

The making of the contract clearly is a part of the cause of action and Salig Ram v. Chuba Mal (1) is clearly in point. Mr. Khosla argued that the suit was for a refund of monies advanced at Chakrata, but it is clear that these advances were made in pursuance of the contract entered into at Jagadhri. I accordingly accept this appeal and return the case to the Trial Court for disposal.

Costs in this Court will be costs in the cause.

Appeal accepted.

(1) 11 Ind. Cas. 712; 34 A. 49; 8 A. L. J. 1160.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No.1742 OF 1916.

December 13, 1917.

Present:—Sir John Wallis, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Sadasiva Aiyar.

CHAMPYIL KOPPAN AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

KOLASSERI KELAPPAN NAMBIYAR AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 47, O. XXI, r. 63—Claim allowed—Suit, subsequent, by judgment-debtor against claimant decreed—Sale by judgment-debtor—Re-attachment of property—Claim by judgment-debtor's vendee, dismissal of—Suit to establish claim, maintainability of.

A claim preferred to property attached in execution of the respondent's decree having been allowed, the judgment-debtor sued the claimant to set aside the settlement which was the basis of the claim and obtained a decree for possession. He then sold the property to the appellant. The respondent having re-attached the property, appellant put in a claim and, having failed in it, he filed a separate suit for possession:

Held, (1) that the first attachment was not revived as the result of the judgment-debtor's suit; [p. 865, col. 1.]

(2) that the appellant's suit was not barred by section 47, Civil Procedure Code. [p. 865, col. 1.]

Second appeal against the decree of the Court of the Temporary Subordinate Judge of Palghat at Calicut, in Appeal Suit No. 126 of 1916, preferred against the decree of the Court of the First Additional District Munsif of Calicut, in Original Suit No. 898 of 1913.

Mr. C. Madhavan Nair, for the Appellants.

Mr. K. P. M. Menon, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The respondent attached the suit property as the property of his judgment-debtor. A third party put in a claim that the property was his and succeeded. The judgment-debtor sued to set aside the settlement by virtue of which the claimant had succeeded in his claim and for possession and obtained a decree. This was not a suit under Order XXI, rule 63, of the Civil Procedure Code, which confers a right of suit only on the party against whom an order has been made rejecting his claim or his objection to another's claim. The person who objects to a claim is the attaching decree-holder. He (the judgment-debtor) then sold the suit property to the appellant. The respondent then again attached the property and the appellant put in a claim petition, and

The result is that we grant the plaintiffs a decree for

	Rs.	A.	P.
(a) rent from 1st July 1911 to 31st January 1912 at Rs. 111-11-6 per mensem ...	782	0	6
(b) damages for the use and occupation of the ground floor of the house from 1st February 1912 to 7th March 1912 at Rs. 223-7-0 per mensem ...	274	0	0
(c) damages for the wrongful occupation of the two plots of land ...	3,000	0	0
Total ...	4,056	0	6

We accordingly accept the appeal, and modifying the decree of the lower Court direct that the defendants do pay to the plaintiffs the aforesaid sum. In the circumstances we leave the parties to bear their own costs throughout the litigation.

Appeal accepted

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 171 OF 1917.

December 20, 1917.

Present:—Mr. Justice Seshagiri Aiyar and Mr. Justice Kumaraswami Sastri.

SUBBARAYA CHETTY—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

NACHIAR AMMAL—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Cause of action, accrual of, after suit—Relief, whether can be granted.

Courts have power, in certain circumstances, to grant a decree in a case, where the cause of action arose subsequently to the filing of the plaint.

In a suit for money, where the money becomes payable to the plaintiff only after the filing of the suit the Court should pass a decree in favour of the plaintiff and not compel him to institute another suit, for the purpose.

Second appeal against the decree of the Court of the District Judge of Tanjore, in Appeal Suit No. 574 of 1915, preferred against that of the Court of the District Munsif of Valangiman at Kumbakonam, in Original Suit No. 71 of 1913.

Mr. M. D. Devadoss, for the Appellant.

Mr. M. O. Parthasarathy Aiyangar, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—On the finding of the District Judge it is clear that the defendant did receive the money. The learned Judge has, however, found that the suit was premature because of the terms of the unregistered mortgage bond. Granting that the terms of the bond are binding on the parties, having regard to the fact that immediately after the suit the money became payable, we think that it is undesirable that the plaintiff should be compelled to institute another suit for the money. The principle of Chinta Hararan Das v. Radha Charan Poddar (1) and of the decision of this Court in Sethrucherla Rama Chandra v. Maharajah of Jeypore (2), in which it was held that Courts have power to grant a decree where a cause of action arose subsequent to the suit, is applicable to this case. Following these decisions and having regard to the special circumstances of this case, we reverse the decree of the District Judge and restore that of the District Munsif, except as to costs. Each party will bear his own costs throughout.

Appeal allowed.

M. C. P.

(1) 37 Ind. Cas. 962.
(2) 34 Ind. Cas. 411; (1916) M. W. N. 354; 19 M. L. T. 260.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 608 OF 1915.

June 20, 1917.

Present:—Mr Justice Broadway.

SITA RAM AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

RAM CHANDRA AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 20 (c)—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 17, Expl. III—Jurisdiction—Cause of action—Contract, execution of, within jurisdiction, effect of.

Explanation III to section 17 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882 has not been re-enacted in the Code of 1908, but owing to the addition of the words "wholly or in part" in section 20 (c) of the latter Code no change has been made in the law. [p. 864, col. 1.]

Where a contract on the basis of which a suit is brought was entered into within the jurisdiction of a certain Court, that Court has jurisdiction to try the suit notwithstanding that the place where the contract was to be performed and the place where the breach alleged in the plaint occurred are both outside such jurisdiction. [p. 864, col. 1.]

present suit Mr. Gokhale has relied upon Rama Tulsa Mahar v. Bhagchand Motiram (1) and Sita Ram v. Madho Lal (2). On behalf of defendant No. 3 it is argued in reply that the present suit is barred by section 47, Civil Procedure Code, so far as it is based upon the decree of 1899, that the present plaintiff is not in any better position than his mortgagor, and that as Dhondibai could not have maintained a second suit to redeem her mortgagee after the decree the plaintiff cannot maintain it. It is contended that the present case is governed by the ruling in Hari Ravji Chiplunkar v. Shapurji Hormasji Shet (3). Mr. Kane has also relied upon Vedapuratti v. Vallabha Valiya Raja (4), Ranga Aiyangar v. Narayana Chariar (5), Gansavant Balsavant v. Narayan Dhond Savant (6) and Maloji v. Sagaji (7). His argument is that the case of Rama Tulsa Mahar v. Bhagchand Motiram (1) is distinguishable on its facts, and that in any case having regard to the decisions referred to by him it should not be accepted as a binding authority.

It is true that the decree of 1899 was passed under the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act, and the provisions of section 93 of the Transfer of Property Act or the corresponding provisions of Order XXXIV of the Code of Civil Procedure would not apply to such a decree [see Kashinath Vinayak Bhave v. Rama Daji Kale (8)]. It may be that until an application is made under section 15B of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act for the sale of the property the mortgagee's position may continue to be the same with reference to the mortgagor. But this circumstance would not make any difference in the result in this case. Here we have to deal with the effect of a decree the execution of which was admittedly time-barred at the date of the suit.

On the facts of this case it seems to me clear that the plaintiff can maintain the present suit only if it could be shown that his mortgagor could have maintained a second suit for redemption. The plaintiff's mortgage was effected after the decree of 1899. Though the mortgagor's right to execute the decree was not barred at the date of the mortgage, I do not think that he can be in any better position than his mortgagor.

The question is whether the mortgagor could have maintained a second suit for redemption. It seems to me clear that she could not have done so. Whether the second suit be treated as one for the redemption of the mortgage of the year 1859 or whether it be treated as based on the decree taken along with the subsequent conduct of the parties in not executing the decree and in allowing the possession to remain with the mortgagee as before, it would be barred by the decree of 1899. In so far as the suit is based on the decree and the subsequent conduct of the parties, the judgment of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Hari Ravji Chiplunkar's case (3) affords a complete answer. The decision is not the less applicable to the present case simply because the plaintiff here acquired an interest in the equity of redemption before the execution of the decree was barred, and not after it was barred as in the case before the Privy Council. Thus section 47 of the Code of Civil Procedure bars the present suit.

Even if the present suit be treated as a suit for redemption of the mortgage of 1859, it seems to me that the suit would be barred under section 11 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The first suit was tried and decided on the merits, and the second suit by the mortgagor would be clearly barred by the terms of section 11 of the Code. In the case of Rama Tulsa Mahar v. Bhagchand Motiram (1) relied upon by the appellant, the mortgagor had not sued to redeem and had not obtained a decree in the first instance. I am not prepared to extend the ratio decidendi of that case to a case where the mortgagor has filed a suit for redemption and obtained a decree in that

(1) 27 Ind. Cas. 249; 39 B. 41; 16 Bom L. R. 687.
(2) 24 A. 44; A. W. N. (1901) 194 (F. B.).
(3) 10 B. 461; 13 I. A. 66; 10 Ind. Jur. 310; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 719; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 695 (P. C.).
(4) 25 M. 300; 12 M. L. J. 123 (F. B.).
(5) 32 Ind. Cas. 30; 39 M. 896; 18 M. L. T. 596; 30 M. L. J. 13.
(6) 7 B. 467; 8 Ind. Jur. 90; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 315.
(7) 13 B. 567; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 375.
(8) 37 Ind. Cas. 255; 40 B. 492; 18 Bom. L. R. 475.

suit and has subsequently filed another suit to redeem the same mortgage. I do not see how the second suit for the redemption of the same mortgage could be entertained, when the first suit was heard and decided on the merits in respect of the same matter, in view of the provisions of section 11 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

It is not necessary to consider the further arguments addressed to us with reference to the case of Rama Tulsa Mahar v. Bhagchand Motiram (1).

It is also not necessary to consider the question whether a mortgage effected by Dhondibai could give the plaintiff any interest in the equity of redemption which belonged to her sons, the present defendants Nos. 1 and 2.

The result is that the decree of the lower Appellate Court is affirmed and the appeal dismissed with costs.

HEATON, J.--I agree.

In my opinion the mortgage of 1859 was put an end to by the decree of 1899 and thereafter the relations between those who had formerly been mortgagor and mortgagee were determined by that decree. The plaintiff in this case became possessed by assignment in the form of a mortgage of whatever rights under that decree the mortgagors of 1859 or their successors possessed. He obtained no other rights as against the present defendant No. 3. He could not, in my opinion, bring a suit to redeem a mortgage, for there was no mortgage to redeem, there was only a decree to execute. He had rights under that decree and those rights he could have exercised in the way permitted by the law, that is, by an application to execute the decree. This he failed to do, and he has failed so continuously that it has now become impossible for him to make any effective application to execute that decree. He has, therefore, it seems to me, lost whatever rights he once possessed in regard to that decree. This conclusion, although I have stated it in the form which appeals to my particular view of the case, is, I think, the decision that would necessarily be reached by applying the principles which are enunciated in the Privy Council case of Hari Ravji Chiplunkar v. Shapurji Hormasji Shet (3) referred to by my learned brother.

Decree affirmed.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 839 OF 1916.

February 12, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Scott-Smith.

THE COMMITTEE OF NOTIFIED AREA, UNA, DISTRICT HOSHIARPUR, THROUGH ITS PRESIDENT—DEFENDANT—PETITIONER

versus

CHATAR BEHARI NARAIN—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Punjab Municipal Act (III of 1911), ss. 86, 242—Profession tax, levy of—Munsif, whether follows profession—Jurisdiction of Civil Courts to determine legality of tax—Suit for recovery of amount paid as tax, whether cognisable by Small Cause Court—Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887), Sch. II, Art. 1.

The power conferred by a special Act on a local authority to impose a particular tax for particular purposes in a specified manner does not oust the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts to give relief against an illegality committed by that body under cover of statutory powers. [p. 911, col. 1.]

A Civil Court has jurisdiction to determine the question whether the imposition of a tax is illegal and ultra vires and to give relief if a tax has been levied from a person who is not liable to pay the same. [p. 911, col. 1.]

The Punjab Government imposed a profession tax in the Una Notified Area and the plaintiff, a Munsif, was assessed to pay the tax. He paid it under protest and then brought a suit for the recovery of the amount:

Held, (1) that the suit was not one concerning an act purporting to be done by any person by order of the Local Government and was not, therefore, excluded from the jurisdiction of a Court of Small Causes; [p. 911, col. 1.]

(2) that the Munsif could not be said to follow a profession in the popular sense of the term and the Government could not have intended that he should be liable to pay a profession tax. [p. 911, col. 2.]

Petition for revision of the decree of the Munsif, 2nd Class, with powers of a Judge, Small Cause Court, Hoshiarpur, dated the 17th April 1916, decreeing the claim.

Bhagat Govind Das, for the Petitioner.

Lala Mul Chand, R. S., for Lala Moti Sagar, R. S., for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The Punjab Government in exercise of its powers under section 242 of the Punjab Municipal Act has imposed a profession tax in the Una Notified Area. Amongst those assessed to pay this tax by the Committee of the Notified Area was the plaintiff Lala Chatar Behari Narain, Munsif, at that time occupying a house within the notified area. He paid the tax Rs. 40 under protest and then brought the present suit against the Committee of the Notified Area for recovery of the amount. The case was heard by a Small Cause Court Judge who decreed the claim in full. The Committee of the Notified Area has filed an application for revision in this Court.

Three points were argued before me on behalf of the petitioner committee, viz.,

(1) that the case was not triable by a Court of Small Causes;

(2) that the Civil Court had no jurisdiction to hear the suit; and

(3) that the Munsif was exercising a profession and was, therefore, liable to pay the tax.

As regards the first point, it was urged that the suit was excluded from the jurisdiction of the Court of Small Causes by Article 1 of the Second Schedule of the Small Causes Courts Act. In my opinion the Article in question is not applicable. The suit cannot be said to be one concerning an act purporting to be done by any person by order of the Local Government. The Local Government in the present case no doubt imposed the tax but the Committee of the Notified Area had to prepare and did prepare a list of the persons liable to pay the tax. The suit, therefore, concerns the levy by the Committee of the tax from the plaintiff.

As regards the second point the appellants rely upon section 86 of the Municipal Act, which lays down that "No objection shall be taken to any valuation or assessment, nor shall the liability of any person to be assessed or taxed be questioned, in any other manner or by any other authority than is provided in the Act and also that no refund of any tax shall be claimable by any person otherwise than in accordance with the provisions of this Act and the rules thereunder." It has, however, been held frequently that the power conferred by a special Act on a local authority to impose a particular tax for particular purposes in a specified manner does not oust the jurisdiction of the Civil Court to give relief against an illegality committed by that body under cover of statutory powers. I think it is clear that a Civil Court has jurisdiction to determine the question whether the imposition of a tax is illegal and ultra vires and to give relief if a tax has been levied from a person who is not liable thereto.

The third point is whether it can be said that the Munsif followed a profession. The lower Court has gone into this matter very thoroughly and has come to a reasonable conclusion. In my opinion it cannot be said that the Munsif follows a profession in the popular sense of the term and I do not think that Government can have intended that he should be liable to pay a profession tax.

Whether this be so or not, I do not think that this Court should go into the matter in revision.

The petition for revision is accordingly rejected with costs.

Revision rejected.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

RULE Nisi No. 754 OF 1917.

February 8, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Richardson and Mr. Justice Beachcroft.

PULIN BEHARY ROY AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—PETITIONERS

versus

ABDUL MAJID AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—OPPOSITE PARTIES.

Succession Certificate Act (VII of 1889), s. 4—Succession certificate, whether necessary where one member of a plaintiff firm dies—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXX, r. 4.

In a suit on a hand note executed in favour of a firm, the full amount of the claim should be decreed even where one of the members of the firm dies during the pendency of the suit and his legal representative who is added as a plaintiff does not produce any succession certificate to the deceased partner. [p. 912, col. 2.]

Ram Narain Nursing Doss v. Ram Chunder Jankee Loll, 18 C. 86; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 58; Bal Kissen Das Daga v. Kanhya Lal, 21 Ind. Cas. 509; 17 C. L. J. 648, followed.

Rule against the order of the Sub-Judge, 2nd Court, Chittagong.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

Dr. Dwarka Nath Mitter and Babu Debendra Nath Mandal, on behalf of the Plaintiffs-

Petitioners.—This Rule was issued by this Court under section 25 of the Provincial Small Causes Courts Act. A suit was instituted in the Small Cause Court against the defendants on a hand-note executed by them in favour of a firm. After the death of one Amar Chand, one of the members of the firm, an objection was taken by the defendants that a full decree could not be made in favour of the plaintiffs unless Pulin Behary Roy, who was added as a plaintiff as the legal representative of Amar Chand, took out a succession certificate. The Court of Small Causes gave effect to this objection. I submit that the Court of Small Causes was wrong. As the suit was in the name of the firm it was not at all necessary to join the legal representative of the deceased partner Amar Chand as a party to the suit, so the fact that no succession certificate was taken by Pulin Behary Roy could not prevent the suit being decreed in full, as the suit could be maintained without Pulin Behary Roy being added as a plaintiff. There is a decision of this Hon'ble High Court in the case reported as Ram Narain Nursing Doss v. Ram Chunder Jankee Loll (1) which supports the decision of the lower Court. But I submit that decision is not correct. All other High Courts in India are of opinion that a succession certificate is not necessary in a case like this. Moreover, Order XXX, rule 4, Civil Procedure Code, places the matter beyond doubt and in view of that provision in the new Procedure Code it must be held that the decision of this Court in Ram Narain Nursing Doss v. Ram Chunder Jankee Loll (1) is wrong.

[RICHARDSON, J.—There is a judgment of Mr. Justice Fletcher in Bal Kissen Das Daga v. Kanhya Lal (2), which supports your contention.]

I was not aware of that decision, I thank your Lordships for calling my attention to it. I pray that Pulin Behary Roy, who was added as the legal representative of the deceased partner Amar Chand, might be struck off from the category of plaintiffs and the entire amount of the claim be decreed in favour of the firm.

(1) 18 C. 86; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 58.
(2) 21 Ind. Cas. 509; 17 C. L. J. 648.

JUDGMENT.—The question for consideration in this Rule is whether the rule laid down by this Court in the case of Ram Narain Nursing Doss v. Ram Chunder Jankee Loll (1) has been superseded by rule 4 of Order XXX. The point came before Mr. Justice Fletcher in the case of Bal Kissen Das Daga v. Kanhaya Lal (2). We agree with the view taken by Mr. Justice Fletcher that the rule laid down in the case cited no longer applies in view of the provisions embodied in rule 4 of Order XXX. Rule is, therefore, made absolute in this way. The name of the added plaintiff Pulin Behary Roy will be struck out of the category of the plaintiffs and he will be dismissed from the suit. The claim will be decreed in full and the decree of the Court below will be modified accordingly.

Rule made absolute.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 3342 OF 1916.
February 5, 1918.
Present:—Mr. Justice Shadi Lal.

GOKAL CHAND PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
versus
HUKAM CHAND AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 120—Suit for declaration of proprietary title—Adverse entry in revenue records, effect of—Cause of action—Limitation, commencement of.

A declaratory suit brought by a plaintiff who has all along been in enjoyment of the property is not barred simply because an entry adverse to his rights was made or because he came to know of that entry more than six years prior to the institution of the suit. [p. 913, cols. 1 & 2.]

Even if the right to demand correction of the revenue entries is lost by limitation, the plaintiff is entitled to a declaration of his proprietary title, the period of limitation running from the date when the defendant attempted to oust the plaintiff from the property. [p. 913, col. 2.]

Where, therefore, in a suit for a declaration to the effect that plaintiff was owner of 1/12th share in certain lands and not of a 1/18th share only as recorded in the revenue papers, it appeared that the income derived from the land was spent on the upkeep of certain joint family property in which the plaintiff had a 1/12th share which share had been awarded to him:

Held, that the cause of action arose when the plaintiff asked the Revenue Officer to make an entry in his favour and the defendants denied his title. [p. 913, col. 2.]

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Jullundur, dated the 29th of August 1916, reversing that of the Honorary Subordinate Judge, 1st Class, Jullundur, dated the 27th July 1915, decreeing the claim with costs.

Mr. Manohar Lal and Lala Badri Das, R. S., for the Appellant.

Mr. Gokal Chand Narang, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This second appeal arises out of an action brought by the plaintiff-appellant for a declaration that he is owner of 1/12th of a plot of land known as Thaprana and not of 1/18th only as recorded in the revenue papers. The learned District Judge, dissenting from the Court of first instance, has dismissed the suit upon the ground that it is barred by time under Article 120 of the Limitation Act and after hearing arguments on both sides and considering the authorities cited by the learned Counsel I am of opinion that the decision of the lower Appellate Court cannot be sustained.

An abstract of the revenue entries relating to the land in dispute is given in the judgment of the lower Appellate Court, and there can be no manner of doubt that the entries have for more than 30 years been against the plaintiff and that he had knowledge of those entries more than six years prior to the institution of the suit. It is common ground that the rule of limitation applicable to the suit is that prescribed by Article 120, and the only question for determination is whether the terminus a quo is the date of the adverse entry, or the knowledge thereof, or lastly the date when the defendants attempted to oust the plaintiff from the property. Now, there is no reliable evidence that the defendants denied the plaintiff's right more than six years before the date of the institution of the suit, indeed, all the evidence goes to show that the income derived from the land is spent on the upkeep of certain joint family property in which the plaintiff had 1/12th share and that share has, it appears, been awarded to him. I am not prepared to assent to the proposition that an action brought by the plaintiff, who has been all along in the enjoyment of the property, would be barred by time simply because an entry adverse to his rights was made or that he came to know of that entry more than six years prior to the institution of the suit. Indeed, there is ample authority for the proposition that even if the right to demand correction of the revenue entries is lost by limitation the plaintiff is entitled to a declaration of his proprietary title, the period of limitation running from the date when the defendants attempted to oust the plaintiff from the property, vide, inter alia, Hakim Singh v. Waryaman (1) and Nathu v. Buta (2).

The cause of action in the present case arose when the plaintiff asked the Revenue Officer to make an entry in his favour and the defendants denied his title. This event admittedly took place within the prescribed period of limitation, and the suit is consequently not barred by time. For these reasons I accept the appeal and reversing the decree of the lower Appellate Court remit the case for decision on the remaining points. The Court fee on the memorandum of appeal shall be refunded, and other costs shall abide the event.

Appeal accepted.

(1) 140 P. R. 1907.
(2) 27 P. R. 1881.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1236 OF 1916.

November 18, 1917.

Present:—Mr. Justice Heaton and Mr. Justice Shah.

RAMCHANDRA GANGADHAR KARVE —PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

MAHADEV MORESHVAR PHADNIS—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Letters Patent (Bom.), cl. 15—Judgment—Order of Single Judge refusing to excuse delay in presentation of appeal, whether judgment.

An order of a Single Judge refusing to excuse the delay in presenting an appeal has the effect of dismissing or rejecting the appeal, and being thus an order of a final character, is a judgment within the meaning of clause 15 of the Letters Patent and an appeal lies against it under that clause. [p. 914, col. 1.]

RAMCHANDRA GANGADHAR v. MAHADEV MORESHVAR.

Second appeal from the decision of the Assistant Judge, Poona, in Appeal No. 161 of 1914, confirming the order of the Joint Subordinate Judge, Poona, in Darkhast No. 66 of 1913.

Mr. D. C. Virkar, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

HEATON, J.—Two points arise in this appeal, one of which is peculiar to the facts of this particular case, and the other is a more general question. I will deal with the latter first.

It happened that this appeal was presented beyond the time allowed by law and that an application was made by the appellant to a Single Judge of this Court to excuse the delay. That Judge refused to excuse the delay. And here I pause to remark that this order had the effect of dismissing or rejecting the appeal and that it was an order of a final character, not of an interlocutory character. The appellant appealed to a Bench of this Court against that order and the Bench excused the delay, the result of which was that the appeal was admitted and has now come on for hearing.

It is argued that the order of a Single Judge refusing to excuse the delay is not a judgment within the meaning of clause 15 of the Charter of this High Court and that, therefore, no further appeal lay. But seeing, as I have said, that the order had the very drastic effect of dismissing or rejecting the appeal, it seems to me it must be taken to fall within the meaning of the word judgment as used in clause 15, and I think, therefore, that there is no objection to our disposing of this appeal on its merits.

Turning to the merits we find that the present appellant, who was the plaintiff in the suit out of which ultimately these proceedings have arisen, obtained a decree, a part of which runs as follows:—"The bol (passage) between the houses of the parties is of their joint ownership. The plaintiff is entitled to discharge the water of the moris on the ground floor of the plaintiff's house and of those on the second storey and rain-water of the eaves of the plaintiff's house, into the said bol and to carry it through the mori (drain) passing beneath the bol so as to join the public gutter on the north. An injunction is issued to the defendant restraining him from causing obstruction to the plaintiff in his enjoyment of his above right or to his going into the said bol and making repairs to the mori therein." Some years after obtaining this decree the plaintiff applied for execution of the decree on the ground, it appears, that an obstruction had been caused to his right of going into the said bol and making repairs to the mori. That application was rejected by the First Court and by the Court of First Appeal on the ground that it was out of time.

If we consider the nature of the litigation in which the decree was obtained, and the terms of the decree, it seems to me that the application was not out of time. For the purpose of discussing this point we must assume, as was assumed in the lower Court, that there was an obstruction, and that the obstruction was caused more than three years before the application for execution was made. The obstruction takes the form of a pump which, we assume, blocks up the bol and prevents the decree-holder from reaching the mori so that he may make repairs to it. The question is whether the obstruction for the purpose of limitation dates from the time when the pump was erected, that is, more than three years before the application was made, or whether it dates for the purposes of limitation from the time when the decree-holder had occasion to enter the bol and proceed along it for the purpose of making repairs to the mori. Both the lower Courts have held that for the purposes of limitation the date of the obstruction was the date of the putting up of the pump. To me it seems otherwise. I speak here not in any general terms, but with reference to the facts of this particular case and the terms of this particular decree. The right which the plaintiff-decree-holder is now seeking to exercise is the right to proceed along the bol for the purpose of making repairs to the mori, and that right arises when he finds occasion to enter the bol and to proceed, or attempt to proceed, along it, either to make repairs or to ascertain whether repairs are necessary. It is not shown that so considered this right was obstructed more than three years before the application for execution was made. Seeing that the lower Courts have proceeded on the assumption that the right has been considered as dating back to the time when the pump was erected, I think that their orders are wrong, that they decided the matter wrongly on a preliminary point, and that it must be remanded to the lower Court to be determined according to law.

I am not all sure that the same result might not be reached by applying the analogy of section 23 of the Indian Limitation Act and by regarding the existence of the pump as a continuing wrong or a continuing obstruction. But I do not say anything definite on that point, because having regard to the particular facts of this case I feel clear in my mind that the decision can properly be based on the other ground.

The costs up to date in all the Courts must be paid by the respondent in this appeal.

SHAH, J.—I am of the same opinion.

Case remanded.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORDER No. 166 OF 1917.

January 9, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Richardson and Mr. Justice Beachcroft.

BASIRUDDIN THANADAR—DECREE-HOLDER No. 4—APPELLANT

versus

MOKIMA BIBI AND OTHERS—OBJECTORS AND CREDITOR No. 1—RESPONDENTS.

Provincial Insolvency Act (III of 1907), s. 36—Transfer impugned—Burden of proof—Benami transaction, tests of—Antecedent debts—Dower claims.

In a case arising under section 36 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, the burden of proving that the transaction impugned was carried out in good faith and for valuable consideration is on the transferee. [p. 916, col. 1.]

Antecedent debts might constitute a good consideration for a conveyance impugned under section 36 of the Provincial Insolvency Act. [p. 917, col. 1.]

With regard to the question whether a sale is a benami or a real transaction, the fact that the transactions relating to the property sold were carried out in the name of the transferee is not conclusive. Though the question of actual possession is in some cases a test and an important test, yet where the property transferred is a house and the transferor is the husband of the transferee, much importance cannot be attached to the fact of actual possession, inasmuch as the husband might after the sale not unnaturally live in the house which he has transferred to his wife. [p. 917, col. 2.]

The question of the burden of proof retains little, if any, importance, where there is evidence on both sides. [p. 918, col. 2.]

The question whether a transfer challenged under the provisions of section 36, Provincial Insolvency Act, was in good faith, involves as an important element the value for which the properties were sold. [p. 918, col. 2.]

An insolvent had transferred certain property to his wife in lieu of dower within two years before his adjudication. He continued in possession of the property along with his wife, but it was found that the dower debt was genuine and that the value of the property transferred was not incommensurate with the amount of the debt:

Held, that the transaction could not be impugned under section 36 of the Provincial Insolvency Act. [p. 918, col. 2.]

Appeal against the order of the District Judge, Rungpur, dated the 16th April 1917.

Mr. B. C. Mitra, Babus Satendra Nath Mukerjee and Atindranath Mukerjee, for the Appellant.

Babus Mohendranath Roy and Atul Chandra Gupta, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

RICHARDSON, J.—This appeal is preferred from an order of the District Judge of Rungpur, dated the 16th April 1917. For the present purpose the order must be treated as an order made under section 36 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, refusing an application made by certain creditors of the insolvent that two conveyances executed by him within two years of the date on which he was so adjudged should be annulled. The conveyances in question were in favour of his two wives Nabnat Bibi and Mokima Bibi and are both dated the 11th January 1915. They are each in the nature of a hiba-bil-ewaz. In other words, they purport to have been executed in consideration of the dower debts which the insolvent owed to his wives respectively. In January 1915, the insolvent had been married to Nabnat for about 11 years and to Mokima for about 5 years. The dower promised in the case of Nabnat is said to have been Rs. 1,500 and in the case of Mokima, whose father was in better circumstances than the father of Nabnat, Rs. 5,000. The insolvency proceedings were commenced by an application made by the insolvent on the 17th August 1916 and the order of adjudication is dated the 25th November 1916. In the schedule of debts attached to the application the insolvent estimates his liabilities at Rs. 17,975 and his assets at Rs. 19,872.

The case made for the creditors, one of whom Basiruddin Thanadar is the appellant before us, is that at the time the hibas were executed the affairs of the insolvent were in an involved state and the two hibas represent merely benami and colourable transactions. The insolvent has himself admitted that in January 1915 he was indebted to the extent of ten or twelve thousand rupees. He has not admitted, however, that he was at the time insolvent nor does it appear that there were then any decrees outstanding against him. He owed a considerable amount to the appellant creditor for which the appellant in the course of the year 1915 after the execution of the hibas brought a suit against him. The suit was for the balance due on business transactions which took place in 1912-13. It is further in evidence that on the 15th May 1914 the insolvent had borrowed on a note of hand the sum of Rs. 6,000 from the Rungpur Bank. In August of the same year he also borrowed Rs. 1,000 on a note of hand from the North Bengal Bank. The appellant creditor obtained a decree against the insolvent on the 12th January 1916 for the sum of Rs. 5,785. The Rungpur Bank and the North Bengal Bank also sued the insolvent in the course of the year 1915 and obtained decrees on the 13th December 1915 and the 4th January 1916 respectively. It appears that there was another decree against the insolvent obtained in the Small Cause Court for Rs. 684 with costs dated the 15th June 1916. Regard being had, therefore, to the prevalency of benami transactions in this country and to the surrounding circumstances it may well be conceded that there is some initial suspicion about these two hibas. It may also be conceded, as it is not disputed, that in a case arising under section 36 of the Provincial Insolvency Act the burden of proving that the transaction impugned was carried out in good faith and for valuable consideration is on the transferee. This has been so held in the case of Nilmoni Chowdhuri v. Basanta Kumar Banerjee (1) decided by this Court and in the case of Muhammad Habibullah v. Mushtaq Husain (2) decided by the Allahabad High Court.

Now in the Court below it has been found on the evidence that these two ladies, the wives of the insolvent, have succeeded in showing that their husband owed them as dower the sums I have stated. We have been taken through the evidence and I see no reason to differ from the opinion formed by the learned District Judge on this part of the case. It is practically common ground, regard being had to the admission made by the witness on behalf of the appellant creditor, that the insolvent was the son of a prosperous man and that he was at one time himself a prosperous shopkeeper. He and his wives came from the District of Ballia in the United Provinces, though the insolvent had a shop at Rungpur and lived there for a number of years. On the evidence as it stands on the record it cannot be said that the sums claimed as dower are in any way excessive. The main point which was made by the appellant in this connection is that the dower debts are not supported by any kabilnama or written document. But witnesses on both sides who are acquainted with the District of Ballia and with the practice of people there in similar circumstances with the insolvent state that in that district it is not usual to execute such documents. There is no doubt evidence for the appellant creditor that the dower stipulated for in most cases is much smaller than the sums mentioned in the present case. But one of the witnesses states in cross-examination that at his own marriage dower was fixed at 202 gold ashrafis, that is to say, a sum of about Rs. 3,232, and that no document was executed. It is said that what the witness really said was that the dower which he promised was Rs. 200 and 2 gold ashrafis. But the learned District Judge has taken the statement as it stands in the deposition. No step appears to have been taken to clear up the point in the Court below and we must also like the District Judge take the statement as it stands. On this part of the case, therefore, as to the probability of these sums having been promised as dower and being in fact due by the insolvent to his wives, I accept the conclusion arrived at by the District Judge. It follows that there were in fact in respect of these conveyances, which are challenged, antecedent debts which might constitute good consideration for them and the argument in this Court has turned mainly on the value of the properties transferred.

(1) 29 Ind. Cas. 814; 19 C. W. N. 865;

(2) 37 Ind. Cas. 684; 39 A. 95; 14 A. L. J. 1183.

Before dealing with that point, however, it is well to refer to an admission said to have been made by the insolvent himself in conversation with an officer of the Rungpur Bank. The principal witness on this point is the Pleader Babu Rajani Kanta Bhattacharjee who is the managing director of the Rungpur Bank. The conversation occurred, he says, a few months before the Rungpur Bank instituted its suit against the insolvent and it related to these hibas. Apparently the insolvent was trying to obtain time for paying off his debts and it is said that he admitted that the transfers were merely benami transactions. It appears, however, that what the insolvent said at the time was not quite understood by the learned Pleader. The answer which the witness gave in cross-examination leaves the matter somewhat vague. He says: "I did not ask Abdur Rahman distinctly if the hiba was an out and out transaction. I did not enquire then in whose possession the properties at that time were." Even if the insolvent made some statement of the kind which might be construed as an admission that the transactions were benami, it does not necessarily follow, regard being had to his position and to the fact that he was trying to gain time, that the admission was true. What appears to have happened afterwards is that a draft was made of a power of-attorney by which his wife Mokima Bibi was to empower him to pledge the property transferred to her as security to the Rungpur Bank. This draft was sent to the lady but she having consulted her own advisers refused to sign it or to give her husband the authority that he wanted. Her conduct in the matter seems to indicate that she was in real, and not merely in nominal, possession of the property, and the incident, therefore, is rather in her favour than otherwise.

In this connection, I should also mention that the title created by the hiba has been respected ever since, at any rate on paper. Transactions relating to the property such as payments of rent to the superior landlord and receipt of rent from the tenants in occupation and so forth are carried out in the name of the transferee. No doubt that is not conclusive. It has been pointed out that when a benami transaction is entered into, no benefit can be derived or expected from it unless the fictitious title is afterwards on paper treated as the true title. The question of actual possession is in some cases a test and an important test, but in the present case not much can be said about this either way because the husband afterwards not unnaturally lived in the house which he had transferred to one of his wives. The co-wife also lived there. Similarly in the circumstances little turns on the fact that the servants employed by the husband for managing the property were also employed by the wives or one of them after the properties were transferred. The mode in which the properties were enjoyed and managed is of little assistance in the present case and no doubt the learned Counsel was right in putting the case as dependent mainly on the question as to the value of the properties.

Now it appears that the question of the value of the property transferred to Mokima Bibi was raised in the lower Court, but so far as the record shows it does not appear that in that Court any question was raised as to the value of the property transferred to Nabnat Bibi.

The facts as to the property transferred to Mokima Bibi were as follows. The property is a maurasi mukarari property with pucca buildings standing upon it. At the date of the hiba one building seems to have been nearly completed and since then another building has been commenced. We have a lease executed by certain tenants in favour of the lady on the 19th September 1916. That document shows that on that date she let out to those tenants nearly the whole house at a monthly rent of Rs. 110. The house is described as consisting of 12 doors, a door being, as I understand, a synonym for a room. The tenants took 11 doors for the monthly rent of Rs. 110 and there remained one room which was let out to Faizulla at a small rent. There was also a rent of Rs. 5 a month payable by a Panwallah for the verandah. The total annual rent comes to something more than Rs. 1,400. It is said that deducting Rs. 20 per cent. as costs for repairs and the annual rent payable to the superior landlord (Rs. 620), the annual profit works out at Rs. 500 or Rs. 530. The creditor claims that the value of the property should be taken at 20 years' purchase or say Rs. 10,000. Now this calculation may very well be on paper, but the evidence on which it rests, consists of passages carefully selected from the depositions of the witnesses for Mokima Bibi. There is no independent evidence of any value on behalf of the appellant creditor. One of his witnesses, who sets himself up to be an engineer and an expert, states that on looking at the house he could say that the building apart from the land was worth Rs. 11,000, but he could not say how much of this value was to be attributed to the old building and how much to the new, nor did he make any sort of examination of the buildings themselves. His estimate can only be regarded as a very rough and ready one and little more than a guess. As I have said, it is probable that the house was not complete at the date of the hiba. The insolvent himself in his evidence states that there were 12 doors at the time. But he was not asked to say definitely whether the building was actually finished and completed. On the other hand one of the witnesses for the appellant creditor Kailas Chandra Gupta makes the following statement. "He (the insolvent) did not agree to that even and left the place somewhat annoyed. He had said that the value of the complete portion of his house was Rs. 8,000." And further on the same witness says this: "I cannot deny that the building was not complete in December 1914. He (the insolvent) told me that there were 9 complete rooms which were let out on hire. I cannot say how many rooms there are in the building altogether." Then it appears that in the application for execution of the decree obtained by the North Bengal Bank the market value of this property was stated on the 9th December 1914 to be approximately Rs. 5,000. Similarly in an application for execution filed on the 4th February 1916, the market price of the property is stated to be approximately Rs. 7,000. No doubt estimates made for the purposes for which those estimates were made are not of much value. At the same time we have to consider the evidence on the record as a whole and to do the best we can with the materials which the parties have placed before the Court. On those materials the learned District Judge in the Court below has come to the conclusion that the value of the property transferred to Mokima Bibi is not by any means as large as the appellant creditor would have us believe.

The question of the burden of proof was brought forward as a factor which would turn the scale but when there is evidence on both sides the question retains little, if any, importance. Granted that it is for the transferees to prove that these transfers were made in good faith and for valuable consideration, it has been found that there was some valuable consideration inasmuch as there was a debt due to each of the wives at the time. The question then is whether the transfers were made in good faith. No doubt, as the learned Counsel for the appellant contends, this involves as an important element to the value of the properties transferred. The evidence on that question perhaps leaves something to be desired, but on the whole I am unable to differ from the conclusion at which the learned District Judge has arrived. I am not persuaded either in the case of Nabnat or in that of Mokima that the value given was so incommensurate with the debt due as to justify us in saying that the transfer was not at the time made in good faith. Before leaving the case I should like to add that I am disposed to believe the insolvent when he says that he would never have applied to be declared an insolvent unless he had been arrested at the instance of the Nerth Bengal Bank in execution of that decree.

The result is that, in my opinion, this appeal should be dismissed with costs. We assess the hearing fee at five gold mohurs.

BEACHCROFT, J.—I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 118 OF 1915.

January 10, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Piggott and Mr. Justice Walsh.

JAGARDEO SINGH—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

ALI HAMMAD AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Agra Tenancy Act (II of 1901), ss. 34, 199—Landlord and tenant—Mortgage of sir lands, before Act—Mortgagee, possession of—Equity of redemption, purchaser of, possession by, without landlord's consent—Question of title, determination of, by Civil Court—Revenue Court, ejectment by—Appeal, whether lies to District Judge.

Plaintiffs, as usufructuary mortgagees of certain sir lands, brought a suit in the Revenue Court for ejectment of the defendant, on the allegation that they were in possession of the lands under a mortgage existing before the passing of Act II of 1901 and that the defendant was a non-occupancy tenant of the same. The defendant, who had acquired a part of the equity of redemption of the mortgaged land, denied the relationship of landlord and tenant between himself and the plaintiffs. The Revenue Court referred the parties for the determination of the question of title to the Civil Court, which held that the plaintiffs were entitled to remain in exclusive possession as mortgagees and that defendant had acquired a share in the equity of redemption. In accordance with this the Revenue Court, holding that defendant was a non-occupancy tenant, ordered his ejectment. On the Commissioner's refusal to entertain the defendant's appeal, the latter appealed to the District Judge who rejected it, holding that the question of title had been finally and completely disposed of by the Civil Court in the civil suit:

Held, (1) that the District Judge was right in holding that no appeal lay to his Court; [p. 920, col. 1.]

(2) that the defendant had been rightly ejected by the Revenue Court. [p. 920, col. 1.]

Per Walsh, J.—The words "a person occupying land without the consent of the landlord" in section 34 of the Agra Tenancy Act mean one who enters into occupation without the express consent of the landlord or without any previous arrangement with him. [p. 921, col. 1.]

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Azamgarh.

Mr. Iqbal Ahmad, for the Appellant.

Mr. S. M. Yusuf Hasan, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

PIGGOTT, J.—These are four connected appeals which have come before us under the following circumstances:—

The plaintiffs instituted, in the Court of the Assistant Collector, Azamgarh, four suits for the ejectment of the defendant from certain specified plots of land, in each case with the allegation that they themselves were mortgagees in possession of the proprietary rights over the said plots, and the defendant was a non-occupancy tenant of the same. The defendant replied that there was no contract of tenancy between himself and the plaintiffs; that his possession was proprietary in its nature and that he was in possession as of right; because he was a co-sharer in the proprietary rights of the particular sub-division of a mahal to which the land in suit appertained. On this the learned Assistant Collector took action under section 199 of Act II of 1901, requiring the defendant to file a suit in the Civil Court for the determination of the question of title in issue between himself and the plaintiffs. The Court of first instance determined the question in favour of the present defendant who was, of course, the plaintiff in the Civil Court. On appeal, however, this decision was reversed. The controversy in this case has been very largely as to the meaning and effect of the Appellate Court's decision in this litigation. The decision fairly considered amounts to this, that the plaintiffs-respondents (the defendants in the Civil Court) held a usufructuary mortgage in respect of the plots of land in suit and were entitled to the exclusive possession of the same as such mortgagees; but the present defendant had acquired a share in the proprietary rights, that is to say, in the equity of redemption, in respect of the mortgage held by the opposite party. The case came again before the Assistant Collector, who was bound to dispose of the ejectment suit then pending before him in accordance with the final decision of the Civil Court. He passed a brief order to the effect that in view of the decision of the Civil Court, the defendant could only be regarded as in possession of the land in suit as a sub tenant, that is to say, a non-occupancy tenant (the land in question being sir land) from the plaintiffs. He ordered the defendant to be ejected accordingly. The defendant filed an appeal in the Commissioner's Court, who refused to entertain it, holding that a question of proprietary title was still in issue as between the parties. The defendant then went before the District Judge in appeal, who dismissed the appeal holding that the question of proprietary title, originally in issue, had been finally and completely disposed of in the suit already referred to, and that there was no question left for determination in the case which was not exclusively cognisable by the Revenue Courts. Against this decision four second appeals have been filed. When the case originally came up for hearing, the facts were not as clear as they are now, and an order was passed directing the District Judge to entertain the defendant's appeal and to determine certain issues of fact.

We have now before us the findings arrived at by the District Judge on the issues remanded, and as a matter of fact his findings proceed on admissions made by the parties. The mortgage under which the present plaintiffs-respondents now hold, and have been holding since 1902, was a mortgage of the specific plots of sir land which are now in suit. The mortgage itself had been contracted prior to the passing of the present Tenancy Act; so no question of ex-proprietary rights arises. On the terms of the mortgage the plaintiffs, as transferees of the mortgagee rights, were entitled from 1902 and onwards to actual possession and enjoyment in respect of the land in suit.

The defendant, having acquired a part of the equity of redemption, asserted a right to take possession of some of the sir lands, without tendering the mortgage money. In prosecution of this claim he somehow succeeded in obtaining possession of the plots of land now in suit. The question specifically raised by these appeals is whether the learned District Judge was right or wrong in holding that no appeal lay to his Court. I should be prepared to hold that that decision was correct, but the matter has now gone somewhat further. After the order of remand and the ascertainment of the facts, the real question before us is whether the Assistant Collector was right in ordering ejectment of the appellant. On the principles laid down by a learned Judge of this Court in Balli v. Naubat Singh (1) the Assistant Collector was clearly right. It has been suggested, on the other side, that this decision was doubted in a Full Bench decision of this Court in the later case of Nandan Singh v. Ganga Parhsad (2). (See specially the remarks at page 516*.) As a matter of fact the decision reported as Balli v. Naubat Singh (1) was not specifically considered or in terms overruled, though it is open for the appellant to contend that remarks of the learned Chief Justice, when delivering the judgment of the Full Bench, suggest that he was not prepared to accept the correctness of that ruling. We find, however, that the principle laid down in Balli v. Naubat Singh (1) has been in substance accepted and followed by the Revenue Court since that decision was pronounced. Reference may be made to the notes by Mr. M. L. Agarwala in his valuable commentary on the N.-W. P. Tenancy Act, fifth edition, at pages 40 et seq. of that edition. Moreover, there is a decision of the Board of Revenue, Champa Kuar v. Pati Ram (3), which deals with the position of a squatter occupying agricultural land for cultivating purposes, and which adopts the principle of the case of Balli v. Naubat Singh (1) to its fullest extent. In this state of authorities I should be prepared personally to stand by the reported decisions directly bearing on the question before us. Moreover, I think that, there being nothing in favour of the defendant on the merits, it is not incumbent on us to go out of our way to insist upon any legal technicalities for the sake of enabling the defendant to prolong this litigation. The decision in the case of Champa Kuar v. Pati Ram (3) is by the Senior Member of the present Board of Revenue; and it is quite clear that if the defendant had got what he asked for, namely, a re-consideration of the Assistant Collector's order by the higher Revenue Courts, the result would have been to affirm his ejectment.

So far as the Civil Courts are concerned they have already decided in favour of the plaintiffs-respondents, and, if the

(1) 16 Ind. Cas. 120; 9 A. L. J. 771.

(2) 20 Ind. Cas. 892; 35 A. 512 at p. 516; 11 A. L. J. 786.

(3) 33 Ind. Cas. 70.

*Page of 35 A.—Ed.

present matter could rightly be taken cognisance of by the Civil Courts, they could not have come to a different decision from that arrived at by the Assistant Collector.

The defendant's possession is wholly unlawful and the order of ejectment a proper order on the merits. There are thus abundant reasons for dismissing these appeals.

WALSH, J.—I agree; particularly I accept the cases of Balli v. Naubat Singh (1) and Champa Kuar v. Pati Ram (3) as the correct expression of the law. I am not satisfied that in Nandan Singh v. Gaya Parshad (2) the Full Bench intended to dissent from the case of Balli v Naubat Singh (1), which was relied on by the appellant who succeeded; but I think the dictum at the foot of page 515 in XXXV Allahabad requires further consideration. Apparently the Chief Justice thought that section 34 of Act II of 1901 could only be made to work so long as the person was occupying the land "without permission" of the landlord. The words in the section are not "without permission." I am satisfied that the words "a person occupying land without the consent of the landlord" mean one who enters into occupation without express consent or without any previous arrangement with him. Two reasons seemed to me very strong to show this. If section 34 can be worked only against a person who having entered as a trespasser continues in possession "without permisssion" of the landlord, it is difficult to see how the landlord is to get rent from a person who does remain in possession with his permission, Secondly, such a person is said by the section not to be deemed to hold the land within the meaning of section 11 of the Agra Tenancy Act until he begins to pay rent. Section 11 deals only with tenants and I cannot see how such a person could be deemed to be a tenant within section 11 so as to make it necessary for the Legislature to exclude him from the operation of section 11, unless he was occupying with the permission of the landlord. I think this consideration lends additional weight to the view of Sir George Knox and of the Senior Member of the Board and I agree with my learned brother that the defendant is liable to be ejected by the Revenue Courts.

BY THE COURT.—We dismiss this appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL 213-B OF 1916.

February 27, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Prideaux, A. J. C.

KRISHNAJI HATKAR—DEFENDANT No. 4 —APPELLANT

versus

RAOJI AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS AND DEFENDANT—RESPONDENTS.

Mortgage—Ejectment, suit for—Redemption, whether can be allowed.

A Court can in its discretion pass a decree for redemption in a suit in which the plaintiff sues for ejectment. [p. 921 col. 2.]

Parshotam Bhaishankar v. Rumal Zunjar, 20 B. 196; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 689, Kokilasari Dasi v. Mohunt Rudranand Goswami, 5 C. L. J. 527, Mahomed Ibrahim v. Hamja Mahomedally: 12 Ind. Cas. 387; 13 Bom. L. R. 895; 35 B. 507, followed.

Appeal from the decree of the Court of the District Judge, East Berar, Amraoti, dated the 25th January 1916, in Appeal No. 38 of 1915.

Mr. M. Bhawani Shankar, for the Appellant.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal has no force in it. The finding that the sale of 1897 by Sonba to the extent of a $\frac{2}{3}$rd share in Survey No. 21 is not binding on the present plaintiffs is not challenged. It is admitted, therefore, that they are entitled to redeem the $\frac{1}{3}$rd share of the field but in a separate suit and not in the present suit. The main point argued is that an amendment of the plaint of 1914 converting the suit as regards the present appellant from one of ejectment to one of redemption should not be allowed. Now there is authority showing that a Court can in its discretion pass a decree for redemption in a case in which the plaintiff sued for an ejectment: see Parshotam Bhaishankar v. Rumal Zunjar (1), Kokilasari Dasi v. Mohunt

(1) 20 B. 196; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 689.

Rudranand Goswami (2) and Mahomed Ibrahim v. Hamja Mahomedally (3). If ever a case existed in which this discretion should be exercised it is the present one. The fact that this would be done was foreshadowed in the remand order of the District Judge dated the 1st December 1909 and was clearly dealt with in the remand order of the Additional District Judge dated the 7th November 1913. No appeal was filed by the present appellant against those two remand orders. He lets the case proceed for another 5 years and then attacks the final decision on the ground that amendment should not have been allowed. The case had been pending since 1906. In this appeal no objection is taken to the amount fixed as annual profits of the $\frac{2}{3}$rd share in the field. In my opinion the amendment was rightly allowed. I, therefore, dismiss the appeal with costs. Appellant will pay respondent's costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(2) 5 C. L. J. 527.
(3) 12 Ind. Cas. 387; 13 Bom. L. R. 895; 35 B. 507.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 3236 OF 1915.

February 27, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Richardson and Mr. Justice Walmsley.

BABU RAM DHENG AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

UPENDRA NATH KOLEY AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII B.C. of 1885), ss. 22 (2), 85 (1)—Landlord purchasing raiyati *interest in execution of money decree, whether can eject under-raiyat—Amending Act I B. C. of 1907, change made by, in s 22, cl. (2), of Bengal Tenancy Act.*

A landlord who purchases a raiyati interest at a sale in execution of a decree for money is in no better position than the landlord who purchases such interest under a private alienation consequently he cannot insist upon any right which he as landlord might otherwise have had under section 85 (1) of the Bengal Tenancy Act to treat the under-raiyat as a mere trespasser. [p. 923, col. 1.]

As regards clause (2) of section 22 of the Bengal Tenancy Act the change made by the Amending Act of 1907 does not seem to have altered the law as previously understood. A fractional landlord who gets a transfer of an occupancy holding still acquires from the raiyat some sort of tenancy or intermediate interest (except the right of occupancy) which prevents him from treating the under-raiyat as a trespasser. [p. 923, cols. 1 & 2.]

Appeal against the decree of the Subordinate Judge, Zillah Hooghly, dated the 11th September 1915, affirming that of the Munsif, Sreerampore, dated the 12th July 1914.

Babus Sib Chandra Palit and Jadunath Mondal, for the Appellants.

Babu Lalit Mohun Banerjee, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

RICHARDSON, J.—The appellants before us are the plaintiffs in a suit for possession. They claim the right to possess the land to which the suit relates as under-raiyats. The defendants include some of the co-sharer-landlords of the original raiyati holding. They have purchased the holding in execution of a decree for money obtained by them against the original raiyat. It is alleged that after their purchase they sub-let the land to the original raiyats, that is, to the persons under whom or under whose predecessor the plaintiffs originally came in as under-raiyats. These persons have also been made defendants. The Court of Appeal below has dismissed the suit on the ground that under section 85 (1) of the Bengal Tenancy Act the plaintiffs have no valid title to possession as against the landlord-defendants.

The conclusion seems to me to be based on a misapplication to the facts found of the law contained in the Bengal Tenancy Act as explained and illustrated by decided cases. The present case is clearly within the principle of such cases as Amirullah Mahomed v. Nazir Mahomed (1) and Lal Mahomed Sarkar v. Jagir Sheikh Mallik (2). The distinction between the position of a landlord who purchases a raiyati interest under a private alienation and the position of the landlord who purchases that interest in execution of a decree for arrears of rent at a sale under the Bengal Tenancy

(1) 34 C. 104; 3 C. L. J. 155.
(2) 2 Ind. Cas. 654; 13 C. W. N. 913.

Act is also adverted to in the case of Janaki Nath Hore v. Prabhasini Dasi (3). The landlord who purchases at a sale in execution of a decree for money is in no better position than the landlord who purchases under a private alienation. In both cases the purchaser is the purchaser of the right, title and interest of the raiyat.

No doubt the law as it was laid down in the two earlier of the cases to which I have referred, more especially in the case reported as Lal Mahomed Sarkar v. Jagir Sheikh Mallik (2), depended to some extent upon the provisions of section 22 of the Act as they originally stood, and not upon those provisions as modified by the Amending Act of 1907. Moreover both cases were decided under clause (1) of the section while the present case, the purchase of the holding having been made by some of the co-sharers-landlords, falls to be decided under clause (2). But the result arrived at in the two cases in regard to transfers under clause (1) had already been arrived at by a Full Bench in regard to transfers under clause (2) [Ram Mohan Pal v. Sheikh Kachu (4)]. I have referred to the two cases because they explain the principle more fully and illustrate its effect upon the position of the under-raiyat let in by the transferring raiyat. Under both clauses (1) and (2) in their original form the effect was that only the occupancy right and not the entire interest of the transferring raiyat came to an end and the transferee landlord (whether a sole landlord or a fractional landlord) could not say that the whole tenancy had been extinguished. Some intermediate interest still remained derived by the landlord from the raiyat which prevented the landlord from insisting upon any right which he might otherwise have had under section 85 (1) to treat the under-raiyat as a mere trespasser.

It is unnecessary on the present occasion to consider the effect on the case-law of the change made in the language of clause (1) of section 22.

As regards clause (2) the change does not seem for the present purpose to have altered the law as previously understood. The fractional landlord still appears to acquire from the raiyat some sort of tenancy or intermediate interest with the same effect as regards the right to treat the under-raiyat as a trespasser as before. Other, and possibly more difficult, problems may arise, but for the present purpose the topic need not be further pursued.

In my opinion the judgment and decree of the Subordinate Judge in the lower Appellate Court must be discharged and the case must be remitted to that Court in order that it may determine the issue dealt with by the Munsif but not dealt with by the Subordinate Judge, whether the plaintiffs have proved their title as under-raiyats under the original raiyats. If that issue is decided against the plaintiffs the suit will be dismissed. If it is decided in favour of the plaintiffs, a decree will be made entitling them to khas possession of the land in dispute and, unless the Subordinate Judge is able to dispose of the question either by agreement of parties or on the materials on the record, remitting the case to the Trial Court for further enquiry as regards the claim for mesne profits.

WALMSLEY, J.—I agree.

Case remitted.

(3) 30 Ind. Cas. 898; 19 C. W. N. 1077 at 1081; 22 C. L. J. 99; 43 C. 178.

(4) 32 C. 386; 9 C. W. N. 249; 1 C. L. J. 1 (F. B.).

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 349 OF 1915.

January 29, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Piggott and Mr. Justice Walsh.

L. W. ORDE—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Land Acquisition Act (I of 1894), ss. 23, 49—Compound appurtenant to house under cultivation of occupancy tenants, whether can be treated as 'building site'—Compensation, assessment of, mode of—Annual profits, whether can form basis of award—Market value.

A compound appurtenant to a house but in cultivating possession of occupancy tenants was acquired under the Land Acquisition Act and compensation was assessed on the basis of 16 years' purchase of the annual profits then derived by the owner from the land. The owner objected that compensation should have been assessed according to the market value of the land considered as a building site:

ORDE v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA.

Held, that the method of assessment was correct as the land in suit was not at the disposal of the owner for sale as building site, inasmuch as any one desiring to acquire it for that purpose would have to deal not only with the owner but also with the occupancy tenants having vested rights not transferable except under stringent limitations laid down by the Tenancy Act. [p. 925, col. 1.]

First appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Meerut.

Mr. Sital Prasad Ghose, for the Appellant.

Mr. A. E. Ryves (Government Advocate), for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal in a land acquisition case. The plot of land in question is situated at Meerut and is required by Government for the purpose of a boarding-house in connection with an important school. The owner objected to the District Judge against the sum awarded by the Collector, but his objections failed and he has appealed to this Court against the order of the District Judge. The memorandum of appeal before us raises three points: two of which may be briefly disposed of. The plot of land in suit forms part of a compound appurtenant to a house owned by the appellant, and the point as taken in the memorandum of appeal before us is that the District Judge has erred in refusing to enforce in favour of the appellant the provisions of section 49 of the Land Acquisition Act (No. I of 1894), according to which the appellant was entitled to claim that the entire compound should be acquired. As a matter of fact the point has not been argued before us precisely in this form. It has rather been contended that the provisions of section 23, clause (1) (thirdly), have been overlooked by the Court below, and that the compensation awarded should have been increased upon an estimate of the damage presumably sustained by the appellant in consequence of the severance of this parcel of land from the rest of the compound. If we thought that injustice had been done to the appellant in the Court below, merely because he had failed to make it sufficiently clear by his pleadings whether he was desiring to claim his remedy under section 49 or under section 23 aforesaid, we should not have felt that there was any technical objection in the way of our doing substantial justice. We find that this point has been considered in all its bearings and has been disposed of by the learned District Judge. The fact is that, although the land in suit may be spoken of in a sense as forming part of the compound of a house, the area in question has not been kept up as a compound. Both the plot of land in suit and the adjoining area have been brought under cultivation and occupancy tenants are in cultivating possession of the same. Under these circumstances it does not appear that any case is made out for a claim for enhanced compensation on the ground of damage from severance. The third plea on appeal is as to the alleged under-valuation of the well situated on the plot of land in suit. It is sufficient to say about this that the learned District Judge was right in remarking that, on the materials available on this record, there was no case made out for increasing the sum awarded by the Collector under this head. There remains the more substantial plea taken in the second paragraph of the memorandum of appeal. It is contended that the land in question, although at present under cultivation and held by occupancy tenants, has a value as a building site which has been entirely disregarded by the Court below. We have been referred to the case of Bombay Improvement Trust v. Jalbhoy Ardesir Sett (1), where the principles applicable to the acquisition of land in respect of which there exists more than one interest have been discussed and laid down. We do not see that these principles have been overlooked by the Court below. The learned District Judge has taken into consideration what the market value of this land might be, if it were vacant and available for building purposes. He has estimated its value from this point of view at Rs. 500 a bigha. The memorandum of appeal before us seems to accept this valuation as more or less adequate from the point of view on which it proceeds. In argument our attention has been drawn to portions of the evidence from which it might be inferred that even this sum of Rs. 500 a bigha was an under-valuation, but on the evidence as a whole there seems no reason why it should not be accepted as far as it goes. As the learned District Judge, however, points out, the difficulty of this case lies in the fact that the land in suit was not at the disposal of the appellant for sale as a building site. Any one desiring to acquire it for that purpose would have to deal, not merely with the appellant, but with the occupancy tenants, who have vested rights not transferable except under stringent limitations as laid down in the Tenancy Act. Taking this matter into consideration, the learned District Judge has come to the conclusion that the value of this land to the appellant himself does not exceed the sum which has been allowed by the Collector, calculated on the basis of so many years' purchase of the annual profits actually derived by him from it at the present time. We have been asked to consider what has been actually paid by Government under the orders of the Collector to the occupancy tenants for the purchase of their rights; but the occupancy tenants accepted the Collector's valuation and their case was not before the Court below. Had the occupancy tenants given evidence in the present case, and established the fact that they would have been prepared at any time to surrender their rights to their proprietor for the time being, in return for the sum which was awarded to them as compensation by the Collector, there might have been some basis for the contention that the award in favour of the present appellant should be increased by the difference between the market value of the land as a building site, calculated at the presumed rate of Rs. 500 a bigha, and the sum total of the compensation awarded by the Collector to the appellant and to the occupancy tenants. There is, however, no such evidence on the record and the mere acquiescence by the occupancy tenants in the Collector's award by no means suggests, as a necessary inference, the fact that they would not have stood out for a higher price if they had found themselves bargaining with a proposed purchaser of the proprietary rights. It seems, therefore, that no cause has been shown for interference with the order of the Court below. We dismiss the appeal with costs.

(1) 3 Ind. Cas. 757; 33 B 483; 11 Bom. L. R. 674.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 3185 OF 1915.

January 31, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Richardson and Mr. Justice Beachcroft.

PROBODH CHANDRA MITRA—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

INDRA CHANDRA CHAULE—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Landlord and tenant—Consent decree limiting remedy of landlord to eject tenant in case of refusal to cultivate—Landlord, right of, to sue for rent when land left uncultivated.

Where according to the terms of a consent decree, in the event of the defendant-tenant refusing to cultivate the land and to render the plaintiff landlord his share of the produce, the only remedy which the plaintiff would have was to eject the defendant:

Held, that the clause relating to ejectment was in the nature of a clause for re-entry and had not the effect of depriving the landlord of his ordinary right to sue for the arrears of rent due by the tenant. [p. 926, col. 2.]

Appeal against the decree of the Subordinate Judge, Hooghly, dated the 11th September 1915, reversing that of the Munsif, Uluberia, dated the 9th June 1914.

FACTS material to the report as found by the Subordinate Judge in appeal were as follows:—

'As to the appeal I think it should succeed. The auction-purchase by the admitted superior landlords took place on 14th August 1911, as Exhibit F the sale-certificate shows. The rent decree in execution whereof that sale took place was obtained in Rent Suit No. 496 of 1907. The rent decrees Exhibits 6 and 7, in which the present plaintiff was impleaded as a defendant, were obtained for the arrears of rents due for the years 1914 to 1917. It is easy to see therefore that the Rent Suit No. 496 of 1907 was for a period prior to that of suits in which the decrees Exhibits 6 and 7 were passed. I, therefore, cannot agree with the learned Munsif that the decrees Exhibits 6 and 7 go to show that after their aforesaid purchase the superior landlords did not take actual possession, inasmuch as the decree Exhibit 6 was passed on 1st August 1911 and the decree Exhibit 7 was passed on 28th August 1911 while the aforesaid purchase of the landlords was confirmed on 18th September 1911. Now in his objection under rule 100, Order XXI, of the Civil Procedure Code as per Exhibit A the plaintiff admitted his dispossesion on the landlords' taking possession in pursuance of their purchase as per sale-certificate Exhibit F. This clearly took place subsequent to the passing of the rent-decrees Exhibits 6 and 7 aforesaid. The learned Munsif observed that although the plaintiff alleged dispossession still the Court had found that there was no dispossession. I do not think that on the face of the plaintiff's admission as per Exhibit A, viz., his objection under rule 100, Order XXI, Civil Procedure Code, that finding of the Court should be acted upon. In reality the superior landlords took formal possession after their purchase and subsequently exercised their right by letting out the lands to another person; no matter if that person happened to be a brother of the present defendant. This man is separate in mess from the defendant and was proved to have been in possession of the lands during the disputed period by virtue of his lease from the superior landlords. This was tantamount to the plaintiff's ouster, and being out of possession the plaintiff was not at all competent to recover the bhag crops for the year in suit. The decree of the Court below should, therefore, be set aside and the plaintiff's suit should be dismissed."

Babu Shib Chandra Palit, for the Appellant.

Babu Rupendra Kumar Mitter, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

RICHARDSON, J.—On the facts as found by the learned Subordinate Judge in the Court of Appeal below it does not appear that the defendant-respondent was evicted from the land which he held under the plaintiff by title paramount. The Subordinate Judge seems to be in error in holding that the rent claimed by the plaintiff is not due and payable by the defendant. We have been referred to a consent decree. It is argued that according to the terms of that decree in the event of the defendant refusing to cultivate the land and to render the plaintiff his share of the produce, the only remedy which the plaintiff has is to eject the defendant. As I understand the decree, however, the clause relating to ejectment is in the nature of a clause for re-entry and the document has not the effect of depriving the plaintiff as landlord of his ordinary right as such to sue for the arrears of rent due by the tenant. In this view the appeal should be allowed, the judgment and decree of the lower Appellate Court set aside and the decree of the Trial Court restored with costs throughout.

BEACHCROFT, J.—I agree.

Appeal allowed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 510 OF 1916.

September 10, 1917.

Present:—Sir Basil Scott, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Batchelor.

BAI JAYAGAVRI—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

PURSHOTAMDAS SUNDERLAL—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Transfer of Property (Act IV of 1882), s. 41—Transfer by ostensible owner—Consent of Hindu widow, whether consent of person interested—Mortgage—Endorsement of satisfaction without consideration, effect of—Assignee of mortgagee rights—Bona fide purchaser for value—Adverse possession against remainderman.

The principle of English Law that a deed imports consideration has no application to India, and an endorsement on a mortgage-deed that the mortgage has been satisfied made without consideration amounts only to a gratuitous promise not binding on the releasor. [p. 927, col. 2.]

An assignee of an equity of redemption who claims also to be an assignee of the mortgagee's rights but who has taken no re-transfer of the property from the mortgagee or his representatives, and whose assignor has taken no re-transfer of those rights, cannot set up the plea of bona fide purchaser for value without notice. [p. 927, col. 2.]

Where property is held by a Hindu widow under a life-interest adverse possession begins to run against the reversioner on the termination of the widow's interest. [p. 927, col. 2.]

Quære:—Whether the "consent of the person interested" required by section 41 of the Transfer of Property Act can be said to be furnished where the only consent given is that of a Hindu widow, as tenant for life, the remainderman being no party to such consent.

Second appeal from the decision of the District Judge, Broach, in Appeal No. 51 of 1915, amending the decree passed by the Additional Subordinate Judge, Broach, in Civil Suit No. 183 of 1914.

Mr. T. R. Desai, for the Appellant.

Mr. G. N. Thakor, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—In 1885 Pranjivan became the mortgagee of the plaint property. In 1890, the right, title and interest of the mortgagor was purchased by the predecessors of the defendants Nos. 1 and 2. In 1899, Pranjivan died leaving a widow Hariganga and a daughter's daughter, the plaintiff. He also left a Will whereby substantially the widow Hariganga was given a life-interest in the property, and the grand-daughter the remainder absolutely. In 1900, the defendant No. 3 who was a confidential clerk of Hariganga purchased from defendants Nos. 1 and 2 the equity of redemption in the mortgage. He says that, on the 5th of April 1900, he paid off the mortgage. The mortgage-deed bears an endorsement that the mortgage is satisfied. But it is found as a fact in both Courts that the endorsement is a sham, that nothing was really paid in satisfaction of the mortgage, and that the mortgage still subsists. No transfer of the property was taken by the 3rd defendant from the representative of the mortgagee, Hariganga. The 3rd defendant, on the 15th of February 1912, transferred the property to the 4th defendant. In 1914, Hariganga died, and this suit is filed by the plaintiff, the remainderman under the mortgagee's Will, to recover possession as mortgagee from the 4th defendant, or to recover the amount of the mortgage debt. The 4th defendant pleads that he is a bona fide purchaser for valuable consideration without notice. The learned District Judge has held that this plea is established. We are unable, however, to agree with this conclusion.

It is stated in Coote on Mortgages, page 1425 of the 8th Edition, that "where...a mortgagee desires to release his debtor without consideration, he can only effectually do so at law by deed; for, otherwise, there would be a mere gratuitous promise by the mortgagee to forbear from exercising his rights of action to enforce payment, which, by an elementary rule of law, would not be binding on the releasor." The method of procedure by deed, on the principle that a deed imports consideration, has no application in India. It follows that the endorsement in question amounts merely to a gratuitous promise not binding on the releasor. And that indeed is the conclusion arrived at by the learned Judge himself when he holds that the endorsement was a sham, that nothing was paid in satisfaction of it, and that the mortgage still subsists.

The appeal to section 41 of the Transfer of Property Act cannot avail the appellant for the defendant No. 3 never became the ostensible owner, inasmuch as there was no transfer to him from Hariganga, in whom consequently the title always remained. Moreover, it appears to us doubtful whether the required "consent of the persons interested" can be said to be furnished where the only consent given is that of a Hindu widow as tenant for life, the remainderman being no party to such consent.

Here, then, we have the assignee of an equity of redemption, who claims also to be an assignee of the mortgagee's rights who has taken no re-transfer of the property from the mortgagee or his representative, and whose assignor has taken no re-transfer of those rights. The mortgage-deed is registered, and the purchaser must be taken to have notice that there has been no re transfer. It is no doubt true that his transferor had possession which was obtained, as it appears, out of affection from the widow of the mortgagee, and that possession would enure for the benefit of the assignee, the 4th defendant, so long as the life-tenant of the mortgagee-testator survived. But it could not prejudice the remainderman on the principle which is frequently applied as between landlord and persons claiming adversely to a lessee, and which is stated in Shelford's Real Property Statutes, p. 169, thus: "Where property is under lease, adverse possession runs against the reversioner from the expiration of the lease, or from the time when the tenant pays rent to one claiming wrongfully to be entitled in immediate reversion."

KRISHNA MALI v. DEOLIA.

The present case appears to be one of a type which is very common in India, where the purchaser has not taken the trouble to investigate the title of his transferor. It is not safe, and very often it is not honest, to take an assignment of a property in which investigation would show that an outstanding mortgage has not been extinguished, in the hope that the person entitled to that mortgage may not assert his claim. We, therefore, do not think that the learned District Judge was right in holding that the 4th defendant was protected by the plea of bona fide purchase for value without notice, and for the reasons already indicated, we cannot hold that the possession enjoyed by him during the life of Hariganga can be taken to be adverse to the remainderman who was only entitled to assert her right when the life-tenancy of Hariganga expired.

For these reasons we set aside the decree of the District Judge and restore that of the Trial Court, the result being that the plaintiff is in the position of a mortgagee, and the 4th defendant has an opportunity of redeeming upon paying the price found to be due by the lower Court. Costs throughout to be added to the mortgage debt. The cross-objections are dismissed with costs.

Decree set aside.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 303 OF 1917.

February 25, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Prideaux, A. J. C.

KRISHNA MALI—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

DEOLIA AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Adoption of married Sudra, validity of.

The adoption of a married Sudra is invalid according to the Mitakshara as interpreted according to the Benares School of Hindu Law.

Teja Bai v. Mohanlal Marwadi, 11 C. P. L. R. 56, Jhunka Prasad v. Nathu, 18 Ind. Cas. 960; 35 A. 263 at p. 265; 11 A. L. J. 293, followed.

Appeal from the decree of the Court of the Additional District Judge, Betul, dated the 16th February 1917, in Appeal No. 4 of 1917.

Mr. A. Bhagwant, for the Appellant.

Mr. M. Gupta, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The facts of this case are given in sufficient detail in the judgments of the Courts below. I, therefore, do not repeat them here, but proceed at once to deal with the grounds of appeal. I deal with the second ground of the memorandum of appeal first. It is contended that as the parties are malis, that is Sudras, the finding that the plaintiff was a married man at the time he was adopted by Musammat Sakai cannot invalidate it. It seems to me settled law that in those parts of the country where Mitakshara is interpreted according to the Benares School a married Sudra cannot be adopted. Teja Bai v. Mohanlal Marwadi (1) and Jhunka Prasad v. Nathu (2). The finding of the Courts below is, therefore, correct and the plaintiff's adoption is invalid because he was a married man. In this view of the case it is unnecessary to consider the point raised in the first ground of appeal as to res judicata. It is contended that the ancestors of the parties migrated from Berar in which the Bombay rule of Hindu Law of adpotion prevails and brought with them their customary law. Now custom of the caste was pleaded as to the adoption of a married man, but it was nowhere pleaded that because the parties came from Berar therefore they were governed by the Bombay law that the adoption of a married man is not opposed to the doctrines of Hindu Law. This plea also was not raised in the lower Appellate Court. It is far too late to raise in second appeal questions of pure fact. As to the custom alleged, both Courts have held that it has not been established and that finding is conclusive.

(1) 11 C. P. L. R. 56 at p. 60.

(2) 18 Ind. Cas. 960; 35 A. 263 at p. 265; 11 A. L. J. 293.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.
CRIMINAL REVISION No. 945 OF 1917.
March 1, 1918.
Present:—Mr. Justice Piggott.
ABDUL LATIF KHAN—APPLICANT
versus
EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 437—Discharge of accused—Further inquiry, order for, without notice—Discretion—Practice.

Nothing in section 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code requires previous notice to any accused person who has been discharged before further inquiry into his case is ordered by a competent authority, that is to say, by the High Court, the Sessions Judge or the District Magistrate. Nevertheless as a matter of judicial discretion it is advisable that previous notice should issue when the matter for consideration is the setting aside of an order of discharge passed in favour of an accused person who has actually been before a Court to answer the facts alleged against him. [p. 929, col. 2; p. 930, col. 1.]

The fact of a person's being in the position of an accused with another during an inquiry which resulted in the order of discharge, should not at all prevent his being summoned as a witness in the further inquiry ordered. [p. 930, col. 2.]

Criminal revision from an order of the District Magistrate, Etah.

Mr. A. H. C. Hamilton, for the Applicant.

Mr. R. Malcomson (Assistant Government Advocate), for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—This application in revision arises on the following state of facts:—On the 17th of July last a woman named Dojia was struck by a bullet while she was with her husband in a field where he was working. The shot had been fired by some sportsman in the immediate neighbourhood, and it is not suggested that the injury to Musammat Dojia was anything but accidental. A number of villagers were attracted to the spot and proceeded to arrest two Mohammedans, named Abdul Latif Khan and Badal Khan, as being responsible for the injury caused to Musammat Dojia. These two men were taken to the Kasganj Police Station, some five miles distant, along with the injured woman and her husband and at the same time there was produced at the Police station a double barrelled muzzle loading gun. The two Mohammedans arrested on suspicion were admittedly strangers to Musammat Dojia and her neighbours. The Police eventually sent up one of these men, Abdul Latif Khan, for trial in respect of offences under section 338 of the Indian Penal Code and section 19 of the Indian Arms Act. The Magistrate who took cognizance of the matter began by issuing process against the other stranger, Badal Khan; but after taking the evidence discharged both the accused persons. The order of discharge is dated September the 21st, 1917. The gun in question, although bearing a serial number and therefore having apparently at some time or other been held lawfully under a license, could not be traced in the Etah district; and it is admitted that Abdul Latif Khan and Badal Khan held no license to possess fire-arms of any description. Representations were made to the District Magistrate as to the impropriety of the order of discharge, and on the 10th of November 1917 the District Magistrate, after examining the record, passed an elaborate order, reviewing the evidence discussing the comments made on the same by the Trying Magistrate and finally directing further inquiry to be made as regards Abdul Latif Khan. This order was, of course, passed under section 437 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. It is quite clear that no previous notice had been issued to Abdul Latif Khan to show cause why the order of discharge passed in his favour should not be set aside. A curious feature of the case is that before that order had been set aside at all, that is to say, on the 7th of November 1917, another First Class Magistrate of the Etah district had taken cognizance of the offence and had issued process to Abdul Latif Khan to appear and answer charges under section 338 of the Indian Penal Code and section 19 of the Indian Arms Act. However, the question whether Abdul Latif Khan could have been re-tried by another Magistrate without the order of discharge passed on the 21st of September 1917 being first set aside, is not now before me and I need not discuss it. The application in revision which I have to consider is against the District Magistrate's order of November the 10th, 1917.

Now it is beyond question that nothing in section 437 of the Code of Criminal Procedure requires previous notice to any accused person who has been discharged before further inquiry into his case is ordered by a competent authority, that is to say, by the High Court, or the Sessions Judge or the District Magistrate. Nevertheless it has been laid down in a number of cases that as a matter of judicial discretion it is advisable that previous notice should issue, when the matter for consideration is the setting aside of an order of discharge passed in favour of an accused person who has actually been before a Court to answer the facts alleged against him. I am not aware that the decision of this Court in Queen-Empress v. Ajudhia (1), which itself follows certain older decisions, has ever been disapproved of in any subsequent decision of this Court. I am myself of opinion that in a matter of this sort it would have been better for the District Magistrate to give Abdul Latif Khan previous notice and an opportunity of arguing the case before him. I am not disposed, however, to interfere with the order of the Court below merely on this ground. If the only result of my doing so were to compel the District Magistrate to issue notice now to Abdul Latif Khan, this might only lead to the passing of another order under section 437 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and the only result would have been inconvenience to the Courts and undesirable delay in the disposal of the matter. If on the other hand, I were to take it upon myself to direct that no further proceedings be taken, I conceive that I should be straining the powers of this Court, and I am not satisfied that I should not be prejudicing the interests of justice. I have preferred to deal with the matter by asking the learned Advocate who represents Abdul Latif Khan to take this opportunity of showing cause why further enquiry should not be ordered. In substance I have dealt with the matter as if the record had been called for directly by this Court with a view to considering the propriety of the order of discharge. I do not think it would be advisable for me to enter into detail with regard to the very different opinions expressed by the Trying Magistrate and by the District Magistrate in respect of the value and reliability of the evidence produced at the original hearing. I do think, however, that the District Magistrate's order shows good and sufficient cause for further inquiry into this matter in the interests of justice. It seems practically beyond question that an offence punishable under the Indian Arms Act, as well as an offence punishable under the Indian Penal Code, were committed by some person or other on the occasion in question. I agree with the District Magistrate that it is in the interests of justice that there be further inquiry into the question whether the commission of one or both of these offences is or is not brought home to the accused Abdul Latif Khan. I think it advisable under the circumstances that this inquiry should take place outside the limits of the territorial jurisdiction of the District Magistrate of Etah. My order, therefore, is that this application for revision do stand dismissed, and that the further inquiry against Abdul Latif Khan directed by the order of 10th November 1917 be held in the district of Aligarh. I transfer the case in question to the Court of the District Magistrate of Aligarh, who may either dispose of it himself or transfer it for disposal to the Court of any First Class Magistrate subordinate to himself.

In the matter of WILLIAM TAYLER.

With regard to one matter of detail which has been pressed upon my notice, I may say that I agree with the District Magistrate that the proceedings taken against Badal Khan were injudicious, and that the fact of his having been in the position of an accused person during the inquiry which resulted in the order of discharge should in no way be considered to prevent his being summoned as a witness in the further inquiry now ordered.

Further inquiry ordered.

(1) 20 A. 339; A. W. N. (1898) 60; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 577.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

In re APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL DECREE No. 67 OF 1868.

April 24, 1869.

Present :—Sir Barnes Peacock, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Mitter.

In the matter of WILLIAM TAYLER.

Contempt of Court—High Court, power of, to punish summarily for contempt—Unjust criticism of Court's act while Court is not sitting, whether contempt—Printer and publisher of newspaper, liability of, for contempt—Punishment for contempt, mitigation of —Apology.

In the matter of WILLIAM TAYLER.

If the printer of a newspaper publishes a letter with the name of an author attached to it, he must bear the responsibility if he is unable, when required, to prove that it was published with the authority of the person by whom it purports to have been signed. [p. 953, cols. 1 & 2.]

When letters amounting to contempt of Court are published in a newspaper, the Court has its election to punish both the author and publisher of the newspaper or either of them. [p. 953, col. 1.]

If a printer prints anything that is libellous, it is no excuse to say that he had no knowledge of the contents of the paper and was entirely ignorant of its being libellous. [p. 954, col. 1.]

When contempt of a Court of Record is committed, there are two modes of proceeding open to it, one by a Rule calling upon the person charged with contempt to show cause why he should not be adjudged guilty of contempt of Court, the other by attachment under which that person might be arrested and brought into Court for a similar purpose. [p. 956, col. 1.]

The charge of contempt may be made by the Court itself upon its own knowledge of facts which, if sworn to by any one to the best of his belief, would have made a prima facie case of contempt of Court. [p. 956, col. 2.]

To charge a Judge with presumptuous tyranny for the mode in which he is proceeding in a matter pending before him or to publish anything respecting that matter, whilst it is under consideration, with a view to induce the Judge to alter his course is a grave contempt of Court. [p. 958, col. 1.]

It is a high and serious offence to cast unjust and defamatory imputations on a Judge. Judges are subject to be criticised but they must be protected from unfounded defamation. [p. 960, col. 2.]

In cases of contempt of Court by means of misrepresentation or wilful concealment of the true state of facts, a proper apology may mitigate but it cannot wholly excuse or justify the contempt or form a ground for a total exemption from punishment. [p. 962, col. 2.]

JUDGMENT.

PEACOCK, C. J.—It is always a most unpleasant duty for a Judge to be compelled to vindicate his own honour, or the dignity of the Court over which he presides, by adopting measures which may cause pain, or wound the feelings of any man. But a Judge who would shrink from the discharge of what he considers to be his public duty, merely because it is to him a painful one, is not fit to be entrusted with the office which he holds. To me the duty which I am now called upon to perform is all the more painful, because the gentleman whose conduct is called into question is one with whom in times gone by I have held social and friendly intercourse. The case is one of public importance, and I am anxious that there shall be no misunderstanding of the views and opinions of the Judges and of the reasons which induced them to adopt the course which they have pursued. Above all, I am desirous that there shall be no further misrepresentations such as those with which unhappily we are called upon to deal. I have, therefore, thought it right to enter fully into the facts and law of the case, and I have reduced into writing the greater portion of my judgment.

Mr. W. Tayler was formerly a member of the Bengal Civil Service. After his retirement he was admitted as a Vakeel of the late Sudder Court; and upon the amalgamation of the late Supreme and Sudder Courts, he, in common with all the Vakeels of the late Sudder Court, was enrolled as a Vakeel of the High Court. He subsequently carried on business as a Mooktear or law agent in the District of Patna, in which, before his retirement from the Civil Service, he had acted as Commissioner. Among other clients, he was retained by Ranee Usmedh Kower, the elder Ranee of Ticaree, for two years, upon a retaining fee of Rs. 500 a month for looking after her suits, in addition to which he was to receive a reward for every case that he might win according to its importance. Matters did not proceed amicably between Mr. Tayler and the Ranee, and the result was that two suits were commenced—one by Mr. Tayler against the Ranee to recover a sum of Rs. 29,773, consisting of Rs. 20,910 alleged to be due for principal and interest on a bond given, as Mr. Tayler alleged, for fees due to him, and Rs. 8,000 and interest alleged by Mr. Tayler to be the balance due on account of his salary or retaining fee; the other by the Ranee against Mr. Tayler to recover money alleged to have been received by him on her account.

In the suit brought by Mr. Tayler, the Court held that the bond had been improperly obtained, and the result was, that Mr. Tayler's suit was dismissed with costs, and Rs. 6,110 were decreed to the Ranee in her cross-suit. The case Ranee Usmut Koowar v. Taylor (1) is reported in the 2nd Volume, Weekly Reporter, page 307.

On the 29th January 1866, the Ranee applied to the Judge of Behar for execution, and in the month of February in that year, a tenure called Dergaon, belonging to Mr.

(1) 2 W. R. 307.

Tayler, was attached in execution. That attachment, by virtue of the provisions of section 240, Act VIII of 1859, prevented Mr. Tayler from selling the estate so long as the attachment was in force. On the 26th February a consolidated appeal to Her Majesty in Council was filed by Mr. Tayler in the two suits, and on the 8th March he obtained a Rule calling upon the Ranee to show cause why, upon his giving security, the execution should not be stayed pending the result of his appeal to Her Majesty in Council; and the sale under the attachment was stayed pending that Rule. The Rule was sent to the Judge of Behar for service, and he thereupon passed an order in the execution case that the proceedings should be stayed "for the time," that is to say, until the Rule to show cause should be disposed of; and as there was nothing which he could do in the execution case whilst that Rule was pending, he, at the time of transmitting to the High Court his return of having served the Rule upon the Ranee, ordered that the proceedings for execution should be struck off the file of cases pending in his Court.

When the Rule nisi came on for hearing in the High Court, it was considered more just that, as the Ranee had obtained a decree, she should be allowed to execute it on giving security, than that she should be restrained from realising the amount upon Mr. Tayler's giving security. Accordingly, upon the 18th May, it was ordered that the decree should be executed upon the Ranee's giving sufficient security, to the satisfaction of the Judge, for the due performance of such decree as Her Majesty in Council should make.

That Rule was received by the Judge on the 29th May, and thereupon the execution case was again numbered and restored to the file of cases pending in his Court. The Ranee, who was a lady of large property, tendered security, which was admitted on the 7th December 1866. The delay which occurred between the transmission of the Rule to the Judge and the acceptance of the security which the Ranee offered is not accounted for on the evidence in the cause. I have frequently found in cases in which execution is stayed until the decree-holder gives security, that great delay is caused by inquiries into the sufficiency of the security, to which the debtor or his agent objects merely for the purpose of delaying the execution. Whether this was the case in the present case or not does not appear, and it is not necessary to enquire. It is not likely that the Ranee, who is a lady of large property, would have had any difficulty in finding security for so small an amount, or that Mr. Tayler would have run any risk if she had been allowed to execute her decree without security. But Mr. Tayler, having appealed to Her Majesty in Council, was entitled by law to have security, and it was granted to him.

It is clear that there was no improper delay on the part of the Ranee in completing her security. Delay is not generally the game of the judgment-creditor, and it is expressly found by the Judge that there was no default by the Ranee in carrying on the case.

On the 11th day of October, Mr. Tayler sold to Musammat Zuhoorun, the wife of Ahmedoollah, for Rs. 55,000, the estate which had been attached under the Ranee's decree. Mr. Tayler says that the purchase was made by Ahmedoollah in the name of his wife. That is very probable, and I shall treat the case as if it were so, and give Mr. Tayler the full benefit of that argument. But when Ahmedoollah is described as an old Pleader at Patna, for the purpose of raising an inference that he must have known of the attachment at the time of the purchase, it must be borne in mind that the estate was at Gya and not at Patna, and that the sale was under an attachment from the Court at Gya, and not from the Court at Patna.

After the sale by Mr. Tayler, the estate was again attached by the Ranee under her decree, and the 25th February 1867 was fixed for the sale. On the 13th February Musammat Zuhoorun intervened and disputed the right of the Ranee to sell under her decree, and claimed a right to the property upon the ground that her purchase was completed before the second attachment. The case was decided against her, and an order was made that the estate should be sold. Musammat Zuhoorun thereupon satisfied the decree to prevent the sale of the estate which she had purchased and for which she had paid Mr. Tayler Rs. 55,000, and commenced a suit against him to recover Rs. 12,406, the amount which she had been compelled to pay in satisfaction of the Ranee's decree.

In the matter of WILLIAM TAYLER.

In the written complaint in that suit, it was distinctly charged that Mr. Tayler, the defendant, had concealed the fact of his liability to the Ranee under the decree and of the attachment of the estate in execution. The plaintiff stated that she had paid an adequate price for the estate, and that after the defendant, Mr. Tayler, had secured the entire purchase-money, and had conveyed the estate, and had put her in possession of it, the estate was publicly proclaimed for sale; that she intervened and objected to the sale, but that her claim as a purchaser was overruled on the 23rd February 1867; that the vendor, Mr. Tayler, having failed to satisfy the decree, she was compelled to pay the amount due under it in order to preserve the estate which she had purchased.

The following is a translation of the defence set up in the defendant's written statement put in on behalf of Mr. Tayler, and verified by Mr. Kelly, his agent. He says :—

"First.—On the principle that purchaser is bound to inform himself of all the advantageous and disadvantageous circumstances connected with the property he is going to purchase, plaintiff has no claim upon your petitioner in reference to the judgment-debt payable to Ranee Usmedh Koer, as numerous precedents of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlat and the High Court in support of this argument are extant.

Second.—If the plaintiff, without asking your petitioner and obtaining his concurrence, has, to serve her own ends, liquidated the judgment-debt due to Ranee Usmedh Koer, she cannot by any rule or regulation recover from your petitioner the money so paid.

Third.—At the time of sale, Mouzah Dargaon, in accordance with the proceedings of the Civil Court of Gya, dated 1st February 1866, A. D., and 13th February 1867, A. D., was attached and advertised for sale, and the plaintiff in full knowledge of the circumstances purchased the mouzah, and nothing was kept secret from her : on the contrary, the condition of the property was above board at the time of sale, and the plaintiff in full knowledge of all particulars, in whatsoever way acquired, purchased the property.

Fourth.—the plaintiff has purchased a most valuable property, namely, a property of the value of upwards of Rs. 88,000, for a small price of Rs. 55,000, and since she procured a property worth Rs. 88,000 for a trifling sum of Rs. 55,000, she raised no objection in reference to the decree money of Ranee Usmedh Koer, of which, in consequence of the attachment of Dergaon, she was undoubtedly cognizant, nor did she enter into any arrangements for the deduction of the amount, nor had she any document executed for her satisfaction: on the contrary, considering the bargain for Rs. 55,000, notwithstanding the payment of the decreed money, to be a cheap one, she forthwith upon securing the sale-deed paid up in a lump the whole of the purchase-money and took possession of the property. Under these circumstances, she has no reason whatever to complain, hence the suit brought by her is quite uncalled for. Your petitioner prays that for the ends of justice her claim may be dismissed."

Here let me remark that in the defence set up on the part of Mr. Tayler, no suggestion was made that the Ranee's attachment had ceased to have effect in consequence of the execution case having been struck off the file, or that the first attachment had been superseded by the second. The point was not alluded to, or even suggested : on the contrary, it was admitted that the estate was liable to be sold under the decree. The plaintiff, when she intervened and set up her purchase as a bar to a sale under the attachment, took the objection, but it was very properly overruled by the Judge in a very clear and decisive judgment, and the plaintiff satisfied the decree to save from sale the estate which she had purchased. That judgment was put in evidence in the suit against Mr. Tayler. It might just as well be contended that all the proceedings in a suit in this Court are nullified, and that the parties must commence de novo, if a case is for any reason taken out of the peremptory board. The point is too absurd for argument.

The suit proceeded, and the case was tried by Baboo Girish Chunder Ghose,

In the matter of WILLIAM TAYLER.

the Principal Sudder Ameen of Patna, who laid down two issues:—

First.—Whether or not the plaintiff has the right to a refund of the amount of Rs. 11,381-13 6 paid by her in order to save the disputed property from sale, with interest claimed by her; or whether the suit is barred by the application of the maxim of caveat emptor?

Second.—Did the plaintiff know at the time of the purchase as to the property being attached by Usmedh Kower in satisfaction of a claim against the vendor? Did the vendor inform her about the said attachment when the negotiations were completed?

As to the first issue, the Principal Sudder Ameen found that, according to the legal maxim caveat emptor, a purchaser ought to exercise a proper caution in order to ascertain the amount and nature of the interest which he is about to buy; that if, without instituting proper and sufficient enquiries within his reach, he foolishly purchases any property in which the vendor's interest was not what it was represented to be, he will not be entitled to compensation for the loss he sustains for the defectiveness of title and quality of the property bought, for it is his own folly and laches not to use the means of knowledge within his reach. He then entered into the question whether the plaintiff had made due enquiries, and finding that she had not done so, he said she must be presumed to have purchased the estate with all faults, except as to the extent of the right of the vendor. He added:—

"It is contended that the fact of the attachment was fraudulently concealed, but there is no proof whatever to support the allegation. On the other hand, such a thing as the attachment, which was known to the world so far as the village was concerned, could not by any attempt on the part of the vendor be industriously concealed, for it was known to hundreds of people residing in the village sold. The attachment would be known in no time if a proper man had been deputed to make necessary enquiries on the spot. Therefore, the concealment, if it was one, was by no means fraudulent, and, unless fraud be proved, the contract could not be annulled; and had there been anything like fraud on the part of the vendor, the plaintiff would undoubtedly have come to the Court for the cancellation of the contract. As there was no legal fraud on the part of the vendor the cause of the complaint falls to the ground, and hence it is to be presumed that, with the liability existing on the property, the plaintiff has purchased the same."

He, therefore, ordered the suit to be dismissed with costs.

In the latter part of his judgment the Principal Sudder Ameen alluded to a contention on the part of the plaintiff that the execution case had been struck off the file and subsequently revived, and added:—

"Admitting her contention to be correct I see no force in it, for the simple reason that, in that case, she was not bound to pay the amount due to the decree holder; and in case the property was sold, she, as a third party, might have sued for the cancellation of the sale on the ground that there existed no attachment before the sale."

It is not very clear why such a contention should have been urged on the part of the plaintiff in the suit. It was her contention when she intervened and disputed the Ranee's right to sell under the attachment and probably there may have been some confusion as to the time at which such contention was put forward on her behalf. But it is not very material.

The result of that decision, if upheld, would have been that Mr. Tayler would have had his judgment debt satisfied by the plaintiff, and that she would have had no redress against him.

Mr. Tayler in his letters has cited from "Shakespeare," but he has not made any quotation from a "New way to pay old debts."

The plaintiff appealed to the High Court from the judgment of the Principal Sudder Ameen; and amongst other grounds she urged to the effect—first, that the defendant could not take advantage of his own wrong; second, that the doctrine of caveat emptor did not apply to a case like this, in which fraud was alleged as the cause of action; seventh, that the very circumstance of the defendant's concealing the fact of attachment on decree was sufficient to show a fraudulent concealment, as Mr. Tayler was well aware of such attachment, and sufficient to fix him with liability, unless he proves that the plaintiff purchased with knowledge and paid inadequate value, and eighth, that the case was not one of voluntary payment, for the recovery of the money was sought, not from the judgment-debtor, but from the vendor.

The appeal was heard in the First Bench before the Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter. The case was very fully and ably argued by Mr. Paul as Counsel on behalf of Mr. Tayler; the evidence on both sides was fully considered, and every attention and consideration was given to the case which it was in the power of the Court to bestow. It was very properly admitted on behalf of Mr. Tayler, for it could not possibly be denied, that the payment was not voluntary, and the Chief Justice was so fully satisfied of the plaintiff's right to recover upon the ground that she had been compelled to pay Mr. Tayler's debt in order to protect from sale, under the Ranee's decree, the estate which she had purchased from Mr. Tayler, that he did not consider it necessary to express any decided opinion upon the other points of the case, viz., whether there was concealment or no concealment, fraud or no fraud. He says :—

"It appears to me that this is a very clear case. The plaintiff seeks to recover the sum of Rs. 12,406-7-0, which she paid on account of Mr. William Tayler in discharge of a decree which Ranee Usmedh Koer had recovered against him. It is almost unnecessary to consider whether the plaintiff was a volunteer in paying this money, or whether she paid it under compulsion, because it has been admitted by Mr. Paul, the learned Counsel of Mr. Tayler, that the payment was not a voluntary one.

"It appears that the plaintiff purchased an estate from Mr. W. Tayler for the sum of Rs. 55,000; that before the sale to the plaintiff that estate had been attached in execution of the decree; and that the plaintiff paid the amount of the decree and interest in order to prevent the property which she had purchased from being sold in execution. It is said by Mr. Tayler that although the property was sold for Rs. 55,000 it was worth a great deal more; and in proof of that assertion he has called a witness, who, if he is to be believed, has shown that Mr. Tayler's estimate of the value was very much under the mark, inasmuch as the estate was worth two lakhs. I do not believe the evidence of that witness. It is improbable that he, acting as the agent of Mr. Tayler, would have sold for Rs. 55,000 a property which was worth two lakhs; but whether it was worth Rs. 55,000, Rs. 88,000, or two lakhs, is wholly immaterial for the decision of this case.

"By section 235 of the Code of Civil Procedure, when property is to be attached in execution of a decree, the attachment is to be made by a written order prohibiting the defendant from alienating the property by sale, gift, or in any other way, and all persons from receiving the same by purchase, gift, or otherwise; and by section 240 of the same Act, it is enacted that when any attachment shall have been made by actual seizure, any private alienation of the property attached, whether by sale, gift, or otherwise, shall be null and void.

"Mr. Tayler, therefore, must, before he sold the property, have been served with an order from the Court prohibiting him from alienating it. He must have been fully aware at the time of the sale that any sale by him would be liable to be defeated by the decree-holder.

"Several witnesses have been called on the part of the defendant, and have proved that the plaintiff at the time that she purchased the estate was aware of the attachment. Enayut Hossein swore that he informed the husband of the plaintiff of the attachment at the time of the execution of the deed of sale. Shaik Ensoof Hossein swore that Enaynt Hossein told the husband of the plaintiff in his presence in the house of Wilayat Ali Khan, where the consideration money was paid; and yet Enayut Hossein, who was acting for Mr. Tayler in selling the property, upon cross-examination, stated that he did not remember at what place he told Ahmedoollah about the lien. Ahmedoollah, on the other hand, swears that he never knew of the attachment and if it were necessary to decide upon the conflicting testimony of the witnesses in the cause, I should have little hesitation in deciding that the plaintiff, at the time of the payment of the purchase-money, was not aware of the attachment. It is hardly likely that, if she had been aware of the attachment, something would not have been said upon the subject. Enayut Hossein, who, according to his own evidence, took the precaution of telling Ahmedoollah about the attachment, swears that he was acting for both parties; and yet, according to his evidence, nothing appears to have been said at the time of the sale as to whether the plaintiff, in consequence of her being allowed to purchase the estate for what Mr. Tayler calls the trifling sum of Rs. 55,000, was to take upon herself to discharge the debt which Mr. Tayler owed the Ranee. Even supposing the plaintiff made a good bargain in buying this estate for Rs. 55,000, there was no obligation on her part, because she got the estate cheap, to pay Mr. Tayler's debt.

"If it had been intended that she was not only to pay the Rs. 55,000 to Mr. Tayler, but was also to pay off the debt which Mr. Tayler owed to the Ranee, the purchase-money would have been stated, as suggested by Mr. Twidale, to be the Rs. 55,000 and the amount of the debt added; and part of the purchase-money would have been paid to the decree-holder in satisfaction of her decree. It is clearly beyond all doubt that the plaintiff has paid Mr. Tayler's debt; that she was under no legal obligation to pay that debt as between her and Mr. Tayler; that she did not pay the debt voluntarily, but under compulsion, to save the estate which she had purchased, and for which she had paid, from sale in execution of the decree; and under the ordinary rules of law, of justice, and of equity, Mr. Tayler, who has had the benefit of having his debt discharged by the plaintiff, would be bound to repay the amount. Even if the plaintiff knew that Mr. Tayler owed the money, and that the estate had been attached, that fact would make no difference, unless she came under an obligation to Mr. Tayler to pay off that debt in consideration of his allowing her to have the estate for Rs. 55,000; yet Mr. Tayler contends that, because she got the estate cheap, she was bound to satisfy the decree against him. I see no reason to believe that Mr. Tayler would have sold the estate to the plaintiff or to any one else for Rs. 55,000 if he could have got two lakhs, or even Rs. 88,000 from any other person. This lady was no more bound, without a contract, to pay Mr. Tayler's debt, because she got the estate for Rs. 55,000, than she was to repay Mr. Tayler the difference between Rs. 55,000 and Rs. 88,000, the amount at which he now values it, or the two lakhs at which it was valued by his agent.

"In the case of Exall v. Partridge (2), which was decided on the principles of justice, applicable as much in the Mofussil as they are in England, it was held that where the goods of a stranger were on the premises of another person and were distrained by the landlord for rent in arrear, and the stranger was obliged to pay the rent in order to redeem his goods, he might recover the money paid from those who owed the rent.

"It was said by one of the Judges that 'the plaintiff could not relieve himself from the distress without paying the rent. It was not, therefore, a voluntary, but a compulsory payment. Under these circumstances, the law implies a promise by the three defendants to repay the plaintiff.'

"Another of the Judges said, 'one of the propositions stated by the plaintiff's Counsel certainly cannot be supported, that whoever is benefited by a payment made by another is liable to an action of assumpsit by that other, for one person cannot, by a voluntary payment, cause an assumpsit against another; but here was a distress for rent due from the three defendants, the notice of distress expressed the rent to be due from them all, the money was paid by the plaintiff in satisfaction of a demand on all, and it was paid by compulsion. Therefore, I am of opinion that this action may be maintained against all the three defendants.'

"Here, then, was a debt of Mr. Tayler's paid under compulsion by a person who was under no obligation to pay it, and the plaintiff is entitled to recover the amount. It is unnecessary, therefore, to consider or to decide whether there was any fraudulent concealment on the part of Mr. Tayler of the fact that the estate had been attached, or to enter into the question whether the recital in the deed amounted to a covenant that Mr. Tayler had power to sell.

"The legal maxim caveat emptor has been misapplied. It is wholly inapplicable, and has no bearing whatever upon the present case.

(2) (1799) 8 T. R. 308; 101 E. R. 1405.

"The Principal Sudder Ameen says that 'the concealment, if it was one, was by no means fraudulent,' but I feel at a loss to understand what notions the Principal Sudder Ameen entertains of fraud, when he holds that if a gentleman sells an estate which he knows has been attached under a decree against him, and conceals the fact from the purchaser, and receives the purchase-money, the concealment is one which does not fall within the class of fraudulent.

"Cases have been cited to show that if an execution case is struck off the file, the attachment which has been made under the execution necessarily falls to the ground.

"Section 245 of the Code of Civil Procedure enacts, that 'if the amount decreed with costs, and all charges and expenses which may be incurred by the attachment, be paid into Court, or if satisfaction of the decree be otherwise made, an order shall be issued for the withdrawal of the attachment; and if the defendant shall desire it, and shall deposit in Court a sum sufficient to cover the expense, the order shall be proclaimed or intimated in the same manner as hereinbefore prescribed for the proclamation or intimation of the attachment, and such steps shall be taken as may be necessary for staying further proceedings in execution of the decree.'

"I find no authority in Act VIII of 1859 for saying that an attachment is at an end if the execution case is struck off the file; and, therefore, if it became necessary to decide upon that point, I should refer the case to a Full Bench.

"No one, I presume, will contend that if a Judge finds that he has struck off an execution case improperly, he cannot restore it to the file, but that the case must proceed de novo. In this case, according to the statement, which must be taken all together, 'the execution decree case had been for a time struck off the register when the sale took place, and subsequently the case was revived, when a sale-proclamation issued, on which the plaintiff preferred a claim, and on the claim being rejected, she paid the amount for which the property had been attached.'

"There has been no case cited which goes to the extent of holding that if an execution case is struck off the file, and a proclamation issued upon the attachment which had issued before the case was struck off, the sale would be subject to all incumbrances created by the debtor between the time the attachment was made and the time the property was sold, on the ground that the effect of the attachment was destroyed for ever by striking the case off the file. Though not expressly in point, the case of Rajah Muhesh Narain Sing v. Kishanund Misr (3) has a strong bearing upon the point.

"For the above reasons, it appears to me that Mr. Tayler is bound to refund the money which the plaintiff was compelled to pay, and did pay, in order to save the estate, which she purchased and paid for from being sold under the execution."

Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter said (and this is the principal grievance of which Mr. Tayler complains in his letters to the Editor of the Englishman)—

"I entirely concur. I feel no hesitation in holding that the plaintiff is entitled to recover, both upon the ground that she has paid a debt due from Mr. Tayler to Ranee Usmedh Koer when she was under no obligation to pay it, as also upon the ground that a fraud has been perpetrated against her by Mr. Tayler in concealing from her the fact that the estate sold by him to her was under attachment in execution of a decree of Court. I should have been extremely sorry if the state of the law were otherwise."

The finding that there was a fraudulent concealment was upon a point raised in the suit and in the grounds of appeal, and one upon which evidence was gone into on both sides.

For pronouncing this judgment upon a point in issue, the learned Judge, as will be presently seen, is charged with "wanton insult and unfounded aspersion." He is charged with having done that for which a District Judge would probably have been suspended. But the charge was made in letters in which the real facts under which the judgment was pronounced were artfully, and I may say wilfully, concealed by Mr. Tayler; and a new state of facts, which was untrue, and which, if true, had never been set up as a defence in the suit, or ever brought to the notice of the learned Judge, was substituted. Mr. Tayler must have known, and I will prove out of his own mouth that he did know, that upon the facts, as they appeared at the time when Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter pronounced his judgment, there was not the slightest ground for complaint. It was not because the Chief Justice felt so confident of the plaintiff's right to succeed upon another point, and abstained from finding upon the issue of fraud, that Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter was not at liberty to express his opinion upon that point, which was directly in issue, without subjecting himself to such charges as those which Mr. Tayler has preferred against him in his letters. As well might a juryman be charged with wanton insult and unfounded aspersion for pronouncing, upon evidence before him, a verdict of guilty against a man tried upon a charge of theft or embezzlement. The case was one appealable to Her Majesty in Council, and even if it had not been so, it would have made no difference.

(3) (1862) 1 Suth. P. C. J. 488; 9 M. I. A. 324; 1 Sar. P. C. J. 862; 19 E. R. 764.

Judges, although they may agree as to the judgment which ought to be given in a particular case, do not always agree in the reasons for arriving at that conclusion, or one Judge may have an additional reason, upon which the other has not expressed his opinion. There is no reason why a native gentleman, who by his abilities has raised himself to the Bench of the High Court, is to be maligned and slandered because he has the independence to express an opinion of his own, or even to differ from the Chief Justice. What would become of the independence of Judges if this were to be allowed?

Mr. Tayler says that this dishonoring and unmeasured imputation, judicially cast upon him by Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter, has been recorded by him without one tittle of evidence to support it; that it is wholly untrue and manifestly absurd. But, if he was dissatisfied with the finding, he could have appealed to Her Majesty in Council, for the case was an appealable one, and it is not too late to appeal even now. But Mr. Tayler knew full well that, if he appealed to Her Majesty in Council, he must have appealed upon the case as it stood when the Judge pronounced his judgment. He, therefore, preferred to appeal to the Editor of the Englishman, and through him to the public, and to rest that appeal upon a false state of facts and a dishonest concealment of the real one.

No one reading the letter of the 7th of April could have imagined that Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter's judgment was a finding upon an issue in the case founded upon what he honestly believed to be the weight of evidence given on both sides. If Mr. Tayler had honestly intended to criticise the judgment, with reference to the evidence given in the cause, he might have done so without objection: he might have set the evidence and commented upon it, so that those who read the criticism might have been able to form their own judgment as to his conclusions.

I now pass from the charge against Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter in reference to his original judgment to the charge brought against him in respect of his refusing to retract upon review.

Here let me again point out that throughout the whole of Mr. Tayler's so called criticism he treats Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter's finding upon a material issue in the cause as a gratuitous, uncalled-for aspersion, and as a wanton insult which he could retract at pleasure. But this is not so. Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter had expressed his judgment upon a material point in the case, and he could not, without granting a review, retract it. The finding had been come to and the judgment had been recorded. The case was one which might have been appealed by Mr. Tayler to Her Majesty in Council, and the plaintiff would have been entitled to have the finding returned with the record.

The case set up by Mr. Tayler in review was, like the case set up in his letters, entirely different from that which had been set up or even suggested on his behalf in the lower Court.

In the lower Court it was admitted in the 3rd paragraph of the written statement that at the time of sale the estate was attached under proceedings of the Civil Court of the 1st February 1866 (now said Mr. Tayler to have been at an end by the striking of the case off the Judge's file) and of the 13th February 1867 (the attachment stated in Mr. Tayler's letter of the 13th April 1869 to have been discovered by him only within the last two days), and the contention then was that plaintiff purchased with full knowledge of the first attachment; that she bought for Rs. 55,000 an estate which was worth Rs. 88,000; that she paid off the decree against Mr. Tayler to serve her own ends, and that the maxim caveat emptor applied.

In the matter of WILLIAM TAYLER.

In the petition for review, the case set up was, that in Mr. Tayler's belief the attachment had been ipso facto withdrawn before the sale, by reason of the case in execution having been struck off the file in consequence of the Ranee's having neglected to furnish security in pursuance of an order of the High Court, and that Ahmedoollah was aware of the fact when the sale was completed.

Mr. Tayler said:—

"Your petitioner, having just returned to India, has read, he need not say, with pain and mortification the decision of the High Court in the case of Musammat Zuhoorun passed on the 19th November 1868.

"Your petitioner cannot reasonably demur to the decision, based as it is on the defence set up by his native Mookhtear, and supported by the evidence which he has volunteered in the case.

"All your petitioner now desires to do is to inform the Court that the statement put in and the evidence given by Enayut Hossein and his creatures are totally false, made and given without the approval, concurrence, or knowledge of your petitioner, and in direct opposition to the instructions given by your petitioner to Enayut Hossein before his departure from India.

"When the High Court is informed that Enayut Hossein is now in the criminal jail, convicted of fraud and embezzlement against your petitioner, and that your petitioner himself has been compelled to come out to India at great loss and inconvenience principally for the purpose of counteracting his nefarious proceedings, it will without difficulty appreciate your petitioner's position."

He then proceeded to state what he called the facts of the case, to the effect that the Ranee attached the estate in February 1866, under the decree; that being about to appeal to Her Majesty in Council, he obtained an order from the High Court that she should be required to give security before execution; that the Ranee not having complied with the order, the decree case was struck off the file; that whatever might have been the strict legal consequence of that order, he confidently believed that it necessarily involved the withdrawal, ipso facto, of the attachment; that he truly and conscientiously believed that no obstacle existed to the absolute sale of the property; that he gave instructions to his agent to sell it; that negotiations for sale were carried on for several months, and were finally concluded at nearly the end of the year, when the sale was completed, the deed registered, and possession given, the Ranee having during the whole of that period failed to comply with the Court's order, and the attachment being still, as generally believed, removed; that he heard nothing more until a few days before he left India, when Enayut Hossein informed him that the estate had been brought to sale, and that Ahmedoollah had paid the amount of the decree; that in the meantime a correspondence had been going on between Enayut Hossein and the Ranee's Dewan, and that the latter had proposed a compromise of the decree on a cash payment of Rs. 6,000 or Rs. 7,000; that when Mr. Tayler heard that Ahmedoollah had, without the slightest intimation or reference to him, paid the full amount, and thus, for his, Ahmedoollah's own, benefit deprived Mr. Tayler of the advantage of the reasonable compromise just about to be concluded, he instructed Enayut Hossein to represent the circumstances to Ahmedoollah and effect an amicable compromise with him, if possible, for the amount which, but for the sale under the decree would have been effected with the Ranee; that he never disputed nor wished to dispute his liability for the payment made.

He then went on to say that he left a few days afterwards for England; that when some months afterwards he heard that an action had been brought against him, not then having reason to distrust Enayut Hossein, he concluded that, if he defended the suit at all, it would only be to the extent of the equitable plea above mentioned according to the instructions received; that it was impossible to divine for what purpose Enayut Hossein put in the false and dishonest statement on which the High Court had commented; but he positively asserted that both himself and, to the best of his belief, Ahmedoollah and the numerous other persons cognizant of the lengthened negotiations were all under the conviction that the attachment had ceased, and everything was concluded with the greatest openness and publicity; that Ahmedoollah, the purchaser in his wife's name, to the best of his belief, had the same conviction, being, as he believed, perfectly aware of all that had passed; that Enayut Hossein's statement as to the attachment, the value of the estate, and the information said to have been given to the purchaser, as well as his plea as to the non-liability of Mr. Tayler, were totally and wickedly untrue.

In the matter of WILLIAM TAYLER.

He prayed that the Court would accept his statement, which he was prepared, if required, to substantiate on oath, and relieve him from the harsh and dishonoring animadversions which it had recorded—a modest request certainly, when in the petition he accused Enayat Hossein of perjury and with having misrepresented to Mr. Kelly, Mr. Tayler's own agent, the effect of the written statement which Mr. Kelly had verified upon oath; and when the petition stated, in direct contradiction of Ahmedoollah's evidence given in the cause upon oath, that he, Ahmedoollah, was to the best of Mr. Tayler's belief fully cognizant of all that had passed, and was under the same conviction as he that the attachment had ceased.

In his petition and in his affidavit he declared that it was not his intention to dispute his liability for the amount paid. He stated that he directed Enayut Hossein to endeavour to compromise with the plaintiff if he could. He does not state what instructions he left with Enayut Hossein as to the defence to be set up if the plaintiff should refuse to compromise, but merely that, when he heard that the action had been brought, he considered that if Enayut Hossein defended at all it would only be to the extent of the equitable plea above mentioned according to the instructions received. This was explained by an additional affidavit, in which he swore that he believed that the only plea which he would ever have allowed to be advanced on his behalf was, that a compromise had been agreed to by the Ranee's Dewan for a sum (as far as he could remember) of Rs. 7,000, and that the plaintiff, by paying the full amount of the decree, without notice, had deprived him of the benefit of the compromise. He also annexed extracts from a correspondence between himself and Mr. Kelly.

In one of the letters to Mr. Kelly he appears to have said :—

"I certainly would not pay Amedoollah more than Rs. 7,000, which is the sum I should in all probability have been able to compromise with the Ranee for. He had no right to pay the money on his own authority and without my concurrence, and thus entail on me a liability to the whole without compromise and without the time which the Court would undoubtedly have given me. So if he does not accept this, let him bring his action. But in this matter also, you had better exercise some discretion in consultation with Enayut Hossein and Wilayut Ali."

That letter is dated 3rd May 1867. The plaintiff's suit was not brought before the 3rd December following. Though Mr. Kelly and Mr. Tayler both made affidavits, not one syllable was stated by either of them as to any offer of compromise having been made to the plaintiff. All Mr. Kelly swore upon that subject was, that if there had been a compromise he had funds in hand sufficient to pay Rs. 7,000 or 8,000 to the purchaser.

That no compromise had ever been effected with the Ranee is clear from her proceeding with the execution without any attempt on the part of Mr. Tayler to prevent it. It is clear that no compromise was made with the plaintiff, from the fact that her suit was afterwards brought, and no such compromise was set up as a defence.

The only defence that Mr. Tayler could have set up under these circumstances was, that the attachment was not in force when the sale took place. If he had made that defence, he might have dictated his own terms, for in that case the plaintiff had paid in her own wrong; and no doubt Mr. Tayler would have set up that defence and dictated his own terms, if he had believed that the attachment was not in existence when the sale took place, or that it was superseded by the second attachment; but no such defence was suggested by him either to Enayut Hossein or to Mr. Kelly in any one of his letters. It is also to be remarked that nothing is said either in the petition or in the affidavits as to whether any and what consultation ever took place between Mr. Kelly, Enayut Hossein, and Wilayut Ali, as recommended in Mr. Tayler's letter of the 3rd May 1867,

In the matter of WILLIAM TAYLER.

Mr. Tayler was heard in support of his petition for review, and on the 13th of March 1869 the following judgments were delivered. The Chief Justice said:—

"It appears to me that there is no ground for reviewing the judgment. I have read very carefully the judgment which I delivered in this case, and I see nothing in it which I can retract. I did remark upon the judgment of the Subordinate Judge, but I abstained from expressing any opinion as to whether there was any fraudulent concealment on the part of Mr. Tayler."

Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter said:—

"I am of opinion that this application ought to be refused.

"It is not contended that the remarks made by me in the judgment, which is now sought to be reviewed, were not warranted by the evidence then before me, nor is it contended that the decree which followed upon that judgment is in any respect contrary to law or justice. But it is urged that the written statement put in on behalf of the petitioner, and the evidence adduced in support of it, were all concocted by one Enayut Hossein, the native agent of the petitioner, contrary to the instructions expressly given to him by the petitioner, and I have been accordingly asked to withdraw certain remarks which I had made with reference to the conduct of the petitioner, as disclosed by the evidence on the record which I had before me when I heard the appeal.

"I do not think that an application of this sort, which does not ask for any substantial interference either with the judgment or the decree which followed upon it, can be legitimately treated as an application for review, and on this ground I decline to entertain it.

"I wish to add, however, that I should not be justified in withdrawing the remarks in question upon an ex parte proceeding of this kind. Enayut Hossein is not before the Court, and so far as the plaintiff is concerned, she is in no way interested in opposing this application, inasmuch as the petitioner is not seeking for any interference with the decree which has been passed in her favour.

"I express no opinion whatever as to the correctness or otherwise of the statements contained in the affidavit filed by the petitioner. I can only say that if the charges brought against Enayut Hossein are true, the petitioner ought to prosecute him upon those charges; and I have no doubt that such a prosecution, when brought to a successful termination, would be a sufficient vindication of his character. As matters stand at present, I cannot, upon an ex parte application like this, hold Enayut Hossein guilty of the serious offence with which he has been charged by the petitioner, and this I must do before I can withdraw the remarks in question.

"I wish further to add that I am by no means satisfied with the explanation given by Mr. Kelly with reference to the verification of the written statement. Mr. Kelly says in his affidavit, 'I received from Mr. Tayler a letter, dated from London the 17th April 1867, and another dated from the said place the 3rd May of the said year, and in these two letters were contained instructions for the settlement of the claims of Musammat Zuhuroonnissa, and the purport and substance of these instructions were communicated by me to the said Enayut Hossein. When the suit of Musammat Zuhuroonnissa was brought, the written statement on the part of Mr. William Tayler was prepared by the said Enayut Hossein, and was represented to me as being in conformity with the purport and substance of the instructions of Mr.

In the matter of WILLIAM TAYLER.

William Tayler in the said matter, and upon this assurance I verified the written statement.'

"In the first place I remark that the affidavit does not disclose the precise instructions which Mr. Kelly gave to Enayut Hossein in case he, Enayut Hossein, should fail to bring about an amicable settlement, nor does it appear that the letters referred to are very clear on the point. But be that as it may, it appears to me that Mr. Kelly was in no way justified in verifying the written statement in question merely upon a general assurance from Enayut Hossein that it was prepared 'in conformity with the purport and substance of the instructions of Mr. Tayler.' When a gentleman puts in a verified written statement, it is his bounden duty to satisfy himself, by every possible means in his power, that every allegation which is contained in that written statement is in strict conformity with truth; and it is no excuse whatever for him to say that he is ignorant of the language in which the written statement was drawn up, or that he was generally assured by some one else that everything stated therein was in conformity with his instructions. It may be that Mr. Kelly was misled by Enayut Hossein; but without expressing any opinion upon this point, one way or the other, I do not feel the slightest hesitation in saying that, upon his own showing, the explanation offered by Mr. Kelly is altogether unsatisfactory.

"I reject this application."

Before those judgments were pronounced, the Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter consulted together upon the subject of Mr. Tayler's application for review. I pointed out to Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter that I did not see how he could revoke his finding upon the issue of fraudulent concealment without virtually expressing his opinion, behind the back of Enayut Hossein, of the charges brought against him by Mr. Tayler in his petition and affidavits. I fully concurred with my honourable colleague in the course which he proposed to adopt, and which he did adopt, in the judgment which I have read.

Without setting out the judgment, or even stating the nature of his reasons, Mr. Justice Dwakanath Mitter is charged with having, on the narrowest grounds of technicality, refused to retract an unfounded and unjustifiable accusation and a slander recorded against an absent suitor without one tittle of evidence to support it; and this though the accusation had been clearly disproved. If this is fair criticism, I confess I do not understand what fair criticism is.

Mr. Tayler, in his affidavit put in on Tuesday last, swears that the several letters written by him were written for the sole and single purpose of removing the stigma which attached to his name in consequence of the remark recorded by Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter, and to prove, by a searching criticism before the public and his friends, that the facts of the case did not warrant such inference. If that is true, Mr. Tayler has far exceeded the means necessary for the end.

To show the animus with which the letters were written, I proceed to read them.

They are all artistically framed; and, like the chapters in some novels, each is headed with a quotation to give some short general idea of what is coming. Some of the insinuations are artfully penned, but there can be no doubt that they are defamatory. It is plain who are the persons alluded to, and what is the meaning, and to quote the words of Lord Hardwicke in a similar case [The St. James's Evening Post case (4)] of contempt—

"As a Jury, if this fact was before them, could make no doubt, so, as I am a Judge of facts, as well as law, I can make none."

The first letter, that of the 7th April, begins with a quotation from Shakespeare—

"My reputation, Iago, my reputation."

Othello.

"TO THE EDITOR OF THE ENGLISHMAN.

"SIR—I was in hopes that, long ere this, I might have sent you for publication the proceedings of the High Court in the matter of my application for a review of judgment in the case in which Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter did me the honour to record that I had 'perpetrated a fraud;' but as I have not yet been able to obtain authenticated copies, I do not wish to delay any longer the remarks which I consider myself called upon to make in justice to myself in regard to this insulting, and as I shall show, utterly unjustifiable, charge.

(4) (1742) 2 Atk. 469 at p. 470; 26 E. R. 683.

In the matter of WILLIAM TAYLER.

"Condemnation or censure passed by a Court of Justice on a suitor (if without sufficient ground or reason) is the most mischievous, the most intolerable of slanders. The Judge on the Bench, like the Parson in the Pulpit, has it all his own way for a time; but the Preacher attacks man in general, the Judge deals with the individual. General condemnation hurts no one. Individual censure may be ruin to the object of it.

"I now purpose to show, and that by clear and unanswerable evidence, that this dishonoring and unmeasured imputation judicially cast upon me by Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter has been recorded by him without one tittle of evidence to support it; that it is wholly untrue and manifestly absurd; and I beg you to observe that the learned Judge who placed it on record has not condescended to give one single reason, ground, or argument in support of his denunciation.

"If a District Judge had so acted, he would in all probability have been suspended, or, at all events, subjected to some such ordeal as Mr. Beaufort underwent not long ago! Whether elevation to the Bench of the High Court carries total exemption from responsibility with it remains to be seen."

This is a distinct charge, that the learned Judge had been guilty of such conduct that if he had been a District Judge he would in all probability have been suspended; but where is the promised clear and unanswerable evidence to support it? It not only asserts that the Judge's conduct was such as to justify suspension, but Mr. Tayler declared that it remains to be seen whether, in consequence of his high position, he will be exempt from responsibility by Government. There was a charge sufficiently grave to justify the Secretary of State in calling for explanation. Was the learned Judge to wait, or immediately to vindicate his honour and his character?

The letter proceeds:

"The facts of the case, as far at least as they regard this judicial insult, lie in a nutshell."

Mr. Tayler then proceeds to detail the facts, not as they appeared on the record, on which alone the Judge had to decide, but upon Mr. Tayler's statement. He says:—

"In October 1866, I sold an estate then in my possession in the Gya District for Rs. 55,000 to one Ahmedoollah, an old Patna Vakeel, who purchased it in the name of his wife. Nine months after the sale, this estate had been attached by the delicious old maid of Ticaree under the decree which, to her utter amazement and bewilderment, she obtained from the Hon'ble Justices Loch and Norman for Rs. 12,000—a decree which robbed me of the hard earnings of a year."

I shall have occasion in another place to refer to this description of the Ranee. I merely ask here, was it necessary for the vindication of Mr. Tayler's character in this matter under consideration? But what was the meaning of the assertion that she obtained that judgment to her utter amazement and bewilderment? What was the meaning of describing the decree as one which had robbed him of the hard earnings of a year? Could any other meaning attach to those words than that the decree was an unjust one? Was it necessary for the vindication of Mr. Tayler's character, with reference to the question whether he had fraudulently concealed the attachment from a purchaser of the estate, to enter into the merits of the decree under which that estate was attached? I should have thought that Mr. Tayler would have been glad to allow all questions as to that decree to be buried in oblivion; for, notwithstanding the Judges did on review, and upon reading a deposition of Mr. Tayler which had been taken irregularly and was not before the Court on the first hearing of the appeal, withdraw certain remarks which reflected seriously upon Mr. Tayler's character, still the ugly fact remained that Mr. Tayler endeavoured in a certain suit against the Ranee, his former client, to enforce payment of a bond which he had obtained improperly from her, and by the doctrine of estoppel to bind her to certain untrue statements which had been introduced into the bond.

Mr. Justice Norman in that case made the following remarks:—

"Mr. Tayler, however, raises the issue that his client is estopped by the admission in the bond. There cannot be a greater mistake. Mr. Tayler stood towards the Ranee in a fiduciary position as her confidential legal adviser." And again—"We think Mr. Tayler is not entitled to recover on the bond, and it must be set aside as improperly obtained from his client."

In the matter of WILLIAM TAYLER.

The attempt made by Mr. Tayler in that suit to pervert justice by a misapplication of the doctrine of estoppel was not unlike the attempt which was made by him in the suit brought by Musammat Zuhoorun to pervert justice by a misapplication of the maxim caveat emptor. And here I may ask why, if Mr. Tayler believed that the decree passed by Justices Loch and Norman was unjust or erroneous, did he not proceed with his appeal which he preferred to the Privy Council, and which he withdrew before the date of this letter?

The letter continues:—

"After this attachment, she was required by the High Court to give security before her decree was executed, and on failing to comply with the order, the case of execution of decree was struck off without reservation. Some time after this, I gave directions for the sale of the estate. The negotiations were conducted with the utmost publicity by my agent while I was at Simla. They were carried on for months together, and finally completed nine months after the case had been struck off."

This allegation not only contains a false fact, but suppresses the truth. It is false as regards the statement that the attachment was struck off for default of the Ranee. It is a suppression of the truth, inasmuch as the facts stated were not those upon which the Judge decided, and the validity of the attachment, or of the Ranee's right to sell the estate under it, had never been disputed or set up as a defence by Mr. Tayler.

It is not necessary to decide that Mr. Tayler, when he wrote in this letter that the decree had been struck off for default of the Ranee, stated what he knew to be false, but it is a very remarkable fact that it was made after the Judge in his judgment in the intervention case had declared that the case was not struck off for default of the Ranee, and that the precedent which had been cited by the Pleader to show that the attachment was invalidated by the striking the case off the file was applicable only to a case in which the decree is struck off owing to the negligence of the decree-holder. That judgment having been filed as part of the evidence in the suit against Mr. Tayler, that gentleman in his letter brings his case within the rule by the false statement that the decree was struck off in consequence of the Ranee's having failed to comply with the order that she might give security.

It will make the case clearer if I now read the Judge's judgment in the intervention suit, which was put in as evidence in the suit brought by the purchaser against Mr. Tayler, and compare it with these assertions of Mr. Tayler:

"To-day this case came on for hearing in the presence of the Pleaders for both parties, and the papers of the case have been taken into consideration. The particulars of this case are as follows:—

"On the 27th January, 1866, Ranee Usmedh Koer filed a petition for execution of decree, with a view to realize the costs and interest payable to her under the decree of the High Court, dated 29th April 1865, by Mr. William Tayler. At that time she also submitted a schedule of the properties which she intended to attach, that is to say, a schedule of sixteen annas of mokuraree right in Mouzah Dargaon in Pergunnah Sumai. On the 1st February 1866, an order for attachment was passed by this Court, and also the usual processes were issued and the estate was attached on the 9th March 1866. An order was sent by the Court to the effect that the decree-holder should show cause within two weeks, why the execution of decree should not be postponed if the judgment-debtor would find sufficient security until the appeal preferred to the Privy Council shall have been decided. On the receipt of the order afore alluded to, this Court passed an order, to the effect that the execution proceedings should be postponed for the time. Also on the 13th March at the time of the transmission of the return to the superior Court, this Court made this order, that the proceedings for execution of decree should be struck off from the files of pending cases. On the 29th May 1866, an order was received from the High Court, purporting that in the event of tender of sufficient security, the decree in favour of the decree-holder might be executed In obedience thereto, the case for execution of decree was again numbered on the file. On the 7th December 1866, the security tendered by the decree-holder was admitted, and the property having been again attached, the 2nd February 1867 was fixed for another sale. On the 13th February 1867 Musammat Zuhoorun, the objector, filed a petition praying that the property attached might be exempted from sale, because she having purchased the property in dispute under a deed of sale of 11th October 1856 had been in possession, and the purchase in question took place before the second attachment.

"In this case the point for trial is whether the order of this Court in the matter of striking off the case for execution of decree for the time being from the file of pending cases can be prejudicial to the previous attachment, and render the same null and void.

"The opinion of the Court is, that an order, like the one passed by this Court, cannot be prejudicial to the interest of the decree holder under the circumstances of the case, and with reference to the fact that the proceedings in execution of decree were thrown out for a short time and no default was committed by the decree-holder in carrying on the case. Hence, as the decree holder has furnished sufficient security, and the case for execution of decree has been numbered on the file by order of the Court, the parties to this suit have been placed in the same position in which they were at the time of the striking off of the case for a short time. Hence the Court finds that the first attachment has been in existence and in status quo. The precedent relied on by the Pleader for the objector, of 3rd May 1855, page 221, can be applicable to a case in which the execution of decree is specially struck off the file, owing to the negligence and default of the decree-holder. Hence, believing that the first attachment did not become null and void, and as the first attachment had taken place prior to the purchase made by the objector, the Court does hereby order that the objection be rejected, and the property attached be sold by auction for the realization of the money decreed."

The letter goes on:—

"Now I ask you, and through you the public, the whole service to which I had the honour to belong, and with which I am still connected by so many ties, and finally I ask the Hon'ble the Chief Justice and the Judges of the High Court to say what was the fraud which I perpetrated in thus disposing of my property?"

I will answer the question. The fraud consisted, not in selling the estate, but in selling it without informing the purchaser of the attachment, receiving the whole purchase-money from her, leaving her subject to have her estate sold under that attachment, and when she had been obliged to satisfy the decree in order to save her estate from sale, refusing to pay her the money which she had so paid, and of which Mr. Tayler got the benefit in satisfaction of the decree, and setting up the doctrine of caveat emptor and other similar sham defences. Mr. Tayler was not so innocent as not to know that the fraud charged was not the simple fact of his selling his property.

The letter further says:—

"Is it not, and has it not for years passed been the unvarying custom throughout the District Courts to consider an attachment dead when an execution case has been struck off the file? Will Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter dispute this?"

This question has already been answered by the Judge of Gya, who held that striking off an execution case does not invalidate an attachment unless the case is struck off for default of the decree-holder. The facts in this letter, as stated, bring the Ranee's attachment directly under this category; but they are false, as has been already shown.

Mr Tayler's letter proceeds:—

"On what ground, then, on what evidence, did this Judge in the first instance record this grave accusation? Not on the evidence of Enayut Hossein, my native agent, for his evidence was set aside by the Court as unworthy of trust."

Enayut Hossein's evidence was disbelieved as to the fact that the purchaser was informed of the attachment, and that the amount of it was fixed at Rs. 14,000. The concealment was proved by Ahmedoollah and the other witnesses produced by the plaintiff.

In the matter of WILLIAM TAYLER.

Further the letter goes on:—

"Whatever may have been the dishonesty of his pleading and answer to the suit, where were the materials to justify the charge that I perpetrated a fraud in selling my estate in October 1866?"

Mr. Tayler must know that that was not the charge, and that the fraud alleged consisted of his suppressing the fact of the attachment.

The letter proceeds:—

"And if the original charge is thus shown to be without reason, ground, or evidence, what will be said when it is known that after the solemn affidavits taken by me before the Court, and the full proof I have given of my entire blamelessness in the matter, Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter refuses, on grounds of the narrowest technicality, to expunge his remarks, and tells me that a criminal prosecution against my native agent, if conducted to a successful termination, will be a complete vindication of my character. (I quote from memory of what he said at the time)."

Here again the judgment and the reasons for it are suppressed. I cannot understand what Mr. Tayler's notions of justice are, if he holds that a refusal to act upon a charge of perjury against a man behind his back is a matter of the narrowest technicality.

Mr. Tayler proceeds:—

"I should certainly have thought that a Judge, endowed with those high qualifications which are generally believed to be essential to the due discharge of his duties, would have gladly seized the opportunity, when he found that he had unwittingly and unjustly slandered an absent suitor, to retract his words and expunge them from the record, instead of referring me to a process not only of doubtful issue, but which is actually impracticable in execution, for there is no criminal charge which could be framed against my agent in this case. He cannot be indicted for perjury without the express sanction of the Civil Court. He cannot be charged with false verification because he induced Mr. Kelly, my English agent, to verify the statement put in on his behalf. He certainly disobeyed my instructions, but he fought the case and gained a decree in my favour in the District Court."

If Enayut Hossein was guilty of perjury, as charged by Mr. Tayler, he might clearly have been charged with perjury. Mr. Tayler would in all probability have had no difficulty in obtaining leave to prosecute him. If Mr. Tayler had no evidence to prove perjury, he ought not to have made the charge.

Mr. Tayler continues:—

"On what possible grounds could I frame or conceive a criminal charge against him with the slightest chance of bringing such charge to a successful termination?

"So the happy sequel is, that I am unjustifiably accused. The accusation is clearly disproved. My accuser refuses to retract, and refers me for vindication of my character to an impossible remedy.

"It is a satisfaction at least that the Honorable the Chief Justice has publicly disclaimed all participation in this cruel wrong."

All that I stated was that I had nothing to retract. I left it to Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter to say what he thought right with reference to his own judgment.

The next letter is that of the 12th April; it runs thus:—

"First Fury.—Thou thinkest we will rend thee, bone from bone.

And nerve from nerve, working like fire within?

Prometheus.—Pain is my element, as hate is thine!

Ye rend me now, I care not."

Prometheus unbound.

"TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ENGLISHMAN."

"SIR,—Two or three days ago, I addressed you on the subject of Mr. Justice Dawarkanath Mitter's charge against me of 'fraud.' What I am now about to relate is an appropriate and somewhat amusing supplement to the narrative. At the very time I was in person protesting against this insulting and unfounded imputation, what was taking place in the same district and before the same Court in which the attachment of my estate had taken place?

"Listen, and be edified. Some weeks ago, I had myself attached a house belonging to a judgment-debtor against whom I held a decree for Rs. 5,000. The house was worth about that sum. Before the sale, however, my irresistible old maid of Ticaree, who is in dangerous rapport with all the Amlah of all the Courts, having a stray claim against me of Rs. 500 for costs, attached my decree for Rs 5,000."

Here is a direct charge against the Ranee that she is in rapport with all the Amlah of all the Courts. Was it necessary for the vindication of Mr. Tayler's character that the discharged Mookhtear should turn upon his former client and endeavour to bring her into ridicule and contempt? The lady who is styled "my irresistible old maid of Ticaree" is a lady of rank and position: above all, she is a Hindu widow, a state which Mr. Talyer from his experience must know is one in which she is removed from all worldly pleasure. Is it because she discharged Mr. Tayler from her service, or because she holds some stray decrees against him which she seeks to enforce, that she is to be slandered and ridiculed? Her sex, her misfortune, ought to have protected her from insult and indignities.

I have no doubt that the charge was intended to convey the imputation that all the Amlah of all the Courts in the district are under undue influence exercised over them by her. But even if this was not the meaning of the slander, there was the intention to ridicule; and why was this? Mr. Tayler has positively sworn that the only object of this letter was to vindicate his character. Would he have thus written if he had continued to be the Ranee's Mookhtear on a salary of Rs. 500 a month, with extra reward for winning suits? Is this part of the edification which he promises to those who listen? Let me not be misunderstood. I do not charge this as part of the contempt of the Court. I refer to it merely as evidence of Mr. Tayler's animus, and to test the credibility of his affidavits.

Mr. Tayler goes on:—

"And now for judicial wisdom! Instead of allowing the sale to proceed, subject to this lien for Rs. 500, which would, of course, have been paid out of the proceeds, to the satisfaction of justice and all the parties concerned, the Judge strikes the case off the file! The Ranee steps in with another decree against the same party and the house is sold for her benefit! Meanwhile my agent at Patna, directly he hears of the attachment of my decree, sends off Rs. 500 in cash and prays for the sale of the house.

"What is the order? Your case has been struck off. Ergo, your attachment has fallen to the ground, and another has reaped the fruits of your diligence!!"

This judgment is not intelligible, but, right or wrong, it did not justify the aspersions on Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter.

The letter proceeds:—

"Now, just observe how I am dealt with. Because, in the one case I acted in the belief that the attachment of my own property had ceased in consequence of the case being struck off the file, Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter declares I perpetrated a 'fraud.'"

Now is this true? Did Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter declare that Mr. Tayler perpetrated fraud because he acted in the belief that the attachment had ceased in consequence of the case being struck off the file? The fact was not before him when he delivered the first judgment. His reasons for not withdrawing the remarks were given in his judgment in review.

The letter continues:—

"Because, in the Court of Gya, my case of execution had been struck off the file (and that inexcusably), I am robbed of Rs. 5,000 on the ground that the attachment had ceased.

"Thus justice, like the sword of Ali, strikes me at one and the same moment with both edges of the redoubtable Zoolfikar, and each time, as was Ali's pleasant custom, with a shout of insult and derision.

"At the voice of Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter down goes my reputation; on the dictum of the District Judge away goes my money; both Judges acting on grounds diametrically opposed to each other."

What was meant by the words "shouts of insult and derision" with reference to Ali's sword, except that Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter, who was compared to one of the edges, insulted and gloried in his insult?

Mr. Tayler proceeds:—

"With all respect to the majesty of the ermine, I cannot but think that such instances of human frailty should teach our Judges, whether high or low, the melancholy lesson that after all they are but fallible mortals, and at least make them pause before they aggravate the wrong of an erroneous judgment by the far greater wrong of wanton insult and unfounded aspersion."

The last letter is dated 13th April 1869; it commences thus:—

"Dogberry.—Come you hither, Sirrah; a word in your ear, Sir; I say to you, it is thought you are false knaves.

Borachio.—Sir, I say to you, we are none.

Dogberry.—Well, stand aside. 'Fore God, they are both in a tale,

Have you writ down that they are none?

Much Ado about Nothing."

Here let me ask how it was necessary for the vindication of Mr. Tayler's character to introduce Dogberry into the scene?

"TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ENGLISHMAN."

"SIR.—Will you allow me a few more last words about the late assault of Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter, and forgive me for again referring to the irrepressible 'Ego.' Thackeray's pithy defence of egotism is, that if a man tread on my corns, I am the sufferer, and who so well as myself can describe my woes? But this matter has public as well as private interest; others have corns, and there are more than one Mitter who may tread on them.

"But what I am now about to represent is a new incident in the case, and one which renders the Judge's accusation so thoroughly absurd that I am bound to give it publicity.

"The only conceivable ground hitherto supposed to exist for casting a stigma upon me was that the Judge sold my estates under the former attachment, and therefore, that that attachment did exist at the time of my private transfer of the estate.

"This could not really alter the case as far as my 'fraud' was concerned, because, even if he had done so, he would have acted in direct opposition to the established practice, and it was quite enough for my moral absolution to show that I believed, and was justified in the belief, that the attachment had ceased. No judicial 'ex post facto' eccentricity could alter or affect this state of things.

"But I have within these two days ascertained that even this little homeopathic globule of justification does not exist! but that the Judge, before he brought the estate to sale, directed a new order of attachment, thus showing by his own proceedings that he also deemed the old attachment to have become null and void."

Here there is again falsehood and concealment; falsehood in representing that the second attachment was a new incident in the case and concealment in keeping out of sight the fact that in one defence set up to the suit, the validity of the attachment or of the sale under it was never questioned. The question was, admitting the validity of the attachment and of the right to enforce it by sale of the estate, whether the plaintiff knew of it at the time of sale, and if not, whether Mr. Tayler knew of it and fraudulently suppressed or concealed it. The discovery of the fact of the second attachment, even if not known to Mr. Tayler before, could not affect the question whether he fraudulently concealed the first attachment, or the fact of the first attachment continuing in force. But it is clear that this attachment, stated to have been discovered by Mr. Tayler only two or three days before writing the letter, was a matter known when the written statement was put in on behalf of Mr. Tayler, and was actually referred to in the 3rd paragraph as the proceeding of the 13th February 1867, and was also decided by the Judge of Gya not to have affected the first attachment. The Judge speaks of the property having been again attached: of the intervenor's objection that she purchased before the second attachment, and he decided that the first attachment did not become null and void by reason of the second attachment. So much for Mr. Tayler's discovery.

The letter goes on:—

"Thus the infinitesimal peg upon which Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter suspended his insulting imputation subsides into space!

"The confident and uncompromising tone of his accusation had deceived even me, and I had hitherto concluded that he had at least thus much of fact to justify his anathema.

In the matter of WILLIAM TAYLER.

"But it now appears that he made no enquiry whatever as to whether the sale took place under a fresh attachment, or not!! before he thus vilipended me"

There was no necessity to enquire, because the matter was no part of the defence set up.

The letter concludes:—

"We have all heard or read among the mysteries of human nature of that strange idiosyncrasy which enables some men to detect, by a certain internal irritation, the presence, though unseen, of a cat. It appears to me that of late years some such element of anti-feline irritation must appertain to my unhappy person, for there is a certain class among the official principalities of Bengal who, directly I am brought into contact with them, appear to be at once affected by an overpowering internal excitability, which affects the understanding even of the wise and good, and intensifies the folly of the foolish, but at the same time always issues in one result—injury, insult, or wrong to myself.

"When the true history of mesmeric repulsion is unravelled, perhaps the cause may be traced."

Can any one doubt, after reading the context, the reference to the judgment of Mr. Justice Loch and Mr. Justice Norman in the first letter, that the words "official principalities" are intended to include the Judges of the High Court, or some of them, and to accuse them of a want of impartiality, fairness, and courtesy in all cases in which Mr. Tayler is concerned as a suitor, which always result in injury, insult and wrong to him?

I will read a passage or two from Lord Hardwicke's judgment in a similar case.

Lord Hardwicke said in St. James's Evening Post case (4):—

"Nothing is more incumbent upon Courts of Justice than to preserve their proceedings from being misrepresented; nor is there anything of more pernicious consequence than to prejudice the minds of the public against persons concerned as parties in causes before the cause is finally heard.

"It has always been my opinion, as well as the opinion of those who have sat here before me, that such a proceeding ought to be discountenanced.

"But, to be sure, Mr. Solicitor-General has put it upon the right footing, that, notwithstanding this should be a libel, yet unless it is a contempt of the Court, I have no cognizance of it. For whether it is a libel against the public or private persons, the only method is to proceed at law.

"The defendant's Counsel have endeavoured two things—1st, to show this paper does not contain defamatory matter; 2 dly, if it does, yet there is no abuse upon the proceedings of this Court, and, therefore, there is no room for me to interpose.

"Now, take the whole together, though the letter is artfully penned, there can remain no doubt, in every common reader at a coffee house, but this is a defamatory libel"

The Lord Chancellor then stated, with reference to the course which had been followed in that case of alluding to the persons libelled by the initial letters of their names, that—

"All the libellers of the kingdom know now that printing initial letters will not serve their turn, for that objection has been long got over."

He then proceeded:—

"It is plain, therefore, who is meant; and as a Jury, if this fact was before them, could make no doubt, so as I am a Judge of facts, as well as of law, I can make none.

"I might mention several strong cases, where even feigned names have been construed a libel upon those persons who were really meant to be libelled.

"I shall take notice but of one, and that is the case of Mrs. Dodd, who printed a letter abusing the late King, under the name of Merriwe's Sophy of Persia; it was tried before a Jury of gentlemen of great honour, who were so well satisfied of the real meaning, that, notwithstanding the whole was concealed under fictitious names, they found the publisher guilty.

"Next, as to the expression in the paper, that 'there were even here in England some gentlemen of note and character who did not scruple to turn affidavit men.' Mr. Solicitor-General has insisted this may be taken in a good sense as well as a bad one, because a man who swears true, is as much an affidavit man, as if he swears false, and the Court should take it in mitiori sensu.

"I will not take upon me to say whether, upon an action at law, this could be supported as libellous upon the strict rules.

'But, I believe, there is nobody who is conversant in the proceedings of this Court, but must know that this expression means persons who are ready, upon all occasions, to make affidavits, without regarding whether they have any conusance of the facts."

The use of the words "a certain class of official principalities of Bengal" cannot deceive the Court. There is no doubt it includes one or more of the Judges of the High Court, and I have no more doubt as to what Mr. Tayler meant by the words "being affected by an overpowering internal excitability which affected the principalities when they came into contact with him, and which always resulted in injury, insult, or wrong to him," than Lord Hardwicke had as to the meaning of the words 'affidavit men."

These letters are not fair criticisms: they are slanderous effusions, as regards the Ranee of a disappointed Mookhtear who has been dismissed from her service, and, as regards the Judge of a disappointed suitor who has failed in his case.

The charge against Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter, of casting upon Mr. Tayler an unmeasured imputation without one tittle of evidence to support it, was not only false, but false within Mr. Tayler's own knowledge. This I will prove out of his own mouth.

In the letter to the Editor of the Englishman, dated 12th February 1869, Mr. Tayler says:—

"I have just arrived from England, and one of the first pleasant things presented to me has been your paper of December 1st, containing the decision of the High Court in the appeal Musammat Wuzeerun (appellant) versus William Tayler (respondent).

"From this decision I find that, in a suit instituted against me after I had left India, and conducted on my behalf by my native Mookhtear, Enayut Hossein, the High Court has declared me guilty of fraudulent concealment of attachment (in its legal sense) in regard to an estate which I sold.

"I do not complain of this decision, for it is based on statements and evidence put forward by Enayut Hossein which are quite sufficient to justify the conclusions of the Court, which regards them as mine."

Again, in his petition of review, on the 17th February last, Mr. Tayler says:—

"Your petitioner, having just returned to India, has read, he need not say, with pain and mortification, the decision of the High Court in the case of Musammat Zuhoorun passed on the 19th November 18 8.

"Your petitioner cannot reasonably demur to the decision, based as it is on the defence set up by his native Mookhtear, and supported by the evidence which he has volunteered in the case.

"All your petitioner now desires to do is to inform the Court that the statement put in and the evidence given by Enayut Hossein and his creatures are totally false, made and given without the approval, concurrence, or knowledge of your petitioner, and in direct opposition to the instructions given by him to the said Enayut Hossein before his departure from India."

Holding this opinion, Mr. Tayler knew that, according to the case as it stood when Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter pronounced judgment, he was fully justified in pronouncing it as he did. Mr. Tayler substituted a fresh state of facts, which was false, and wilfully concealed the real one, and he criticised the judgment with reference to that statement. Was this honest? Was it fair criticism, in good faith, of the acts of a public man?

I could scarcely believe that I correctly understood Mr. Tayler's observations which he made with reference to his letter of the 12th February, and his attempt to reconcile the passage which I have quoted with the slanderous imputations in his subsequent letters.

He stated that when he wrote the first letter he was under the impression that the Chief Justice as well as Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter had imputed fraud to him, but that he had since been gratified by finding from the explanation of the Chief Justice that he had put only a hypothetical case; that if the observations of the Chief Justice had been to the effect which he had supposed, he would have had no cause to complain of Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter, as he would then have been concurring with the Chief Justice, after he had considered all the facts.

I called his attention to the fact that he had reiterated the same thing in his petition for review. He then stated that it was not until after the hearing of that petition that he had heard the explanation of the Chief Justice.

I can scarcely trust myself to characterise this explanation of Mr. Tayler. I wish merely to ask whether it was just and fair or manly on the part of Mr. Tayler to impute to Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter that which he would not have imputed to the Chief Justice, if he had come to a similar finding. How is it possible that there could have been evidence sufficient to justify the Chief Justice alone, or the Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter jointly, in imputing fraud, if there was not one tittle of evidence to support the imputation when made by Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter alone?

I have now shown beyond all doubt that there was not a shadow of justification for Mr. Tayler's charges against Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter, and that the public could not have been misled by any criticisms if they had been based upon the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth I have also criticised what Mr. Tayler has been pleased to style his intellectual and searching criticism, and I have no hesitation in declaring that his letters do not contain fair criticisms, but slanderous assertions and false statements. A fair critic must not misrepresent, and he must not wilfully conceal the truth. He is not bound to "extenuate," but he must not "set down aught in malice"

Mr. Tayler's first object in writing the letters may have been to vindicate his own character, but vindication was not the sole object of all that he inserted in them. Besides, every honest man knows that he has no right to vindicate his own character by reflections upon the character of another, based upon false statements and wilful suppression of the truth. I do not believe that there is an editor of a single journal in this country, or in any other, who, having all the facts before him, would, unless influenced by malice or improper motives, have criticised the judgments of Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter in the way in which Mr. Tayler has had the audacity to write about them.

There can be no doubt that the publication of such letters is a contempt of Court. It is unnecessary to refer to many cases in support of that position.

"Nothing," said Lord Hardwicke in the case already cited, "is more incumbent upon Courts of Justice than to preserve their proceedings from being misrepresented." It is a matter of the greatest importance that Judges should possess the confidence of the public. Such confidence tends much to the satisfactory administration of justice.

In Mr. Lechmere Charlton's case (5) Lord Cottenham said:—

"The power of committal is given to Courts of Justice for the purpose of securing the better.....administration of justice. Every writing, letter, or publication which has for its object to divert the course of justice is a contempt of the Court. It is for that reason that publications of proceedings which have already taken place, when made with a view of influencing the ultimate result of the cause, have been deemed contempts. It would be strange, indeed, if the Judges of the Court were the only persons not protected from libels, writings, and proceedings, the direct object of which is to pervert the course of justice. Every insult offered to a Judge in the exercise of the duties of his office is a contempt; but when the writing or publication proceeds further, and when, not by inference, but by plain and direct language, a threat is used, the object of which is to induce a Judicial Officer to depart from the course of his judicial duty, and to adopt a course he would not otherwise pursue, it is a contempt of the very highest order."

In Crawford's case (6) Mr. Justice Patteson said:—

"It is.....objected that the Court could have no general power of commitment for (5) ('837) 2 My. & Cr. 316 at p. 339; 40 E. R. 661; 45 R. R. 68.

(6) (1849) 13 Q. B. 613 at p. 627; 18 L. J. Q. B. 225; 13 Jur. 955; 116 E. R. 1397; 78 R. R. 479.

In the matter of WILLIAM TAYLER.

a libel published out of Court some time before. This point has not been expressly decided upon. In Van Sandau's case (7), the libel appears to have been published both in Court and out of it. In Reg. v. Almon (8) there was a very learned judgment by Chief Justice Wilmot, which he intended to deliver, though it was not delivered in fact, the case having been dropped. He satisfactorily shews that a Court of Record has power to punish, by commitment for contempt, a libel published while the Court is not sitting. There must be a choice as to the mode of proceeding; for he says that the punishment may be by indictment or by committal for contempt: he treats it throughout as a matter of election. That may be an answer to the difficulty suggested by my brother Coleridge to Mr. Peacock." (The difficulty suggested was whether a commitment for contempt could be pleaded as an answer to an indictment for the same publication). "We need not, however, determine as to this: it is enough for us to see that the Court has the power; and that is clear law. If that be so, the question whether the particular publication be libellous or contemptuous is clearly, as has been said in many instances, a question for the Court which commits. We have not to enquire into this matter, which has been adjudicated upon by a Court of competent jurisdiction.....The fact of authorship is admitted by Mr. Crawford, who comes forward to avow it, openly and very properly. The construction of the publication was for the Court. We, therefore, cannot interfere unless there has been some error in the manner and form of the proceeding."

In the same case Mr. Justice Erle said:—

"Then is there here a lawful ground for committal? The power of Courts to commit for contempt in this country has been discussed: and it has been established, on good reason, that a Tribunal has power to protect itself by committing for a contempt relating to the exercise of its powers. The commitment here was for a contempt in publishing, while the Court was not sitting, and perhaps at some distance of time and place, a libel on the proceedings of the Court. In the elaborate judgment to which my brother Patteson has referred, it is shewn that such a publication may have a strong and immediate tendency to paralyze the proceedings of this Court. Such cases may easily be conceived; the propriety of the decision in the particular case is a question for the Court itself."

In re Wallace (9) a Barrister and Attorney of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia wrote a letter to the Chief Justice reflecting on the Judges and the administration of justice in the Court. The Court suspended him for it. On appeal to the Privy Council, the suspension was reversed. Lord Westbury, in delivering judgment, said:—

"The letter was a contempt of Court which it was hardly possible for the Court to omit taking cognizance of. It was an offence, however, committed by an individual in his capacity of a suitor in respect of his supposed rights as a suitor and of an imaginary injury done to him as a suitor and it had no connection whatever with his professional character, or anything done by him professionally, either as an Advocate or an Attorney. It was a contempt of Court committed by an individual in his personal character only. To offences of that kind there has been attached by law and by long practice a definite kind of punishment, viz., fine and imprisonment.....We think..... there was no necessity for the Judges to go farther than to award to that offence the customary punishment for contempt of Court."

After Mr. Tayler had been brought into Court, I asked him whether he had caused the letters in question which bore his name to be published. He at first hesitated. I do not state this by way of complaint against him, for he was possibly taken by surprise at the moment, and he almost immediately afterwards did, as I should expect Mr. Tayler or any other gentleman, who had sent a letter to a newspaper for publication would do, he very properly admitted that he was the author of the letters, and that he had caused them to be printed and published. I am not quite certain whether I spoke before his admission of what I should do, or spoke after it of what I should have done, if he had not admitted the publication. My belief is that it was the former, and that I said that if Mr. Tayler disavowed the letters, I should be compelled to send for the printer and publisher of the paper, who was just as liable in point of law to be punished for contempt as Mr. Tayler, or words to that effect. This opinion has been challenged, and I proceed to prove that it was well founded.

(7) (1845) 6 Q. B. 773; 14 L. J. Q. B. 154; 9 Jur. 296; 115 E. R. 291.

(8) (1765) Wilm. 243, 252—271; 97 E. R. 94; See 19 How. St. Tr. 1082 note.

(9) (1863) 1 P. C. 283; 4 Moore P. C. (N. S.) 10; 36 L. J. P. C. 9; 15 W. R. 533; 16 E. R. 269.

There can be no doubt that the publication in a newspaper of letters like these has in fact a much more injurious effect than the mere writing and sending them to the editor of a newspaper. If the editor of the Englishman had torn up Mr. Tayler's letters and put them into his waste basket, no great injury to the public, or to any one else, would have been caused. But when they were published in the Englishman, they were spread over the country wherever that newspaper had circulation. If the writing of those letters was injurious, the injury was increased a thousand fold by the publication of them in the newspaper to all the readers of that journal. The printer and publisher of the paper doubtless had no feeling upon the subject. The real guilt of publication was mainly that of the author who sent them to the editor in order that they might be published. Under these circumstances, the Court had its election to punish both the author and publisher of the newspaper, or either of them.

In this case the Court saw no necessity to punish both. They intended to deal only with the author. If the author, when brought into Court, had disavowed the publication, the Court would not have allowed justice to be defeated or baffled. It would have sent for the publisher of the paper, and if he had failed to produce the letters or to bring the case home to the author, the Court would have held him responsible. If the printer of a newspaper publishes a letter with the name of an author attached to it, he must bear the responsibility if he is unable, when required, to prove that it was published with the authority of the person by whom it purports to have been signed. Notwithstanding all that has been said in the newspapers, I unhesitatingly affirm that that is the course which I should have adopted. I trust that I am firm enough and conscientious enough not to be influenced by anything that has been publicly said upon this subject. If I had intended to punish the publisher, I should have punished him, notwithstanding the remarks which have been made. I did not intend to punish him after Mr. Tayler avowed the authorship, and nothing that has been said would induce me to hold the publisher responsible. I have pursued the same course precisely as that which I should have pursued if no remarks upon the subject had been made in the public newspapers.

Now with regard to the liability of the printer, there can be no doubt, assuming that the letters are not fair criticisms. If they were fair criticisms, of course, both Mr. Tayler and the publisher of the newspaper were justified in publishing them.

In the case of St. James's Evening Post case (4), which I have already cited from 2 Atkyns, the contempt was committed by publishing a libel reflecting upon certain suitors in matters pending in the Court. The libel had been published in the Champion newspaper, and also in the St. James's Evening Post.

Lord Hardwicke said that there were three sorts of contempt:—

"One was scandalizing the Court itself: another was abusing the suitors: there may also be another contempt in prejudicing mankind against persons before the case is heard. There cannot be anything of greater consequence than to keep the streams of justice clear and pure, that parties" (and I may add the Judges) "may proceed with safety both to themselves and their character."

It was held that the libel was a contempt of Court, and Lord Hardwicke remarked:—

"With regard to Mrs. Read [the publisher of the St. James's Evening Post] by way of alleviation, it is said, that she did not know the nature of the paper which she had published, and that printing papers and pamphlets was the trade which she got her livelihood by. But though it is true, this is a trade, yet they must take care to do it with prudence and caution; for if they print anything that is libellous, it is no excuse to say that the printer had no knowledge of the contents, and was entirely ignorant of its being libellous; and so is the rule at law, and I will always adhere to the strict rules of law in these cases.

"Therefore, Mrs. Read must be committed to the Fleet, according to the common order of the Court upon contempts.

"But as to Mr. Huggonson" (the printer of the "Champion" newspaper), "who is already a prisoner in the Fleet, I do not think this any motive for compassion, because these persons generally take advantage of their being prisoners to print any libellous or defamatory matter which is brought to them, without scruple or hesitation.

"If these printers had disclosed the name of the person who brought this paper to them, there might have been something said in mitigation of their offence; but as they think proper to conceal it, I must order Mrs. Read to be committed to the Fleet, and Mr. Huggonson to be taken into close custody of the Warden."

In Crawford's case (6), which has already been referred to, it was ordered that Robert Fargher, the printer and publisher of the Mona Herald newspaper, should attend the Court on 1st February "to answer for unlawfully and contemptuously printing and publishing" an article tending to scandalize and defame the Court. It appeared that Fargher attended and admitted that he was the printer and publisher, and expressed his regret that, in consequence of bad health, he had not given the article the consideration it ought to have had, and regretted that it should have given offence to the Court, and he tendered an apology and offered to publish it in all the insular newspapers. The Court did not accept the apology, but forthwith committed Fargher for contempt of Court. Crawford then stated to the Court that he was the author and was willing to take the responsibility, provided the Court relieved Fargher, but that he would not acknowledge the right of the Court to act in a vague, informal, and summary manner. The Court, however, committed Crawford, and he and Fargher were immediately removed from Court in custody.

In a case of Cann v. Cann (10) it appears that —

Mrs. Farley, having been committed to the Fleet upon motion of the plaintiff for having published an advertisement in the "Bristol Journal," relating to the answer in Chancery put in by the defendant, Sir Robert Cann, moved to be discharged, having paid for costs of the contempt and submitted; as also the defendant did, confessing the advertisement was put in at his instance. The plaintiff did not oppose the discharge of Mrs. Farley, and left the matter to the Court. Lord Hardwicke, Chancellor, said, his reason for committing was not only for the sake of the party injured by the advertisement, but for the sake of the public proceedings in Court, to hinder such advertisements, which tend to prepossess people as to the proceedings in the Court. But as on a prosecution for a libel in the King's Bench for publishing a scandalous advertisement, if they confess in what manner it was brought to them and everything about it, that Court takes the matter into consideration to alleviate the punishment; so here, though Mrs. Farley's ignorance of law was no justification for the publishing the advertisement, yet having discovered in what manner it was brought to her with other advertisements, and disclosed everything, it was a ground to alleviate the punishment. Therefore, he granted the motion.

In Ex parte Jones (11) Lord Erskine, whom no one will venture to charge with having endeavoured to shackle the liberty of the press, said: —

"In this dedication the object is avowed by defaming the proceedings of the Court, standing upon its Rules and Orders, and interesting the public, prejudiced in favour of the author by her own partial representation, to procure a different species of judgment from that, which would be administered in the ordinary course; and by flattering the Judge to taint the source of justice. This pamphlet has been sent to me.

(10) (1754) 2 Ves. Sen. 520; 2 Dick. 795; 28 E. R. 332.

(11) (1803) 13 Ves. (Jun.) 237; 33 E. R. 283.

"As to the printers, as Lord Hardwicke observes, it is no excuse, that the printer was ignorant of the contents. Their intention may have been innocent; but, as Lord Mansfield has said, the fact, whence the illegal motive is inferred, must be traversed; and the party, admitting the act, cannot deny the motive. The maxim 'actus non facit reum, nisi mens sit rea,' cannot be made applicable to this subject in the ordinary administration of justice; as the effect would be, that the ends of justice would be defeated by contrivance. But upon the satisfactory account, given by three of these printers, though undoubtedly under a criminal proceeding they would be in mercy (those words in their legal sense meaning amerced) in a case of contempt, though I have the jurisdiction, I shall not exercise it. The other printer appears upon the affidavits under different circumstances. Having made the observation that this pamphlet ought not to be printed, being totally uninteresting to the public, yet he does print it; and though the locus pœnitentiæ was afforded to him, and he was called upon not to print any more, he proceeded, until he had notice of this petition.

"Let the Committee and his wife, and the printer, to whom I have last alluded, be committed to the Fleet prison."

Let me not be misunderstood. I have not cited the above cases as precedents as to the mode in which the Court ought to exercise its discretion. Discretion as to punishment must depend upon the facts of each particular case. I cite the cases merely to show what the law is, and what the power of the Court, not to show what the Court ought to do in the exercise of that power. If a printer were to publish defamatory and contemptuous libels sent to him for publication by a gentleman beyond the jurisdiction of the Court, or libels published in another paper beyond the jurisdiction, or if a printer should refuse to give up the name of the real author of the libel, his case would be very different from that of a printer who, having committed an error, should apologize and give up the name of the author.

I am free to admit that I alone am responsible for all that has been done in this matter, though my honourable colleague does not desire to be relieved from any part of the responsibility. I sat with my honourable colleague both on the hearing of the appeal and on the hearing of the petition of the review. I knew him before he was raised to the Bench. I have sat with him frequently as a colleague, and I believe that I have had as good an opportunity as any one of forming a just estimate of his character. Though now speaking in his presence, I may be permitted to say that he is a man of ability and learning, very unassuming, yet high minded, of a gentle, kind, and amicable disposition, independent and always ready to maintain his opinion so long as he conceives it to be right, and equally ready to abandon it if convinced that it is wrong. He is a man to whom I am sure it would give pain to injure the reputation or to wound unnecessarily the feelings of any one. He is the second native gentleman who by his own abilities has raised himself to the high position of a Judge of the High Court.

I saw the letter of the 7th April on that day, but being particularly engaged I did not read it attentively. On the following Monday, the 12th, I saw the letter of that date, and in the evening, after I returned from Court, I read it carefully in conjunction with that of the 7th, to which it referred. I then considered it necessary to vindicate the honour and character of my honourable colleague and the dignity of the Court; and having heard and believed that Mr. Tayler was about to leave Calcutta for England on the following morning, I wrote to my honourable colleague at a late hour of the night to meet me at 6 o'clock on the following morning. He did so; after consulting together we considered it necessary to take proceedings for contempt. We adjourned to the Town Hall, where we were met by the Under-Sheriff and the Registrar, and we ordered a writ of attachment to be issued. I may here remark that, up to the time of our meeting on the Tuesday morning, my honourable colleague had never uttered one syllable of complaint to me regarding the charges that had been made against him. If the character of any other of the Judges had been similarly assailed I should have thought it necessary to adopt a similar course. But it appeared to me to be especially necessary in the present case, when the attack had been made upon a native gentleman, the only one of his countrymen who had a seat on the Bench of the High Court.

It now appears from the affidavit of the Sheriff's officer that Mr. Tayler intended up to the Monday to leave for England in the steamer which was to sail on Tuesday, and that on that day he was allowed by the Peninsular and Oriental Company to postpone his passage until the next steamer. The letter of Monday, the 12th, could not have been sent to the editor of the Englishman later than Saturday or Sunday, at which time Mr. Tayler must have had the intention of leaving the jurisdiction of the Court on the day following that on which the letter could be published, and in all probability he had the same intention at the time when he sent to the editor the letter published on Tuesday, the 13th instant, which we also had before us when we issued the attachment.

There were two modes of proceeding open to us: one by a Rule calling upon Mr. Tayler to show cause why he should not be adjudged guilty of contempt of Court,—the other by attachment, under which Mr. Tayler might be arrested and brought into Court for a similar purpose. If we had gone through the farce of making an affidavit of the facts founded on our own belief, in order to satisfy our own minds that a contempt of Court had been committed and had issued a Rule to show cause, which Mr. Tayler probably considered was the only course which the Court could adopt (for on his being arrested he asked the Sheriff's officer why he had not had notice), if, I say, we had made such an affidavit and issued a Rule to show cause to be served on Mr. Tayler on board the steamer on the eve of his departure, we should have deservedly brought ourselves, and we should also have brought the Court and its process, into utter derision and contempt. If we had asked the Registrar to make an affidavit, he knew no more of the facts than we did. He could merely have sworn that he had seen the letters in the papers with Mr. Tayler's name attached to them, and that he verily believed that Mr. Tayler had caused them to be published; and, further, that he had heard and believed that Mr. Tayler was about to leave the jurisdiction of the Court. We had as much knowledge ourselves of the facts without such an affidavit as we should have had with it. We, therefore, determined to act upon our own knowledge of those facts, which, if sworn to by any one to the best of his belief, would have been sufficient to support a Rule to show cause. There was no private complainant. The charge was made by the Court itself upon its own knowledge of facts, which, if sworn to by any one to the best of his belief, would have made a prima facie case of contempt of Court. We concluded that the editor of the "Englishman" would not have published letters with Mr. Tayler's name attached to them without having had them authenticated, and we were right in our conclusion that Mr. Tayler had caused the letters to be published. The writ of attachment which was issued was not a commitment for contempt, but a process to bring Mr. Tayler into Court to answer a charge of contempt. It was necessary, under the circumstances, not merely to vindicate the honour of the Judge and the dignity of the Court, but also to teach gentlemen like Mr. Tayler that they cannot commit contempts of Court with impunity even though they are about to sail the next day for England, and also to prove to the public that justice is not to be baffled or defeated by artifice.

I will cite two or three out of many authorities to show that the Court is not powerless in such cases.

In Bacon's Abridgment, Tit. "Attachment," page 386, it is said:—

"An attachment is a process that issues at the discretion of the Judges of a Court of Record against a person for some contempt for which he is to be committed, and may be awarded by them upon a bare suggestion, or on their own knowledge, without any appeal, indictment, or information for though by the Statute of Magna Charta none are to be imprisoned sine judicio parium vel per legem terræ, yet this summary method of proceeding, being absolutely necessary to the furtherance and execution of justice, seems to have been long practised, and is certainly now established as part of the law of the land."

In the matter of WILLIAM TAYLER.

The rule is laid down to the same effect in Comyn's Digest, Tit. "Attachment," A. i., and in Hawkins' Pleas of the Crown, 213.

In Rex v. Jones (12)—

"The defendant having treated the process of the Court contemptuously, an attachment went against him, without a Rule to show cause, (according to Salk. 84) and there being intimations that he relied on the assistance of his fellow workmen to rescue him, the Court sent for the Sheriff of Middlesex into Court, and ordered him to take a sufficient force."

I am now speaking in the presence of a large and enlightened audience, and before a learned and independent Bar, a profession of which the members, from their education and habits of mind, have ever been the watchful guardians of the rights and liberties of the people, and the foremost to protect against any arbitrary or unconstitutional exercise of power. If I have exercised tyrannically the powers committed to me (as I have been charged with doing), or if I have exercised them unconstitutionally, I know that my conduct is subject to be criticised by the Bar and by the public; but I have no misgivings, because I know that if criticised it will be criticised honestly and fairly, and independently. I claim not to be free from criticism: I am always open to conviction, and if convinced of error, I am ready to acknowledge it.

Before I conclude I wish to say a few words as to the course which has been taken out of doors since these proceedings were commenced.

On the 16th April, whilst this matter was pending, an article appeared in the "Englishman" which I will read:—

"We are not surprised to find that our views respecting the action of Sir Barnes Peacock, in summarily arresting and dragging Mr Tayler before the Court for writing to a newspaper, are likely to be shared in by contemporaries who have some influence on public opinion. The Friend of India says:—

'Sir Barnes Peacock stated that the printer and publisher of the Englishman also was liable to prosecution,—an opinion which raises an interesting question as to the liberty of the press in India.'

"The Pioneer, having heard the news of the arrest by telegraph, thus comments:—

"'If the letters alluded to be those in the Englishman of the 7th and 12th instant, and if the fact be that Mr. Tayler has been abruptly arrested by the High Court solely in consequence of having written them, we do not wonder at there being excitement. Such an act would naturally seem to every Briton an act of presumptuous tyranny. But we can hardly believe the fact of the arrest, or if it has been made, it must have been made on some other ground than merely that Mr. Tayler challenged and quizzed the decision of a Judge of the High Court. Sublime personage as he is, a Judge's judgment is no more sacred from fair criticism than any other publication, and well for the purity of justice that it is so.'"

Having made the above quotation from the Pioneer, the Englishman proceeds:—

"We suspect that Sir Barnes, if he attempts to carry out his dictum too far, will raise a storm not easy to quell. There are many people who do not care for the grievances of Mr. Tayler, but who will not brook an encroachment upon their right of appeal to the press concerning the public acts of public men. A Judge's acts are no more exempt from public criticism than those of a Chairman of the Justices."

Again, to show how little the facts of the case were understood, I will read an extract from an article in the same paper, dated the 19th April. It is there said:—

"Attention has been drawn to the fact, which no one, as far as we have heard, questioned, that Sir Barnes Peacock originally held, in the case which seems likely to gain so much notoriety, that Mr. W. Tayler had been guilty of fraud, and that this opinion had been concurred in by Mr. Justice Mitter. The contention raised in Tayler's letters is, however, that he was afterwards allowed an opportunity of explanation, and that the Chief Justice then acquitted him of fraud, whilst Mr. Justice Mitter moderated his decision in no way whatever."

I have already shown most distinctly that I never did find Mr. Tayler guilty of fraud; that I had no charge to retract, and that I never did, after hearing his explanation, acquit him of anything.

(12) (1795) 1 Strange 185; 93 E. R. 462.

It would have been well if all the public newspapers had followed the calm and dignified course which in the first article which I have read is reported to have been taken by the Friend of India. In that paper the opinion expressed by the Chief Justice was brought to notice, and was treated as one which raised an interesting question as to the liberty of the press in India. That course left the question as to the liability of the printer and publisher open to discussion, after the Court should have explained the grounds upon which it had acted, and had referred to the authorities in support of the opinion which it had expressed. But, notwithstanding the very proper course which had been taken by the Friend of India, we were told in a journal published on Saturday evening last that the members of the Fourth Estate had protested against this unexpected attack on the liberty of the press, and that with happy unanimity they had warmly denounced the action taken by the Chief Justice. To say that the press had unanimously denounced, without waiting for the explanation of the Judges, is a libel rather upon the press than upon the Chief Justice.

I have referred to the above articles for the purpose of now declaring publicly that to charge a Judge with presumptuous tyranny for the mode in which he is proceeding in a matter pending before him, or to publish anything respecting that matter whilst it is under consideration, with a view to induce the Judge to alter his course, is a grave contempt of Court. The Englishman by publishing the article from the Pioneer has rendered itself as responsible for the article as though it had been one of its own. I am willing to believe that the expressions in the article of the 16th April, to which I have referred, were made without duly reflecting that the matters to which they related were then sub judice, though they would not have been justifiable at any time.

I am an unflinching advocate of the liberty of the press. I believe that its freedom is one of the main bulwarks of the rights of the people. I claim no exemption as regards my public acts from the most rigid scrutiny and the most unsparing criticism. All I claim is, that there shall be no misrepresentation and no wilful or unfair concealment of facts; and that those who deny infallibility to the Judges shall not claim infallibility for themselves. I have had no cause to complain of the public press since I have been in this country. Speaking generally, I believe it to be fair, independent, and impartial. There has not, I believe, been a single criminal prosecution against a newspaper since I have had the honour to hold the office of Chief Justice, and there have been only one or two private actions for libel. The press in this country addresses itself for the most part to readers of education and intelligence, men who judge and form opinions for themselves. The press is fair, it is not scurrilous: the public are not captious; and public men do not object to have their public acts freely discussed and fairly criticised. Our Courts, therefore, are generally free from all complaints against the press, either civil or criminal, on the ground of defamation.

And now I wish to declare publicly and emphatically that the Judges are not, and cannot be, influenced in the discharge of their duty by any attacks made upon them by the press. Nothing that has been said by the press upon this subject, and nothing that can be said, no fear of the threatened storm, can even divert me or my honourable colleague from pursuing that plain, straightforward course which our consciences dictate. No unfair criticisms can disturb my equanimity, nor in the slightest degree affect my happiness. They are based on the consciousness that the honest and conscientious discharge of my duty has ever been the ruling principle of my life. That is a foundation too strong to be undermined by critics, who attempt to criticise that which they do not understand, or to be shaken by any storms which it is in their power to raise.

I am a servant of the public, and I respect their opinion. If they believe that I have exercised in an arbitrary, tyrannical, or oppressive manner the great powers which have been entrusted to me, or if they believe that I have exercised them unconstitutionally, let them express that opinion in a manner which cannot be misunderstood, and I am ready to bow to their verdict. But I shall not accept the expressions of a few newspapers as the general expression of public opinion. If ever I have the misfortune to lose, whether justly or otherwise, the confidence of the public, I shall be ready to lay down those powers which, without that confidence, I shall be no longer able to exercise for the public good.

And now permit me to conclude in the words of Lord Mansfield: —

"I wish popularity, but it is that popularity which follows, not that which is run after. It is that popularity which sooner or later never fails to do justice to the pursuit of noble ends by noble means. I will not do that which my conscience tells me is wrong, to gain the daily praise of all the papers which issue from the press. I will not avoid doing that which I think right, though it should draw upon me the whole artillery of libels, all that falsehood and malice can invent or credulity can swallow."

Mr. Tayler was then addressed by the Chief Justice as follows: —

William Tayler, the Court has considered all that you have urged, and it adjudges that you have committed grave contempts of Court in having published the letters of the 7th, 12th, and 13th April in the "Englishman". I have already fully stated my reasons for holding that those letters were not fair or honest criticisms, but that they were founded upon misrepresentation and wilful concealment of the true state of facts. There can be no doubt that you must have known, when you published those letters, that the reflections which you were casting upon the learned Judge had no reference to the state of facts which appeared before him when he pronounced the judgment complained of but to a new state of facts, which, whether true or false, you knew were not before him at the time. It is unnecessary for me to say whether your assertion that at the time you sold the estate you were under the belief that it was not subject to the attachment in execution of the Ranee's decree, was a wilful misrepresentation or not. You must have known, as I have already shown, that the charge which you preferred against Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter, of casting an unmeasured imputation upon you without one tittle of evidence to support it, was false and without any foundation. You knew that, according to the case as it stood, when Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter pronounced judgment, he was fully justified in saying what he did. You substituted a fresh state of facts, of which part, to say the least of it, was false within your own knowledge, and having wilfully concealed the real state of the case you criticised the judgment and founded the charges which you made against the Judge with reference to that statement.

It is not even necessary to show that any part of the misrepresentation was wilful, for, whether it was so or not, you are responsible for it. You knew that the learned Judge could act only upon the facts as they appeared before him at the time, and that according to those facts there was no ground of complaint. It is no justification or excuse to say that you were not in the country when the action against you was defended, and that your agent acted fraudulently in that defence which he set up. If a person undertakes to criticise the acts of a public man, he must take care not to assert that which is not true as the basis of his criticism, and he is bound not to conceal wilfully anything which would show that the criticism is not well founded.

You have stated in your affidavit that the letters written were written for the sole purpose of vindicating your own character. I have shown that, whatever were the reasons which induced you to write those letters, you introduced into them matters which were wholly unnecessary for that vindication, and which reflected on Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter and others of the Judges. I have also shown the animus with which those reflections were made. This affidavit, instead of mitigating, rather aggravates the guilt of your contempt. When you were before the Court on Tuesday last, I called your attention to the difference between the statement contained in your first letter and in the grounds of review and the assertions which you made in the letters which you subsequently published in the newspaper. In the former you stated that you had no ground of complaint against Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter, based as it was on the defence set up by your native Mookhtear, and supported by the evidence which he volunteered in the case. In the letter you charged the learned Judge with casting upon you an unmeasured imputation without one tittle of evidence to support it.

I do not think that you have mitigated your offence by the mode in which you have endeavoured to reconcile those conflicting statements.

You have endeavoured to do so by stating that when you wrote your first letter to the Englishman, and when you applied for a review of the judgment, you believed that the Chief Justice as well as Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter had imputed the fraud to you. I have shown in my judgment that if there was not one tittle of evidence to support the imputation when made by Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter alone, there could not have been a tittle of evidence to justify the imputation if it had been made by Mr. Justice Dwakanath Mitter in conjunction with the Chief Justice. I have no doubt whatever, looking at that statement, that your charge was an unmanly one, and that you made a charge against Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter which you would not have ventured to make against the Chief Justice.

Further, I am of opinion that you have aggravated the contempt by contending that the charge in the last paragraph of the letter of the 13th April was not intended to apply to any of the Judges of the High Court. I have not the slightest doubt that in using the words "official principalities" you did intend to refer to the Judges of the High Court. You say the words had reference to something gone by long ago. But the letter, on the face of it, could not have referred to those bygone acts, as those acts had, and could have, no connection with the charge against a Judge of the High Court. Besides, those transactions occurred many years ago and in the paragraph to which I am referring you say: —

"It appears to me that of late years some such element of anti-feline irritation must appertain to my unhappy person, for there is a certain class among the official principalities of Bengal who, directly I am brought into contact with them, appear to be at once affected by an overpowering internal excitability which affects the understanding even of the wise and good, and intensifies the folly of the foolish, but at the same time always issues in one result—injury, insult, or wrong to myself."

In one of the letters in which you charged Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter with wanton insult and unfounded aspersion, you introduced the words which I have read, and if they apply to the transactions to which you say they do apply, they have no bearing whatever on the subject, and you have sworn positively that your only object in writing the letters was the vindication of your character. But, whether you had such intention or not, you made use of language which must have conveyed that meaning to others, and was such as to lead any ordinary reader to believe that you intended it to apply to at least one or more of the Judges of the High Court. I have no hesitation in saying that the words, in the reasonable and ordinary construction of them, had reference to one or more of those Judges, and charged them with a want of impartiality in all cases in which you were a suitor.

It is a high and serious offence to cast unjust and defamatory imputations on a Judge. Judges are subject to be criticised, but they must be protected from unfounded defamation. Had you been charged in an indictment in England with writing such letters, I cannot think that any less punishment than imprisonment and fine would have been passed upon you, and probably the imprisonment would have extended to a year.

It is not the wish or desire of this Court to impose any excessive punishment on you. You have admitted that you have committed a contempt. I do not say that that has aggravated your offence; it has mitigated it. You no doubt did intend to make charges against the learned Judge, which were not justified by the real facts, but which the public would be induced to believe were well founded, because they were based on misrepresentation, and because you concealed the real state of the case.

In the matter of WILLIAM TAYLER.

Taking all the circumstances into consideration, the Court orders that you stand committed for one month to the civil side of the Presidency Jail, and that you pay a fine of Rs. 500, and that you be further imprisoned till the fine be paid.

You state that you are willing still further to apologise. I have endeavoured to show (whether I have been able to satisfy your mind or not I cannot say) that the charges against Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter were without the slightest foundation. The other charge to which I have referred is equally unfounded; and whatever your intention in publishing that part of the letter may have been, or whatever meaning you intended to convey, you were not justified in using language which would induce an ordinary reader to believe that you referred to the Judges of the High Court. If you think fit to add to the apology which you have already published (and it is for you to decide whether you can conscientiously do so or not) the Court is willing to mitigate the sentence. If, after what you have heard, you state that, upon reflection, you find that the charges which you made against Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter were unwarranted and wholly without foundation, and that you are sorry for having made them, you may do so: and you may add, if you wish it, either that you did not intend to cast any reflection upon any of the other Judges, or that the reflection cast was unfounded, and if you publish that apology in the "Englishman," you may apply on Monday, the 3rd of May next, for your discharge on payment of the fine.

On Tuesday, the 27th April, Mr. Tayler addressed a petition to the Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter, which was sent to the Chief Justice at an early hour in the morning.

A writ of habeas corpus was forthwith issued by the Chief Justice to the Superintendent of the Presidency Jail, commanding him to bring Mr. Tayler into Court at half-past nine o'clock.

The petition was as follows:—

"That on the 24th of April instant, your petitioner was committed for contempt of Court in having caused to be published in Calcutta certain letters in the Englishman newspaper relating to a decision of the Honorable Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter in the case noted in the margin, and was ordered to pay a fine to Her Majesty of Rs. 500, and to be further imprisoned until such fine was paid, or until the further order of the Court.

"That the Court was pleased to intimate to your petitioner that, in the event of his publishing in the Englishman newspaper a further apology in the terms suggested by the Court, in addition to the apology published by him on the 22nd instant, he was to be at liberty to apply to the Court for his discharge.

"That your petitioner has paid the fine of Rs. 500 imposed upon him by the Court, as will appear from the certificate of the Accountant-General of the Court, already submitted.

"That your petitioner has also published in this morning's Englishman the further apology required of him.

"That your petitioner is very sorry for having written the letters against Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter, and is also sorry for having made use of expressions which have been considered as reflecting upon the other Judges of the Court.

"That your petitioner can truly say that he never intended to reflect upon the other Judges of the Court.

"That your petitioner's health, which was previously in a weak state, has been seriously affected by the anxieties attending his trial, and by his imprisonment at this season of the year.

"That your petitioner had taken his passage to England, and arranged to leave by the steamer which will leave at 11 o'clock this morning.

"Your petitioner having fully complied with the order of the Court, and made all the reparation in his power, prays that the remainder of the term of his imprisonment may be remitted, and that he may be forthwith discharged from custody."

Upon taking his seat, the Chief Justice addressed Mr. Tayler to the following effect:—

Mr. Tayler,—The Court has read your petition, which is a very proper one. You have now fully submitted. You state that you have paid the fine, and that you have published in this morning's Englishman the further apology required of you. You further state that you are very sorry for having written the letters against Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter, and that you are also sorry for having made use of expressions which have been condemned by the Court as reflecting upon the other Judges; and that you can truly say that you never intended to reflect upon them. You state that your health, which was previously in a weak state, has been seriously affected by the anxieties attending your trial and by your imprisonment at this time of the year; that you had taken your passage to England, and had arranged to leave by the steamer which is to leave at 11 o'clock this morning. You then, after stating that you have fully complied with the order of the Court and have made all the reparation in your power, pray that the remainder of the term of imprisonment may be remitted, and that you may be forthwith discharged out of custody.

In the matter of WILLIAM TAYLER.

You have also forwarded a copy of a medical certificate from Drs. Macrae and Brougham, dated 25th April, in which it is stated, amongst other things, that for the last three months you have been suffering from attacks of recurrent gout with aggravated dyspepsia, from which you have become greatly debilitated; that a prolonged imprisonment, from its depressing influences, would be attended with risk of serious impairment to your health, if not with more grave consequences, and that you ought not to remain in this country a day longer than can be avoided; in fact, that you had been advised to leave India a month ago.

When you were before the Court on Tuesday last you expressed yourself willing to apologize. I then stated that whatever apology might be made, it ought to be published as widely and extensively as your letters to the editior of the Englishman. The case was adjourned until Saturday last, in order to give you an opportunity of publishing in the Englishman such an apology as you might see fit; and, without dictating or recommending any particular form of apology, I called your attention to the fact that you had not retracted the charges which you had publicly preferred against Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter.

In cases of this nature a proper apology may mitigate, but it cannot wholly excuse or justify, or form a ground for a total exemption from punishment.

On the 22nd April you published an apology in the Englishman, but it contained no denial or disavowal of the truth of the charges which you had preferred. The Court, considering all the circumstances of the case, ordered you to stand committed to the Presidency Jail for one month, or until further orders, and to pay a fine of Rs. 500. The month was fixed as the maximum of the imprisonment which, under any circumstances, you were to undergo. A maximum was fixed in consequence of a doubt thrown out in Crawford's case (6), whether a commitment for contempt could be "until further orders," which might amount to imprisonment for life.

It was not necessary to consider whether the usual mode of framing commitments for contempt until further orders, which was the form adopted by Lord Cottenham in Mr. Lechmere Charlton's case (5), and had been adopted in numerous other cases, could be supported or not. A month was fixed as the maximum, and the words "or until further orders" were added in order to enable the Court to discharge you at an earlier period if you should make your apology complete; and you were informed that you might apply for your discharge on Monday next. You have now made your apology complete and have sent it to this Court under your signature; and you have also published a copy of it in the Englishman this morning. In addition to the apology* which you published on the 22nd

*The apology is as follows:—

"TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ENGLISHMAN."

SIR,—You are no doubt fully informed of the result of yesterday's proceedings in the matter of the charge against me of contempt of Court, for which I was arrested on the 15th instant.

Considering that the fact of my arrest was sufficient evidence that the Court held my former letters to your address to "constitute such contempts," I resolved, after consultation with my friends and my learned Counsel, to submit on this point to the decision of the Court; and, as I had never intended to commit, and never thought that I had committed, such contempt, but had written with the sole purpose of vindicating my character, I at once tendered, both orally and by affidavit, a full and unreserved apology both to Mr. Justice instant, you say that you regret to state that, upon reflection, you find that the charges made by you against Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter were unwarranted and wholly without foundation. Further, you declare that you had no intention to cast any reflection upon the High Court or upon any of the other Judges of the Court. The Court has already determined that they could put no other meaning upon the last part of your letter of the 13th April than that it was intended to charge want of impartiality on the part of the Judges in cases in which you are concerned, which always resulted in injury, insult, or wrong to you. Whether you intended it or not you are responsible for publishing words which, in the opinion of the Court, were susceptible of no other meaning. You have been punished for your offence, you have now fully and very properly apologized; and whatever opinion the Court may entertain, it cannot fairly ask or endeavour to compel you to admit that in publishing the letters in the Englishman you had any intention or knowledge which, as a gentleman, you disavow.

The Court agrees with you that you have now made all the reparation in your power, or that the Court could fairly expect, and they do not wish to do anything which would add further pain to the anxiety which you have already undergone, and to the humiliation which you have suffered. You have already undergone sufficient punishment to be a warning to yourself and to others; no additional amount of punishment could add to that warning. The Court sat at this early hour, not for their own convenience, nor for any other reason, except that you might proceed to England by the steamer, and that you might not be detained in this country an hour longer than was absolutely necessary.

In the course of his address, the Chief Justice pointed out that there was a clerical error in the letter published in the Englishman this morning, which made Mr. Tayler say that he had no intention to cast any reflection "upon any of the Judges," instead of any of the other Judges, which were the words of the original apology signed by Mr. Tayler. He said this for the sake of the Court and for the sake of Mr. Tayler. The Court, after Mr. Tayler's apology with regard to Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter, could not fairly ask him to say that he never intended to cast reflection upon any of the Judges, nor could Mr. Tayler, as a gentleman, have made such a statement.

Mr. Tayler wished to be allowed to say that the application for his discharge from imprisonment which had been made to the Lieutenant-Governor was made by his friends without his sanction. He was fully aware that the Lieutenant-Governor had no power to interfere in a case like the present, or to order his discharge from imprisonment.

The Chief Justice said that he had seen the medical certificates which had been forwarded to His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor, that without entering into the question whether the Lieutenant Governor had the power or not, he thought that the certificates were not such as could have justified the exercise of it. They were not even such as would have induced the Court to discharge Mr. Tayler before the end of the month, if the additional apology had not been punished; but they were certificates which might very properly influence the Court after that apology had been made.

Dwarkanath Mitter and the Court at large. But the Hon'ble the Chief Justice, in postponing the case for final orders until Saturday, suggested that I should give the same publicity to this apology as was given to my former letters In compliance with this intimation, and as my apology is in truth without reservation or stint, I shall be much obliged by your printing this letter, if possible, in your journal of to-morrow.

There is only one other point which it is desirable to mention.

The Hon'ble the Chief Justice remarked that he did not observe in my apology anything which showed that I retracted my charge against Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter. In accordance with this suggestion, I beg to say that I have no hesitation whatever in retracting all such expressions and observations as may have been deemed by the Court to be improper or contemptuous; and I may observe that I had intended my apology to include such retraction.

I hope that this public expression will be satisfactory to Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter, and meet the suggestion of the Hon'ble the Chief Justice.

W. TAYLER."

Calcutta, 21st April 1869.

Even without those certificates, the Court would have had no desire to inflict any further pain on Mr. Tayler, after he had so fully submitted, and had made so complete an apology, and presented so proper a petition.

Mr. Tayler was then discharged.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

CRIMINAL PETITION No. 899 OF 1917.

November 27, 1917.

Present:—Mr. Justice Shadi Lal.

THAKAR SINGH—COMPLAINANT—PETITIONER]

versus

KIRPAL SINGH AND OTHERS—ACCUSED—RESPONDENTS.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 203—Complaint, dismissal of—Further inquiry, order for—Dismissal of complaint under section 203 after enquiry by police validity of—District Magistrate, direction by, to Magistrate to pass particular order in case pending before him, validity of—Report of Police Officer, whether can be sent to Magistrate other than one directing investigation.

Where a Magistrate sends a case to the Police under section 202, Criminal Procedure Code, for investigation and report, the Police Officer to whom the case is sent acts wrongly in sending the papers after the investigation to another Magistrate and applying to him for a kharij-ul-waqua order, when the case is pending in the Court of the Magistrate who referred it to the Police. [p. 965, cols. 1 & 2.]

A District Magistrate acts wrongly in giving a direction to a Magistrate subordinate to him that he should pass a particular order with respect to a case which is pending before him in his judicial capacity. [p. 965, col. 1.]

A Sessions Judge ordered further inquiry in a case dismissed by a Magistrate under section 203 of the Criminal Procedure Code, pointing out that the complainant had other evidence to produce to show that the cattle in the possession of the accused were his and suggested that a Police Officer should be deputed to search for the missing cattle The Magistrate again dismissed the case under section 203, Criminal Procedure Code, upon the investigation and report of the Police:

Held, (1) that the Sessions Judge did not direct an investigation by the Police but simply pointed out that a Police Officer might be deputed to search for the cattle; [p. 964, col. 2.]

(2 that the complainant was entitled to produce evidence, oral and documentary, before the Magistrate, and the latter had no right to dismiss the complaint under section 203 when the order of the Sessions Judge clearly contemplated a trial of the case. [p. 964, col. 2.]

Petition, under section 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code, for revision of the order of the Sessions Judge, Gujranwala, dated the 2nd April 1917, affirming that of the Magistrate, 1st Class, Gujranwala, dated the 12th February 1917, dismissing the complaint for further inquiry.

Mr. Jai Gopal Sethi, for the Petitioner.

Lala Durga Das, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—After hearing arguments on both sides and examining the record, I am constrained to say that this case has been mismanaged and that there has been no compliance with the order of the Sessions Judge directing further inquiry. The learned Judge pointed out that the complainant had other evidence to produce in order to show that the cattle taken were his, and that they were in possession of the accused; he referred to certain documents, Exhibit P—1 and Exhibit D.W. 2, produced before him by the complainant in support of his allegation, and lastly he suggested that a Police Officer should be deputed "to search for the cattle."

The Sessions Judge's order was passed on the 2nd August 1915 and it was not until the 12th February 1917, that the Magistrate passed the order complained of, by which he dismissed the complaint under section 203, Criminal Procedure Code. Now, it is surprising that during this long period of 18 months not a single witness was examined by the Magistrate, nay, even the statement of the complainant was not recorded. The complaint has been dismissed simply upon the report of the Police. Now, in the first place the Sessions Judge did not direct an investigation by the Police, but pointed out that a Police Officer might be deputed only to search for the cattle. In the second place, the complainant was entitled to produce his evidence, oral and documentary, before the Magistrate, and the Court had no right to dismiss the complaint under section 203, when the order of the Sessions Judge clearly contemplated a trial of the case. The record shows that the complainant repeatedly asked the Court to make an inquiry into the matter as directed by the Sessions Judge, but no attention appears to have been paid to his request

His last application, dated the 4th December 1916, contains the following allegations and prayers.

"4. That in compliance with the order of the Sessions Judge the cattle were duly pointed out to the Police Officer by the petitioner in the month of August 1915, since when no further action has been taken in the matter, nor have the Police sent the property recovered to the Court."

"5. The petitioner prays that pursuant to the order of the Sessions Judge, an inquiry into his case be continued, the accused be summoned and the prosecution evidence recorded."

"6. The petitioner begs respectfully to point out that he is a poor man, while the principal accused is a person of great influence and wealth in the district and that the delay in the matter, which the petitioner fears may be due to the influence which the chief accused wields with the subordinate Police, is likely to be greatly prejudicial to the petitioner's case."

The prayer contained in the above application appears to have been ignored, and a perusal of the record shews that on the 19th January 1917 the District Magistrate took up the matter and suggested to the Assistant Commissioner that he should report to the Sessions Judge "that the further inquiry shews that Thakar Singh's case is false." It is hardly necessary to point out that the District Magistrate was wholly wrong in giving such a direction to the Magistrate with respect to a case which was pending before him in his judicial capacity. It was apparently in pursuance of this direction that the Magistrate made his order dismissing the complaint.

The case is undoubtedly an old one, but the complainant is in no way to blame for the delay which has occurred. It is clear that the Magistrate, who dealt with this case from time to time after the 2nd August 1915, took no judicial proceedings at all and simply depended upon the Police for investigation. Indeed, as the Sessions Judge in his order dated the 2nd April 1917 points out, the Sub Inspector of Police was wrong in sending the papers to the "Magistrate Ilaqa," and applying to him for a khariji-ul-waqua order when the case was pending in the Court of the Assistant Commissioner. Indeed the Assistant Commissioner in his order of the 11th July, 1916 himself refers to the impropriety of the procedure adopted by the Police, and remarks that "it is regrettable that the Court to which the case was originally submitted, i.e., the Assistant Commissioner's Court, was not informed of the completion of the investigation of the Police. Much trouble and time would have been saved thereby. The case had no concern with the Magistrate of the ilaqa."

Having regard to the reasons stated above I consider that a further inquiry is absolutely essential; and I direct the Assistant Commissioner to inquire into the complaint of the petitioner and receive such evidence, oral and documentary, as he may wish to produce, and then proceed in accordance with law. I accordingly accept the application for revision and quash the order dismissing the complaint.

Application accepted.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION NO. 78 OF 1918.

February 27, 1918.

Present:—Sir Henry Richards, KT., Chief Justice.

MAHU AND OTHERS—APPLICANTS

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 107—Security, when to be demanded—Wrongful act—Breach of peace—Proof.

Accused, owners of a certain piece of land, intended to open a market upon it for the sale of cattle near a place where there already was an old cattle market. The Magistrate, apprehending that that circumstance would very likely cause a breach of the peace, made an order against the accused under section 107, Criminal Procedure Code:

Held, that as the Magistrate was only informed that the accused intended to hold a market on their land without being at the same time informed that they intended to commit a breach of the peace by doing any wrongful act, the order of the Magistrate was illegal. [p. 966, col. 1.]

JASWANT SINGH v. EMPEROR.

Criminal revision from an order of the Magistrate, First Class, Aligarh.

Mr. Satya Chandra Mukerji, for the Applicants.

Mr. E. Malcomson (Assistant Government Advocate), for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—In this case the Magistrate has made an order under section 107 against the applicants. It appears there is a cattle market at a certain place not very far from land which is owned by the applicants. The Magistrate had reason to think that the applicants intended to open a market upon their land for the sale of cattle. He thought, and I agree with him, that this circumstance would very likely cause a breach of the peace. What would most likely happen was that the owners of the older market would raise objection to the new market and that the applicants as owners of the land upon which the new market would be held would resist the action of the owners of the older market. The section, however, provides that where the Magistrate is informed that any person is likely to commit a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquillity or to do any wrongful act which may occasion a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquillity, the Magistrate may then make the order. It is not pretended that the Magistrate was informed that any of the applicants intended to commit a breach of the peace. He was only informed that they intended to hold a market on their own land. If this act was wrongful act then the Magistrate would be entitled to act. But it is not contended that the act would be wrong. Under these circumstances I do not think that the order could legally be made. I accordingly allow the application and set aside the order of the Magistrate.

Application allowed.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

CRIMINAL PETITION No. 963 OF 1916.

July 14, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice Chevis.

JASWANT SINGH—ACCUSED—PETITIONER

versus

EMPEROR THROUGH BASANTA—COMPLAINANT—RESPONDENT

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 181 (4)—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 498—Enticing away married woman—Detention for purpose of illicit intercourse—Detention, offence of, where to be enquired into—Jurisdiction.

A complaint under section 498 of the Penal Code for detaining a woman for the purpose of illicit intercourse can be enquired into only in the District where such detention occurs, as section 181 (4) of the Code of Criminal Procedure refers only to cases of kidnapping and abduction, offences dealt with in sections 359 to 369 of the Penal Code, but does not apply to offences under Chapter XX of the Code. [p. 966, col. 2.]

Petition, under section 437, Criminal Procedure Code, for revision of the order of the Sessions Judge, Hoshiarpur, dated the 15th May 1916, affirming that of the District Magistrate, Hoshiarpur, dated the 13th January 1916, reversing that of the Magistrate, 2nd Class, Garhshankar, dated the 4th December, 1915, discharging the accused, and ordering further enquiry.

Mr. Nand Lal, for the Petitioner.

Bakshi Gokul Chand, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The complainant lodged a case against the petitioner under section 498, Indian Penal Code, charging him with having enticed away his wife from his home which is in the Hoshiarpur District. The Magistrate discharged the accused. The District Magistrate has ordered further enquiry, holding that there is a prima facie case against the accused for the detention of the woman in the Jullundur District for the purpose of illicit intercourse. The learned District Magistrate quotes section 181 (4), Criminal Procedure Code, as authority for holding that the Hoshiarpur Courts have jurisdiction in such cases. But section 181 (4) refers only to cases of kidnapping and abduction, offences dealt with in sections 359 to 369 of the Indian Penal Code, and not at all to offences under Chapter XX of the Code.

The District Magistrate has sent the case back merely for further enquiry into an offence of detention in the Jullundur

District, an offence which can be enquired into only in that District.

I set aside the District Magistrate's order and restore that of the Magistrate. This will, of course, not prevent the complainant from bringing a fresh complaint in the Jullundur District, if so advised.

Revision accepted.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 3 OF 1918.

February 27, 1918.

Present:—Sir Henry Richards, KT., Chief Justice.

MAHABIR AND OTHERS—APPLICANTS

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 107—Conviction for rioting—District Magistrate, power of, in appeal, to order security for good behaviour—Surety, whether particular person can be ordered to be—Jurisdiction.

A District Magistrate has no jurisdiction, in an appeal from a conviction under section 147 of the Penal Code, to order an accused person to give security to be of good behaviour although he may order security to keep the peace, nor is his order directing a particular individual to be one of the sureties a valid order.

Criminal revision from an order of the District Magistrate, Basti.

Mr. Satya Chandra Mukerji, for the Applicants.

Mr. R. Malcomson (Assistant Government Advocate), for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—The applicants were charged under section 147 of riot and convicted by a Magistrate of the Second Class on the 31st of October 1917. The accused appealed and on the matter coming up before the District Magistrate of Basti, on the 5th of November 1917, he confirmed the order of the Court below but in addition to that he ordered the accused to furnish security to be of good behaviour and that one of the sureties must be a certain lady. Apparently the District Magistrate thought that the riot had been either instigated by or had been made on behalf of the lady and that, therefore, she would be a very good person to give security. The order directed that the security should be for good behaviour. This was clearly a mistake, because the District Magistrate would have no jurisdiction in appeal from conviction to order an accused person to give security to be of good behaviour, although he might no doubt order security to "keep the peace." It is admitted on both sides that this error must be corrected.

A further objection is taken to the order that the District Magistrate had no jurisdiction to direct that one of the sureties must be a particular individual. The Assistant Government Advocate admits that he cannot support this order, and I am also of opinion that the order directing that a particular person must be one of the sureties is not a valid order. I accordingly vary the order of the learned District Magistrate in this way. The applicants will themselves execute bonds in the sums of Rs. 200 with two sureties in like sums to keep the peace for one year in each man's case, from the date of the expiration of one month's rigorous imprisonment imposed for the offence. In default I direct simple imprisonment for the remainder of the year.

Order modified.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 354 OF 1917.

August 16, 1917.

Present:—Mr. Justice Leslie Jones.

GURDIT SINGH alias GURANDITTA—CONVICT—APPELLANT

versus

EMPEROR—PROSECUTOR—RESPONDENT.

Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss. 27, 114, ill. (b)—Statement of accused leading to discovery, nature of, admissibility of—Approver, statement of—Confession of co-accused, whether corroboration—Material corroboration, what amounts to.

It is quite legitimate for a Magistrate to record evidence under section 27 of the Evidence Act that an accused person said "I will point out certain property," if that statement of the accused leads to a discovery, but it is not legitimate to record as evidence that an accused person said, "I will point out certain property which I obtained as my share of the booty in the dacoity." [p. 964, col. 2.]

The confession of a co-accused does not rank as corroboration of the statement of the approver. [p. 968, col. 2.]

Where reasonable proof exists that a sum of money deposited by the accused with a banker was borrowed by him from a certain person for the purpose of redeeming a mortgage which existed on his land, the story as told, unless proved to be untrue, cannot be said to be material corroboration of the statement of an approver that the accused had got the money as his share of the booty in a dacoity. [p. 968, col. 2.]

Appeal from the order of the Special Magistrate, 1st Class, with section 30 powers in the Punjab at Lahore, dated the 3rd of March 1917, convicting the appellant.

Mr. Lal Chand Mehra, for the Appellant.

Lala Narinjan Das, R. B., for the Government Advocate, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—This judgment deals with Criminal Appeals Nos. 354, 513, 514, 600, 660, 613 and 616 of 1917. The appellants in this case are seven men who have been convicted of participation in a serious dacoity which occurred at Rangar Nangal in the Gurdaspur District on the night of the 30th of January 1916, when the house of a Brahman shop-keeper, named Devi Ditta, was raided. Devi Ditta was himself absent, but there were numerous other occupants of the house and there were a number of men playing a game called chihri in the verandah of the shop when the dacoits arrived. After threatening and also maltreating some of the inmates the dacoits went off with the booty, including jewelry and cash valued by Devi Ditta at Rs. 18,000. No clue to the dacoits was obtained until the following March, when Harnam Singh and others were arrested at Kathala Station in the Gujrat District for an offence under the Arms Act.

The whole story of this dacoity has been told at great length by the two approvers Harnam Singh and Surat Singh, and the greater part of it is no doubt minutely accurate. The only question arising in these appeals is whether there is sufficient material corroboration of the statements of the approvers against each of the appellants.

I must remark that in this case, as in many others of his which I have seen, the Magistrate, who evidently does not understand section 27 of the Evidence Act, has systematically used the provisions of that section to cover inadmissible statements to the Police. It is quite legitimate to record evidence that an accused person said "I will point out certain property", if that statement of the accused leads to a discovery; but it is not legitimate to record as evidence that an accused person said "I will point out certain property which I obtained as my share of the booty in the dacoity."

I now proceed to deal with the case of each appellant.

* * * * * * *

I maintain the convictions and sentences of Fauja Singh, Ram Singh, Sundar Singh, Mahtab, Mastan Singh and Partap Singh, except that in order to prevent cumulation, the order of solitary confinement in the case of Mastan Singh is set aside.

The case against Gurdit Singh, the remaining appellant, stands in a different category. Beyond the statements of the approvers and the confession of his co-accused Partap Singh, which does not rank as corroboration of the statements of the approvers, there is nothing against him except that on the 12th of February 1916 he had deposited the sum of Rs. 300 with a banker named Dhanpat. Evidence was tendered by him to show that this money had been borrowed by him from one Jawahir Singh, and that it was lodged with Dhanpat so as to be ready for an intended redemption. The Magistrate has regarded this evidence for the defence as a pure fabrication; and he may in one sense be right, but there is no doubt that the money was lodged through Jawahir Singh with Dhanpat. Jawahir Singh could afford to lend the money, and the mortgage-debt existed. The story as told cannot be proved to be untrue, and unless it is so proved it cannot be said that there is any material corroboration of the statement of the approver. There is, of course, ground for grave suspicion against Gurdit Singh but the case against him has not been adequately proved. He is accordingly acquitted and will be set at liberty.

Appeal accepted.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 1028 OF 1917.

February 27, 1918.

Present:—Sir Henry Richards, KT., Chief Justice.

GOBARDHAN—APPLICANT

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 110—Security for good behaviour, order for—Approved sureties—Sureties residing in another Police district and helping accused in defence, whether ground for refusing to accept.

Where an order to furnish security under section 110, Criminal Procedure Code, simply requires the sureties to be 'approved sureties', the mere fact that the sureties do not reside in the same Police district and have evidenced their friendship by helping the accused in his defence will not suffice in law to justify a refusal to accept the sureties.

Criminal revision from an order of the Officiating District Magistrate, Etawah.

Messrs. Satya Chandra Mukerjee and Brij Mohan Vyas, for the Applicant.

Mr. R. Malcomson (Assistant Government Advocate), for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—In this matter it appears that Gobardhan was ordered to furnish security under section 110. The order upon him was that he should give security himself in the sum of Rs. 200 and two approved sureties of Rs. 100 each. If he complied with the terms of this order he was entitled to be released. Gobardhan has presumably given his own bond for Rs. 200. He has produced two sureties who are ready to give security to the extent of Rs. 100 each. The Magistrate has declined to accept the sureties on two grounds, first, that the sureties reside in another Police station. Apparently they are not very far removed from the residence of the accused but they are not in the same Police district. The second ground is that they assisted Gobardhan in his defence. It seems to me that the second ground is no legitimate ground for refusing to accept the sureties. Presumably it will always be some friends of a person against whom proceedings have been taken under section 110, who will give security for him. It is very unlikely that any complete outsider, who has no interest whatever in the person charged, will undertake the responsibility. As I said before, it must always be a friend who will undertake the responsibility. The mere fact that these sureties evidenced their friendship by helping in the defence seems to me to be no reason at all for refusing to accept them as sureties. The first ground is, as already stated, they reside in another Police district. The order simply required that the sureties should be "approved sureties." This I think to mean that they should be themselves persons of good character and solvent. I think, therefore, that both the grounds upon which the learned Magistrate refused to accept the sureties are not sufficient in law to justify his doing so. The matter will now go back to the Magistrate, who will deal with the matter having regard to what I have said above.

Case sent back.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 924 OF 1917.

November 15, 1917.

Present:—Mr. Justice Leslie Jones.

AHMAD—PETITIONER

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 497, 498—Enticing away married woman—Intention—Adultery, proof of—Benefit of doubt.

For a conviction under section 498 of the Penal Code there must be an intention that the woman should leave her husband's control without any definite intention that she should return to him or an intention that she should remain away indefinitely. [p. 970, col. 1.]

Where it was alleged that the accused committed adultery with a woman while shut up in a shop with her angry husband outside, their entry in the shop together having been discovered at once and the door having been chained on them immediately:

Held, that it did not appear likely that the accused would commit adultery under such circumstances. [p. 970, col. 1.]

Petition, under section 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code, for revision of the order of the Sessions Judge, Mianwali, dated the 24th May 1917, modifying that of the Magistrate, 1st Class, Mianwali, dated the 25th April 1917, convicting the petitioner.

Mr. Mokand Lal Puri, for the Petitioner.

GARIB LALL v. EMPEROR.

ORDER.—(August 15, 1917.)—There does not appear to be any evidence on which a conviction under section 498, Indian Penal Code, could be supported. Nor does it appear likely that the petitioner would commit adultery with Musammat Bakhtawar while shut up in the shop with her angry husband outside; apparently their entry into the shop together was discovered at once and the door chained on them immediately. The Magistrate appears to have relied on the statement of Bakhtawar, but she has told two different stories, and her evidence is not of adultery but of rape.

Admitted—Single Bench—Notice. The petitioner may be released on his own bond for Rs. 50.

JUDGMENT.—My order dated 15th August 1917 must be read as part of this order. I need only add as regards the conviction under section 498, Indian Penal Code, that I think that for the purposes of a conviction under that section there must be an intention that the woman should leave her husband's control without any definite intention that she should return to him, or an intention that she should remain away indefinitely—vide Queen Empress v. Gaman (1). See also Paira Ram v. Emperor (2) and Ghulam Mahomed v. Crown (3). If in those cases a visit with a view to adultery could be brought under section 498, Indian Penal Code, there would presumably have been convictions under that section. I allow the petition, set aside th conviction and sentence and release the petitioner from his bail.

Petition allowed.

(1) 9 P. R. 1899 Cr.
(2) 25 P. R. 1902 Cr.; 7 P. L. R. 1903.
(3) 13 P. R. 1879 Cr.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 223 OF 1917.

December 13, 1917.

Present:—Mr. Justice Roe and Justice Sir Ali Imam, KT.

GARIB LALL—APPELLANT.

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 408—Appeal from sentence passed by Assistant Sessions Judge—Forum of appeal—Trial Judge officiating as Sessions Judge—Procedure.

An appeal from a conviction and sentence by an Assistant Sessions Judge, where the sentence is less than four years' rigorous imprisonment, lies to the Sessions Court, and the fact that by the time the appeal is ready the Assistant Sessions Judge who tried the case has been promoted to officiate as Sessions Judge does not give the High Court any jurisdiction to try the appeal. In such a case it is open to the Officiating Sessions Judge, on receipt of the appeal, to either send the case to the High Court for disposal or to admit the appeal and postpone it till the return of the Sessions Judge.

Criminal appeal from an order of the Assistant Sessions Judge, Muzaffarpur, dated the 13th August 1917.

Mr. Lal Mohan Ganguly, for the Appellant.

Mr. Mohammad Fakhruddin (Government Pleader), for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—In this case the appeal is from a conviction and sentence by the Assistant Sessions Judge of Muzaffarpur, Mr. Raj Kishore. The sentence is less than four years' rigorous imprisonment. The appeal, therefore, lay to the Sessions Court at Muzaffarpur. It is explained that the appellant felt that it was impossible to appeal to the Court at Muzaffarpur, for the reason that by the time his memorandum of appeal was ready Mr. Raj Kishore had been promoted to the position of Officiating Sessions Judge. We are of opinion that this fact does not give us any jurisdiction to try the appeal. It would have been open to Mr. Raj Kishore, on receipt of the appeal, to either send the case to the High Court for disposal or to have admitted the appeal and postponed it till the return of Mr. Sheepshanks for hearing. We certainly have no jurisdiction to hear the case and must, therefore, send it to the Sessions Judge for disposal. Let the record be sent down at once.

Case sent back.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION CASE No. 170 OF 1917.

CRIMINAL REVISION PETITION No. 139 OF 1917.

August 17, 1917.

Present:—Mr. Justice Spencer.

GURVANNA GOWD AND OTHERS —ACCUSED—PETITIONERS

versus

GOVINDAPPA—COUNTER-PETITIONER —RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 145, 146—Possession, enquiry into—Attachment of property under s. 146—Cancellation of order before adjudication by Civil Court, legality of.

An order for attachment passed under section 146 (1), Criminal Procedure Code, must be kept in force till the adjudication of the rights of the parties by a competent Civil Court.

A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to cancel the attachment as a result of further enquiry and adjudication by him as to the right to possession.

Rajah of Venkatagiri v. Isakapalli Subbiah, 26 M. 410 at p. 415, followed.

Petition, under section 107 of the Government of India Act, praying the High Court to revise the order of the Court of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Bellary, in Miscellaneous Civil Suit No. 9 of 1915.

ORDER.—As stated in paragraph 6 of the Deputy Magistrate's Order of 8th September 1915, the question for consideration in these proceedings under Chapter XII was who was in possession of the Takrar land on July 1st, 1915.

No doubt the Divisional Officer's Court, which determined that Patta should be registered in the name of Venkamma, was a competent Court to decide the question of registry, and it appears from the records that it was this question of registry which was the principal cause of the dispute as to possession. Nevertheless, the Divisional Officer's Court was not a competent Court for deciding a question as to the person entitled to possession of the land in dispute. This question can only be finally decided in the Civil Court and the Magistrate having passed the order of attachment, not as an interim order under section 145 (4), proviso 2 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, but as an order under section 146 (1) made at the conclusion of his enquiry after hearing the parties and taking evidence, was bound to continue the attachment until a competent Civil Court adjudicated on the rights of the parties. [Vide Rajah of Venkatagiri v. Isakapalli Subbiah (1)].

I must set aside his order of February 26th, 1917, as made without jurisdiction and restore the order of attachment and the appointment of a Receiver made on September 8th, 1915.

Each party will bear his or their own costs in this Court.

Order set aside.

M. C. P.

(1) 26 M. 410 at p. 415.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

CRIMINAL PETITION No. 1389 OF 1916.

January 3, 1918.

Present:—Sir Henry Rattigan, KT., Chief Judge.

BELA SINGH—CONVICT—PETITIONER

versus

EMPEROR—PROSECUTOR—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 90, 514—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 498—Warrant issued for woman enticed away—Reasons not recorded, effect of—Bond executed by surety, whether can be forfeited on woman's failure to appear.

In a case under section 498 of the Penal Code the trying Magistrate is competent to issue a warrant instead of issuing a summons for the attendance of the woman alleged to have been enticed away, but in order to comply with the provisions of section 90 of the Criminal Procedure Code it is necessary to record reasons for issuing the warrant in the first instance and if the Magistrate fails to do so, the warrant must be regarded as wholly illegal and the bond given by the surety for the woman's attendance has no legal force and cannot be forfeited if the woman does not appear. [p. 972, col. 1.]

Criminal petition for revision, under section 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code, of the order of the District Magistrate, Lyallpur, dated the 19th July 1917, confirming that of the Magistrate, 2nd Class, Lyallpur, dated the 12th July 1917, directing the forfeiture of security worth Rs. 100.

Mr. L. C. Mehra, for the Petitioner.

The Government Advocate, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—In this case it was competent to the Magistrate who tried the case to issue a warrant for the attendance of the woman in question instead of issuing a summons, but in order to comply with the provisions of section 90, Criminal Procedure Code, it was necessary for him to record his reasons in writing for issuing the warrant in the first instance. No such reasons were recorded in the present case and upon the authority of Sukheswar Phukan v. Emperor (1) the warrant must be regarded as wholly illegal. In these circumstances Kala Singh v. King-Emperor (2) is authority for holding that the bond given by Bela Singh who stood surety for the woman's attendance has no legal force. I accordingly accept this application and set aside the order of the Magistrate, dated the 12th July 1917, and of the District Magistrate dated the 19th July 1917. The amount declared to be forfeited shall, if realised, be refunded.

Revision allowed.

(1) 11 Ind. Cas. 593; 38 C. 789; 12 Cr. L. J. 409; 15 C. W. N. 1001.
(2) 22 P. W. R. 1907 Cr.; 6 Cr. L. J. 275.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 7-B OF 1918.
January 25, 1918.
Present:—Mr. Kotwal, Offg. A. J. C.

SHESHARAO NAGORAO PATIL—APPLICANT
versus
EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 145 (1)—Preliminary order, condition precedent of—Jurisdiction.

The condition precedent authorizing a Magistrate to issue an order under section 145 (1), Criminal Procedure Code, is that he should be satisfied that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists.

The fact that the complaint shows that the complainant was out of possession of the property in dispute for over two months does not vitiate the proceedings under section 145, Criminal Procedure Code.

Petition for revision against an order passed under section 145, Criminal Procedure Code, by the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Darwah, in Miscellaneous Criminal Case No. 20 of 1917, decided on 31st October 1917.

Mr. C. B. Parakh, for the Applicant.

ORDER.—It is urged that the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to start the proceedings, when the complaint made to him on the face of it showed that the complainant was out of possession for over two months and in consequence he could not get an order in his favour. This contention is based upon a misapprehension of the conditions, the existence of which authorises a Magistrate to issue an order under section 145 (1), Criminal Procedure Code.

The Magistrate can issue the order if he is satisfied that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists. He was so satisfied in this case from the Police report, dated 6th April 1917. He could therefore, make the order and, therefore, decide the question of possession in favour of either party to the proceeding.

It is next urged that there is no finding that there is a danger of a breach of the peace, but such finding is involved in the order under section 145 (1) and the applicant's Pleader admits that no plea was raised under section 145 (5).

The proceedings do not appear to be open to objection on the score of want of jurisdiction. This application is dismissed.

Application dismissed.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 1047 OF 1917.
June 29, 1917.
Present:—Mr. Justice Chevis.

EMPEROR—PROSECUTOR
versus
SAUDAGAR RAM—ACCUSED.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 250—Compensation, order for, when to be made.

A Magistrate in acquitting the accused called upon the complainant to show cause why an order for compensation should not be made against him On the same day and on the next page he recorded the statement of the complainant and then made an order against him to pay compensation:

In re MANTRIPRAGADA MATTAPALLI NARASIMHA RAO.

Held, that this was sufficient compliance with the provisions of section 250 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

Case reported by the Sessions Judge, Lyallpur, with his No. 656 of 22nd June 1917.

ORDER.—The learned Sessions Judge is not correct in saying that the Magistrate acquitted and then called on complainant to shew cause. The Magistrate writes " in acquitting the accused I call on Saudagar to show cause, etc. "

On the same day and on the next page comes Saudagar's statement, and then the order to pay compensation. This I regard as sufficient compliance with section 250, Criminal Procedure Code, see Emperor v. Punamchand Hirachand (1). The present case is on all fours with the Bombay case, and I consider Narpat Rai v. King-Emperor (2) distinguishable.

I decline to interfere.

Revision rejected.

(1) 8 Bom. L. R. 847; 4 Cr. L. J. 423.
(2) 57 P. R. 1905 Cr.; 181 P. L. R. 1905; 3 Cr. L. J. 123.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION CASE No. 531 OF 1917.
(CRIMINAL REVISION PETITION No. 416 OF 1917.)
December 3, 1917.

Present:—Mr. Justice Spencer.

In re MANTRIPRAGADA MATTAPALLI NARASIMHA RAO—ACCUSED—PETITIONER.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 44, 323, 341, 385—Threat to report suspected case of smuggling liquor, whether extortion—'Injury,' meaning of - Joint trial of charges of wrongful restraint, attempt at extortion and causing hurt in attempt, legality of—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 233.

Accused, who was the proprietor of a certain estate, stopped complainant, a cooly, whom he suspected of smuggling Arrack from the Nizam's Dominions into British Territory, on the way, took and kept his liquor jar for the night and threatened to report the matter to the Police unless he paid something. He was charged with wrongful restraint, threat of injury to commit extortion and causing simple hurt in the course of the attempted extortion and was sentenced to a single fine of Rs. 100 for the three offences:

Held, (1) that the conviction under section 385 was bad, as complainant was not put in fear of any injury within the meaning of section 44 of the Penal Code and the accused only threatened to do what he was bound by law to do; [p. 973, col. 2.]

(2) that the conviction under section 341 was bad, as there was no physical restraint of complainant's person; [p. 973, col. 2.]

(3) that the charge of voluntarily causing hurt, which was non-cognisable and for which there was no complaint to a Magistrate, should not have been tried on the Police charge sheet with the other charges and that this irregularity prejudiced the accused, as the evidence of hurt was not considered except as combined with the evidence on the other Police charges. [p. 974, col 1]

For the purpose of section 385, Indian Penal Code, it is necessary that the accused should have put some person in fear of injury in order to extort some property from him. 'Injury' includes only such harm as may be caused illegally to a person's mind, body, reputation or property. [p. 973, col. 2.]

Petition, under sections 435 and 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, praying the High Court to revise the judgment of the Court of the Joint Magistrate, Bezwada, in Criminal Appeal No. 92 of 1916, preferred against the judgment of the Court of the Second Class Magistrate, Bezwada, in Calendar Case No. 64 of 1916.

Mr. B. Narasimha Rao, for the Petitioner.

Mr. A. Narasimham Ayyar, for the Public Prosecutor.

ORDER.—The offences of which the accused has been found guilty are wrongful restraint, hurt, and putting a person in fear of injury in order to commit extortion. A single sentence of fine has been imposed for the three offences combined. The convictions for the first and the last of these offences, viz., those under sections 341 and 385, Indian Penal Code, will not stand because it has not been found that any physical restraint was put on the person of P. W. No. 1. If he remained for the night in Lingagiri because the accused, a proprietor of that place, told him to stay, there was no offence within section 341. Again the threat that the accused is alleged to have used towards the cooly, who was discovered transporting Arrack from the Nizam's Dominions into British Territory, was to the effect that he would report him to British Police. For the purpose of section 385 it is necessary that the accused should have put some person in fear of injury in order to extort some property from him. The definition of 'injury' in section 44, Indian Penal Code, shows that it embraces only such harm to body, mind, reputation or property as may be caused illegally. There would have been nothing illegal in a landed proprietor asking the Police to investigate a suspected case of smuggling liquor. It would, on the contrary, be his duty to give information. The offence of hurt is a non-cognisable one. It consisted here in the accused giving the cooly a stroke on his hands with his walking stick when he persisted in asking permission to be allowed to go on his way. There was apparently no complaint by the P. W. No. 1 to the Magistrate, and, in all probability, the charge of hurt would never have come into Court if the Police had not taken up the other charges. I think the accused has been prejudiced by being tried for this offence along with the other cognisable offences, as the evidence has not been considered separately.

JALAL v. EMPEROR.

I set aside the conviction and direct the fine to be refunded.

Conviction quashed.

M. C. P.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 1017 OF 1917.

November 10, 1917.

Present:—Mr. Justice Shadi Lal.

JALAL AND OTHERS—CONVICTS—PETITIONERS

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 107, 145, distinction between—Security to keep public peace—Possession of immoveable property, dispute as to—Procedure.

Proceedings under section 107 of the Criminal Procedure Code are only intended for the security of the public peace, not for the purpose of enabling one of the two contending parties to help themselves in recovering possession of immoveable property after having their adversaries' hands tied down by an order under this section. Where the dispute relates to the possession of immoveable property the proper course is to institute proceedings under section 145, and not under section 107.

Bejoy Singha Neogi v. Empress, 3 C. W. N. 463, followed.

Petition, under section 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code, for revision of the order of the District Magistrate, Shahpur, dated the 3rd March 1917, affirming that of the Magistrate, 1st Class, Shahpur, dated the 9th January 1917, directing the petitioners to furnish security under section 107, Criminal Procedure Code.

BALI SAHU v. EMPEROR.

Mr. Mokand Lal Puri, for the Petitioners.

Mr. Ghulam Haider, Moharrir, Court of Wards, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—Upon an examination of the evidence upon the record, I am of opinion that there is a bona fide dispute in this case with respect to the petitioner's right of grazing and that the order under section 107, Criminal Procedure Code, is not justified—the report submitted by the Moharrir of the Court of Wards on the 19th October 1916 shows that the convicts had some sort of possession of the land in dispute, and there is also oral evidence to the effect that they have been exercising the right of grazing.

Proceedings under section 107 are only intended for the security of the public peace, not for the purpose of enabling one of the two contending parties to help themselves in recovering possession of immoveable property after having their adversaries' hands tied down by an order under this section. If it is thought necessary that an order should be made relating to the possession of immoveable property which is the subject-matter of the dispute between the parties, the proper course is to institute proceedings under section 145; then the parties will have notice of the case they have to meet, and each party could put forward evidence to prove his possession—vide Bejoy Singha Neogi v. Empress (1).

I accordingly accept the application for revision, and set aside the order requiring the petitioners to furnish security under section 107, Criminal Procedure Code.

Appeal allowed.

(1) 3 C. W. N. 463.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 402 OF 1917.

December 18, 1917.

Present:—Mr. Justice Roe and Justice Sir Ali Imam, KT.

BALI SAHU—APPLICANT

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 235—General Clauses Act (X of 1897), s. 26—Opium Act (I of 1878), s. 9 (c), (f)—Bihar and Orissa Excise Act (II B. & O. of 1915), s. 47 (a)—Illegal possession and sale of opium—Joint trial under two Acts, validity of—Separate sentences, validity of.

EMPEROR v. GHULAM HUSAIN.

Separate sentences were passed on the accused under section 47 (a) of the Bihar and Orissa Excise Act and sections 9 (c) and 9 (f) of the Opium Act in the same trial in respect of two sales of opium to the same person and for possession of the residue of the opium left after the sales:

Held, (1) that the whole series of acts for which the accused was punished made one transaction within the meaning of section 235 of the Code of Criminal Procedure and the joint trial of the offences, therefore, was not illegal;

(2) that the conviction for possession was not in respect of the same article as that sold but for the residue, and that, therefore, separate sentences for the possession and the sale did not contravene the provisions of section 26 of the General Clauses Act.

Mr. G. C. Pal, for the Applicant.

The Assistant Government Advocate, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—In this case the applicant has been sentenced under section 47 (a) of the Bihar and Orissa Act II of 1915 to pay a fine of Rs. 50, and under section (9) (c) of Act I of 1878 to undergo rigorous imprisonment for 3 months and to pay a fine of Rs. 50 and under section 9 (b) of Act I of 1878 to pay a fine of Rs. 50. The grounds on which we are asked to interfere are, firstly, that offences under the Bihar and Orissa Act of 1915 and the Opium Act should not have been tried together, secondly, that the possession and the sale constitute the same offence, and that, therefore, the separate sentences are against section 26 of the General Clauses Act, and thirdly, that the applicant was prejudiced by the admission of documentary and oral inadmissible evidence in the Magistrate's Court.

Upon the first ground taken it seems that the circumstances of the case fall well within section 235 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The two sales for which the applicant has been punished were made to the same person and the possession for which he has been punished was the possession of the residue of the opium left after the sale. The whole series of acts clearly made one transaction. This consideration also deals with the second ground taken on behalf of the applicant. The conviction for possession has not been in respect of the same article as that sold, but for the residue. With regard to the third ground the learned Sessions Judge most carefully discarded all the irrelevant evidence before dealing with the facts of the case. One lot of irrelevant evidence discarded he describes as based upon a palpable fallacy and the other lot he describes as rubbish and valueless. Certainly the applicant was not prejudiced in the Appellate Court by the irrelevant evidence adduced in the Court of first instance. We are dealing with the judgment of the Sessions Court and are unable to say that the judgment of the Sessions Court is in any way improper. The sentences are not excessive. The application is rejected. The applicant will surrender to his bail and serve out the remainder of his sentence.

Application rejected.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 93 OF 1918.

March 1, 1918.

Present:—Justice Sir P. C. Banerji, KT., and Mr. Justice Tudball.

EMPEROR—APPELLANT

versus

GHULAM HUSAIN—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Arms Act (XI of 1878), s. 19 f)—Minor in possession of arms without license—Offence.

There is nothing in law which prevents a minor from being in actual fact in possession of arms without a license or which prevents him from being guilty of an offence under section 19, clause (f), of the Arms Act. [p. 976, col. 2.]

An Honorary Magistrate, who was exempt from the operation of the Arms Act and kept certain arms, died leaving behind him a pardanashin woman as a widow and a minor son. No license was obtained by the son for the arms, but they were retained in the house and were properly looked after:

Held, that the arms were in the custody and under the control of the minor and that he was guilty of an offence under section 19 (f) of the Arms Act. [p. 976, col. 2.]

Criminal appeal by the Local Government from an order of acquittal passed by the Additional Sessions Judge, Gorakhpur.

Mr. A. E. Ryves (Government Advocate), for the Crown.

Messrs. C. R. Alston and Abdul Raoof, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—This is a Government appeal against an order of acquittal passed by the Additional Sessions Judge of Gorakhpur in the case of the opposite party, Sheikh Ghulam Husain, who had been convicted by a Magistrate of the First Class for an offence under section 19, clause (f), of Act XI of 1878 (The Arms Act). The facts are simple. Sheikh Ghulam Husain is the son of one Khadim Husain, who died in 1901. The family is of good social position and owns considerable property. Khadim Husain was an Honorary Magistrate and as such was exempt from the operation of the Arms Act. The family lives in a three-storied pacca building at Ganeshpur. At the death of Khadim Husain, Ghulam Husain was a boy of tender years. His younger brother was born a few months after his father's death. Musammat Amina Bibi is the widow of Khadim Husain. Apparently after the death of Khadim Husain, the weapons which he had in his possession remained in the family residence and no steps were taken to obtain a license for their possession. Ghulam Husain has grown up and at the time that this case occurred was on the verge of majority, being between the ages of 17 and 18 years. On the 12th of September 1917, at 3 P. M. in the absence of Musammat Amina Bibi and of Ghulam Husain, the family house was searched and in it were found in the zenana quarters, locked up in almirahs, three guns, 8 swords, one dagger, one kukhri and three old pistols. At the same time in the house were also found some spears on one of which was engraved Ghulam Husain's name. The weapons were all in good condition and apparently had been kept properly cleaned. There was some evidence given in the case to the effect that Ghulam Husain had been seen out in the open accompanied by a servant carrying a gun some days previous to the search. The Magistrate who tried the case held that the accused was in charge of the guns, that they were under his control and that he was responsible for their possession without a license under the Act. He, therefore, convicted him and sentenced him to a fine of Rs. 1,000. On appeal the learned Additional Sessions Judge has held that the mother, Musammat Amina Bibi, being the manager of the family, is the person who in law must be deemed to have been in possession of these weapons; that the accused being a minor cannot be held to have been in possession and, therefore, ought not to have been convicted. He accordingly set aside the conviction and sentence and acquitted Ghulam Husain. It is from this acquittal that the Local Government has preferred this appeal.

It is true that Ghulam Husain was not of full age at the time that these weapons were recovered, but there is nothing in law which prevents a minor from being in actual fact in possession of arms without a license or which prevents him from being guilty of an offence under section 19, clause (f), of the Act. It is difficult for us to believe that a purdanashin lady like Musammat Amina Bibi would have taken any care or specially retained in her possession the weapons which were found in her house. It is clear that these weapons were retained and that they were cleaned and properly looked after. In the same room with these weapons was the spear belonging to Ghulam Husain himself on which his name was engraved and it is clear, therefore, that he took an interest in the weapons. There is, we think, good reason to believe that they were in his custody and under his control and that he has, as a matter of fact, committed the offence under section 19, clause (f), of the Act. Whether his mother has committed the same offence or not is not a question which we have to decide in this appeal, but we can see nothing in the present case to prevent it being held on the evidence that the weapons were under the control of Ghulam Husain and not of his mother. In the circumstances of the case we do not think that so heavy a fine as Rs. 1,000 was called for. Khadim Husain left behind him a purdanashin woman as a widow and a small boy. These weapons had probably been lying in the house for years owing more or less to the neglect of the District Magistrate in not having taken proper action on the death of Khadim Husain. The offence committed is one for which a more or less nominal punishment will suffice. We, therefore, allow the appeal, set aside the order of acquittal and restore the conviction of Ghulam Husain under section 19, clause (f), of the Arms Act and sentence him to pay a fine of Rs. 100 or in default to one month's simple imprisonment.

Appeal allowed.

BROJENDRA NATH MITRA v. ARMAN SHEIKH.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.
CIVIL RULE No. 878 OF 1917.
February 11, 1918.
Present:—Mr. Justice Teunon and
Mr. Justice Newbould.
BROJENDRA NATH MITRA—PETITIONER
versus
ARMAN SHEIKH—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII B. C. of 1885), s. 66—Payment of decree by under-raiyat of non-occupancy raiyat, whether can prevent ejectment.

Section 66 (2) of the Bengal Tenancy Act clearly contemplates that the payment of the amount decreed against a non-occupancy raiyat, in order to be a good payment, must be made by or on behalf of the judgment-debtor.

Where the under-raiyat of a non-occupancy raiyat, against whom a decree for arrears of rent was obtained by the landlord under section 66 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, paid the decretal amount expressly to protect his own interest and on the allegation that the judgment-debtor was in collusion with the decree-holder landlord:

Held, that the payment, not having been made on behalf of the judgment-debtor, was not a good payment under section 66 (2) of the Bengal Tenancy Act so as to prevent the execution of the decree for ejectment.

Rule against the order of the Munsif, 1st Court, Khulna, in Suit No. 1160/780 of 1917.

Babus Sarat Chandra Roy Chowdhury and Satya Charan Sinha, for the Petitioner.

Dr. Jadu Nath Kanjilal, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—In this case it appears that the petitioner before us brought a suit for rent against his tenant, a non-occupancy raiyat, and obtained a decree for a sum amounting to some Rs. 80 and odd with an order providing under the provisions of section 66 (2) of the Bengal Tenancy Act that on failure of payment of that amount within 15 days from the date of the decree, the decree for ejectment should be executed. Thereafter the opposite party, one Arman Sheikh, claiming to be an under-raiyat under the non-occupancy raiyat, the judgment-debtor, tendered the amount due in order to prevent the execution of the decree for the ejectment of the non-occupancy raiyat. Having found the opposite party Arman Sheikh to be an under-raiyat the Munsif accepted the deposit, proceeding apparently on the analogy afforded by sub section (3) of section 170 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. It is contended before us that the provisions of section 170 and subsequent sections of the Bengal Tenancy Act apply only in cases of sale and have no application in cases of decrees for ejectment under the provisions of section 66 (2). On behalf of the under-raiyat opposite party it is not contested that section 170 and the following sections have no direct application in the present case. But it is contended that under section 66 (2) it is not specifically provided that the payment must be made by the judgment-debtor. It is suggested that the payment may be made by any third party and that such payment must be accepted by the landlord as good payment preventing the execution of his decree for ejectment. In support of that contention we have been referred to the provisions of section 114 of the Transfer of Property Act. But these provisions have no direct application here, and we cannot but hold that section 66 (2) clearly contemplates that the payment made, to be a good payment, must be a payment by or on behalf of the judgment-debtor. Now in the present case the payment was not made on behalf of the judgment-debtor. On the contrary the deposit was offered by the opposite party Arman Sheikh expressly to protect his own interest and on the allegation that the judgment-debtor was in collusion with the landlord, the decree-holder.

That being so, we are of opinion that the Munsif should not have accepted the tender by the under-raiyat opposite party. In coming to that conclusion we are not to be understood as deciding any question which may hereafter arise as to the recognition by the landlord of the opposite party as his tenant, or any question that may arise under section 85 of the Bengal Tenancy Act as to the validity of the sub-lease against the landlord. Those questions may be raised in appropriate proceedings.

For these reasons we make this Rule absolute, set aside the order of the Munsif complained of and direct repayment to the opposite party of the amount which has been deposited or paid by him into Court. Under the circumstances we make no order as to cost in this Rule.

Rule made absolute.

DEOBA v. LAXMAN.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 558 OF 1916.

December 5, 1917.

Present:—Mr. Batten, A. J. C.

DEOBA—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

LAXMAN—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 47, O. XXI, r. 92—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 52—Execution—Sale—Property purchased by decree-holder—Re-transfer, oral, validity of—Possession, suit for, maintainability of—Estoppel, title by.

Defendant, a decree-holder, purchased certain immoveable property belonging to his judgment-debtor in execution of a money-decree. The sale was confirmed, but the defendant afterwards agreed to accept the decretal amount and to re-convey the property to the judgment-debtor. No document was, however, executed and the judgment-debtor sold the property to the plaintiff. The latter then sued for possession of the property:

Held, (1) that the defendant having on confirmation of the sale become absolute owner of the property under Order XXI, rule 92 of the Civil Procedure Code, a re-transfer of the property to the judgment-debtor could only be effected by a registered deed; [p. 978, col. 2.]

(2) that the plaintiff having purchased the property from the judgment-debtor during the pendency of the execution proceedings the purchase was void; [p. 978, col. 2.]

(3) that the plaintiff being the representative of the judgment-debtor, a separate suit for possession was barred by section 47 of the Civil Procedure Code; [p. 979, col. 1.]

(4) that the Court in which the suit was brought not being the Court which passed the decree or in which the decree was executed, the suit could not be treated as an application under section 47 of the Code. [p. 979, col. 1.]

A decree-holder, who is an auction-purchaser, remains a party to the suit for the purposes of section 47 of the Code of Civil Procedure. [p. 978, col. 2.]

There is no such thing in law as title by estoppel. [p. 979, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decree of the Appellate Court of the District Judge, Nagpur.

Mr. K. K. Gandhe, for the Appellant.

Messrs. N. D. Udhoji and M. R. Indurkar, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The facts of the present case are that the decree-holder was allowed to bid at an auction held on a simple money-decree and purchased the 1/3rd share in the land of his judgment debtor Gosavi. The sale was confirmed and, therefore, under rule 92 of Order XXI, the decree-holder, the present defendant's father, became the absolute owner of the 1/3rd share. After this had happened, he apparently accepted the decretal amount from the judgment-debtor and promised to give back the land to him, but no document of transfer was effected, though a legal transfer for the consideration of the decretal debt required a registered deed. After the decree-holder's death his son, the present defendant, applied for possession of the property purchased. The plaintiff has brought this suit asking for a declaration that the defendant has no right in the property. The plaintiff claims to be a purchaser from the judgment-debtor after the decree-holder had told the judgment-debtor that he would give him back the property. The First Court dismissed the suit; the lower Appellate Court has decreed the plaintiff's claim, apparently on the ground that the defendant is estopped from denying the plaintiff's claim because the defendant's father informed the plaintiff before he purchased the property that he had given up his claims to it. As a matter of fact the execution proceedings had not closed at the date of the plaintiff's purchase. They are still before the Collector and the Collector has not yet put the auction-purchaser in possession. It is accepted law in this Court that a decree-holder who is an auction-purchaser remains a party to the suit. As between the defendant and judgment debtor, therefore, the matter now in dispute would be one to be decided under section 47, both being parties to the suit. Supposing the sale by the judgment-debtor to the plaintiff to be a valid one, the plaintiff cannot possibly be in a better position than the judgment-debtor and the present claim is one which would fall under section 47. But the plaintiff has no valid title at all on two grounds: the first is that the execution proceedings still being in the hands of the Collector when he purchased from the judgment-debtor his purchase is void, the second is that his vendor had no title to convey to him.

Under rule 92 of Order XXI the defendant's father became the absolute owner of the property on the confirmation of the sale. He could only transfer that property back to the judgment-debtor by a registered deed. There might have been an alternative course, namely, for the Collector to refuse in the circumstances to put the auction-purchaser decree-holder in possession. This course would not give the present plaintiff any title. Thus there was no legal transfer from the judgment-debtor to the plaintiff, nor had the judgment-debtor any subsisting title to convey to the plaintiff. I am unable to understand what the learned District Judge means when he says the relinquishment by the purchaser was perfectly valid and did not require registration. There is no such thing as title by estoppel. If there were such a thing, the whole of the Transfer of Property Act and Registration Act would become waste paper. If the plaintiff has any status at all in this case it is because he is the representative of the judgment-debtor. If he is such a representative a separate suit would not lie as action has to be taken under section 47. As a matter of fact, however, the plaintiff has no legal status on which he can either sue or make an application. I may note that the Court in which the suit was brought was not the Court which was executing the decree or by which the decree had been passed, so it could not treat the suit as an application under section 47. Combined with the claim as stated above is a second claim which is of a totally different nature, asking for a declaration that the defendant cannot get separate possession of the 1/3rd share but only joint possession. There is nothing on the record to show that defendant has applied for joint possession and the lower Courts have held that there is no cause of action for this part of the claim. This decision is undoubtedly correct. If at any time the defendant gets possession of anything more than he is entitled to, the plaintiff can take such action as he is advised.

For the above reasons I reverse the decree of the lower Appellate Court and dismiss the suit with costs in all Courts. I may add that the plaintiff has failed because he has not taken the pains to get his title perfected. This is lucky for the defendant, whose action cannot be said to be that of an honest man.

Appeal dismissed.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No 2893 OF 1916.

January 14, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Leslie Jones.

Musammat AZIM BIBI—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

Musammat UMTAN BIBI, MINOR, THROUGH SHAH ALI AHMAD AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS.—RESPONDENTS.

Custom—Succession—Ancestral property—Daughter, whether excludes another daughter's daughter—Onus—Sayads of Jullundur District.

Among Sayads of the Jullundur District a daughter's daughter succeeds to her mother's share of ancestral property in preference to another daughter.

The onus of proving that a sister excludes her sister's daughter in succession to ancestral property held by the latter's mother is on the person alleging it.

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Jullundur, dated the 31st July 1916, reversing that of the Munsif, 1st Class, Jullundur, dated the 3rd March 1916, decreeing the claim, but directing the parties to bear their own costs.

Mr. Oertel, for the Appellant.

Bakhshi Tek Chand, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—Akbar Shah, a Sayad of the Jullundur Tehsil, had three daughters, all of whom succeeded to his ancestral property. One of the daughters died and the other two Musammat Azim Bibi and Musammat Umar Bibi took her share. Then Musammat Umar Bibi died leaving two daughters, and Musammat Azim Bibi has claimed the whole estate. The onus was placed on her, and it is not contended even in the grounds of appeal that it was wrongly placed. Her suit was dismissed, but an appeal has been admitted to a hearing on a certificate by the District Judge.

Counsel for the appellant (who has not referred to any evidence) has not been able to cite any case in which it has been held that the daughter's daughter would be excluded by another daughter, and the authorities are against him. See paragraph 27 of Rattigan's Digest, 8th Edition, Remark 2, and Ilahi Bakhsh v. Musammat Budhi (1) which is very much in point. The appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 5 Ind. Cas. 247; 5 P. R. 1910; 10 P. W. R. 1910; 159 P. L. R. 1910.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.
SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 712 OF 1916.
March 13, 1918.
Present:—Mr. Justice Tudball and
Mr. Justice Raoof.
DEBI PRASAD AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS
versus
BADRI PARSHAD—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Limitation—Declaration, suit for—Right to take fallen wood, nature of—Invasion of right—Cause of action.

The right to take wood falling from certain trees is one which can only be exercised on occasion, that is, when any wood may fall or be cut from the trees. It does not occur every year or at stated times. Each invasion of the right gives rise to a fresh cause of action, and a suit for a declaration can be brought within six years of each invasion. [p. 982, col. 1.]

Second appeal from a decree of the Additional Judge, Farrukhabad, confirming that of the Officiating Subordinate Judge, Farrukhabad.

Mr. Kailas Nath Katju, for the Appellants.

Dr. Surendra Nath Sen, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is a plaintiff's second appeal. The facts of the case are as follows. In the year 1867 the father of the two plaintiffs, one Madan Gopal, was the mortgagee of certain Zamindari rights in the village of Runni Chursai. There was a public unmetalled road which ran from the village lands of this village up to the pucca road some short distance away. This public road belonged to the State and still belongs to it. In 1867 there were no trees standing on it, and Madan Gopal applied to the Collector of the District in writing pointing out this fact and that he wished to plant trees upon the public road for the benefit of the public, that he would tend and look after them, and that he would only claim the wood that might fall from the trees as his own. He would have no right to sell the trees. The Collector agreed to this and Madan Gopal planted these trees along the public road. It is quite clear, as the land vested in the State, the ownership of the trees did not vest in Madan Gopal, but as the Collector had agreed to the condition that he was to take the fallen wood, he no doubt continued to take it so long as he remained in the village, but in the years 1885 and 1887 there were certain transfers of the Zamindari shares in the village and Madan Gopal lost all interest in the Zamindari of Mauza Runni Chursai. In 1887 Badri Prasad became a co-sharer in the village by a sale-deed, under which his transferor purported to sell to him not only the Zamindari share but also the trees which had been planted upon the road as being his. In 1890 and again in 1892 Badri Prasad sold the fruit of these trees to various persons. In 1899 he had some civil litigation in regard to the fruit of the trees against a third party. In 1901 the Chairman of the District Board, under whose control the road is, sold the fruit to a third party. Badri Prasad objected and the Collector cancelled his sale. In 1900 the trees were lopped and the loppings were sold by the District Board. Badri Prasad claimed title to the loppings. Madan Gopal objected to his claim. The Collector finally decided that Badri Prasad was entitled and paid over to him the proceeds from the sale of the loppings minus expenses. In 1901 Badri Prasad had some civil litigation against certain other persons who were co-sharers in this village. They had taken the fruit of the trees and he sued them for damages. They denied his title in every way to the trees or to the fruit. The Court of first instance gave Badri Prasad a decree. On appeal the suit was dismissed by the District Judge, on the clear finding that Badri Prasad had not a shadow of a title whatsoever to the trees or to the fruit or to any of the produce thereof. Madan Gopal in that suit was called as a witness and testified to his claim and to the proceedings of 1867 on the basis of which the District Judge decided against Badri Prasad. In 1910 some more branches fell from these trees and there was a dispute between the plaintiffs, who are the sons of Madan Gopal, on the one side and Badri Prasad on the other. Again the proceeds of the sale of the wood were made over to Badri Prasad by the District Board. The present suit was brought within six years from this, that is, on the 18th of March 1915, in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Farrukhabad. The plaintiffs in their plaint claimed that they were the owners of and in possession of the trees; that they had been protecting and looking after the trees and had been taking all the produce thereof; that their father had been in continuous possession of the trees and that they were like him still in possession; that the defendant Badri Prasad had no right or title or interest whatsoever in these trees; that in the absence of the plaintiffs the defendant had realised the value of the wood from the District Board; that they had got to know of it in the month of November 1914, hence the present suit. They asked for a declaration that the trees were planted by their father; that they were still in possession of the trees and that they were the owners thereof. They further asked for an injunction restraining the defendant from interfering with the plaintiffs' right. The defendant in reply pleaded that the land on which the trees stood was Zamindari land and not the property of the State and that it belonged to the defendant; that the property had been sold and purchased by him in 1887 and that he was the owner and in possession of the trees; that the plaintiffs had no title whatsoever; that even if the defendant had no real title in the beginning, still he and his predecessors had been in proprietary and adverse possession and enjoyment of the trees since the year 1881, and, therefore, the suit was barred by limitation, the defendant having acquired title by prescription. The Court of first instance found that the trees were planted on the land of the road; that the land was the property of the State; that the trees had nothing to do with the Zamindari of the defendant; that the plaintiffs' claim, however, was barred by twelve years' adverse possession and that they were not entitled to the declaration, the defendant having held adverse possession since the year 1885. In the course of the suit on the 16th of June 1915, the plaintiff's Pleader, vide rubkar 65 A, clearly stated to the Court that his client only claimed a right to tend the trees and to take the fallen wood; that he claimed no greater right than this; that he had nothing to do with the fruit, etc. The plaintiffs appealed.

The Court below has treated the case as if it was clearly a suit in respect to the ownership of the trees and the possession thereof. It has said that the questions for determination in the appeal are:—Whether the plaintiffs have been in possession within twelve years of the suit or whether the defendant has been in adverse proprietary possession for more than twelve years; also whether the suit is barred by limitation. In the preamble of its judgment the lower Appellate Court has stated the facts as to the planting of the trees. In the body of its judgment it has stated as follows:—"No trees nor any rights in them were transferred to the defendant, nor are the trees standing on village lands." Under the contract with the Collector the plaintiff's father reserved to himself only the right to take the fallen wood of the trees but nothing else. No rights in the trees could be transferred by the planter of the trees. The plaintiffs have no Zamindari left in the village and they do not reside in Mauza Runni Chursai. They brought this suit for a declaration that they were the owners of these trees and had the right to take the fallen wood and also for an injunction that the defendant should not interfere with the exercise of their right. The Appellate Court held that the defendant had been in possession (presumably of the trees, though it does not say so clearly) for more than twelve years and has dismissed the appeal and the suit. The plaintiffs come here in second appeal. It is clearly admitted before us that the only right which the plaintiffs claim and can claim is the right to tend the trees and to take any wood that may fall; that they have no concern whatsoever with the fruit, and that they have no other right whatsoever in the trees. It is conceded before us on behalf of both parties that these trees, planted in the manner stated above and standing on public property belonging to the State, do not belong to either party; that in so far as they are in any one's possession, they are in possession of the Government. It is urged on behalf of the plaintiffs that there has been no adverse possession and cannot be any such adverse possession in a case like this, such as is contemplated by section 28 of the Limitation Act. On behalf of the respondent, however, it is urged that so far as any right could be exercised by the parties, it has been regularly exercised by the defendant and his predecessors-in-title for well over twelve years. We think it should be made quite clear that the only right which is in dispute before us is the right to take the fallen wood. Under the application of 1867 that was the only right which was given to Madan Gopal. The plaintiffs, therefore, are not and cannot be concerned with the fruit and if the District Board or the Collector has in the past allowed Badri Prasad to take the fruit, that is no concern of the plaintiffs, for they themselves have no right to it admittedly.

As to the fallen wood, there are only two years in which there has been any dispute whatsoever. One was in the year 1900 and the other was in the year 1910. In both these years there were disputes and in both years the Collector gave the value of the fallen wood to Badri Prasad. It is impossible, therefore, in our opinion to say that these two occurrences show that the defendant has been in adverse proprietary possession of the right which the plaintiffs now claim before us. There is no question of proprietary right in the trees. No doubt the parties litigated in respect thereto in the Courts below; but one fact is clear and that is that neither party is the owner of the trees and that the sole right in dispute before us is the right to take the fallen wood. We have considerable doubt whether section 28 of the Limitation Act has any application whatsoever to this case but even assuming that it has, it is impossible to hold that by reason of the two disputes in 1900 and 1910, the defendant has established continuous adverse possession of this right as against the plaintiffs. The right is one which clearly can only be exercised on occasion, that is, when any wood may fall or be cut from the trees. It does not occur every year or at stated times. It is urged that the plaintiffs' suit should have been brought at least within six years of the dispute of 1900, but we do not think the plaintiffs were bound to come into Court on the occasion of that invasion of their right. It was again invaded in the year 1910, and they have come into Court within six years of that invasion to establish their right to take the fallen wood. We, therefore, cannot agree with the Court below that the suit is barred by limitation in any way at all. It has, however, been urged before us that the plaintiffs have no right whatsoever even to the wood under the petition and order of the year 1867 and that this Court, therefore, should grant them no declaration whatsoever. This is a point which has not been raised before in the course of this litigation. It amounts to asserting that Madan Gopal's right under the transaction of 1867 was purely a personal right which could be transferred neither by inheritance nor by sale, but this has not been the position which the parties have taken up in the Courts below Badri Prasad's claim was actually based on a transfer in his own favour and the litigation having been fought out on the assumption that the right was a transferable and heritable one, we can see no necessity whatsoever to allow this point to be raised at this stage of the case. The District Board or the Secretary of State for India are neither of them parties to the present litigation and the decree therein will not affect them in any way. It will be time enough to decide this question when either of these two parties are involved in litigation with the plaintiffs or the defendant This appeal is decided on the assumption that the right of Madan Gopal to take the fallen wood is a transferable right which descends to his heirs. The result, therefore, of our findings is this, that the plaintiffs are entitled to a declaration that they are entitled to take the fallen wood of the trees in dispute which were planted by Madan Gopal on the basis of his application of 1867 and that the defendant has no right to interfere with the plaintiffs' taking of that wood. There is no necessity whatsoever for any injunction as the exercise of this right can only occur from time to time, and the person who will be in possession of the wood will be the Collector or the District Board until either party claims it. The rest of the plaintiffs' claim is dismissed. In view of the exaggerations on either side in the course of this litigation and the fact that both parties claimed originally much more than they were entitled to, we think that the proper order as to costs of this litigation will be that each party shall bear their own costs throughout. We direct accordingly.

Decree modified.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE NO. 64 OF 1915.

February 14, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Richardson and Mr. Justice Walmsley.

GENDU NASYA AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

SADI BANIA alias SADI SAHA AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Fraud, decree obtained by, suit to set aside—Evidence—Process suppressed, effect of.

In a suit for a declaration that a certain decree was obtained by fraud and is of no effect, a solid foundation is furnished, if the plaintiff establishes that the usual processes were suppressed by the defendant.

Appeal against the decree of the District Judge, Dinajpore, dated the 26th August 1914, reversing that of the Munsif, 1st Court at that place, dated the 20th August 1913.

Babus Mohini Mohan Chukraburtty and Phanindra K. Singh, for the Appellants.

Dr Dwarka Nath Mitter and Babu Bireswar Bagchi, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal is preferred by the plaintiff. He brought the suit for a declaration that a certain decree which had been obtained against him was fraudulent and of no effect. The plaintiff's case appears to be that summons in the suit in which the decree was made was not served on him and that the suit was based upon a forged document. In the Trial Court the learned Munsif found in his favour and made a decree accordingly. In the Court of Appeal below the learned District Judge has dismissed the suit.

As to the non-service of summons, if the plaintiff had been able to establish that the usual processes had been suppressed, no doubt, that would have furnished some solid foundation for the suit. The learned District Judge, however, has found that the summonses were duly served in the usual course. That part of the case, therefore, goes.

There remains the case as to forgery. In view of the authorities on the subject, the judgment of the District Judge may be in some respects open to criticism in that he has not come to an express finding, but we may refer to the judgment delivered by the Munsif in this case. The learned Munsif begins by saying "it is scarcely possible to prove frauds of this description by direct evidence" Then he goes on to say that the plaintiffs "practically" have not been able to adduce any direct evidence. Then he deals with the evidence which the plaintiff did adduce. In view of the kind of evidence and the kind of materials the Munsif had before him and on which he acted I am of opinion that it would serve no useful purpose to remit the case to the District Judge for any further finding. The appeal will accordingly be dismissed with costs.

WALMSLEY, J.—I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION NO. 142 OF 1917.

January 11, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Leslie Jones.

RAMJI SHAH AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—PETITIONERS

versus

GHULAM—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 11, O. II, r. 2—Previous suit for possession and interest—Suit dismissed as not maintainable—Second suit for interest, whether barred—Punjab Redemption of Mortgages Act (II of 1913).

Defendant mortgaged some land to the plaintiffs for a certain sum, a part of which was to carry interest. On an application to the Collector under Punjab Act II of 1913, the mortgagor was allowed to redeem the land on payment of the principal only. A suit was then brought by the mortgagees for possession of the mortgaged property and for a declaration of their charge together with interest, which was dismissed on the ground that no civil suit to disturb possession given under Act II of 1913 could lie and that the plaintiffs were not entitled to interest. In a subsequent suit brought by the plaintiffs for interest:

Held, that the finding of the Court in the former suit with regard to interest being superfluous, the present suit for interest was neither res judicata under section 11 nor barred under Order II, rule 2, of the Civil Procedure Code. [p. 984, col. 1.]

Petition, under section 44 of Act III of 1914, for revision of the order of the District Judge of Attock at Campbellpur, dated the 28th October 1916, reversing that of the Munsif, 1st Class, Pindigheb, dated the 9th February 1916, decreeing the claim.

Dr. Nand Lal, for the Petitioners.

Mr. L. M. Dutta, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The District Judge of Attock has dismissed this suit on the ground that it is barred by section 11, Civil Procedure Code. The defendant had mortgaged some land to the plaintiffs for Rs. 300. One of the conditions of the mortgage was that a sum of Rs. 160 out of the total mortgage-debt should carry interest. On application to the Collector under Punjab Act II of 1913 the mortgagor was allowed to redeem on payment of the principal only. The mortgagees then brought a regular suit for possession in the Court of a Subordinate Judge. They claimed at the same time that the amount of their charge, which they put at Rs. 1,305 including interest, should be declared. The Subordinate Judge dismissed the suit on the ground that once possession had been given under Act II of 1913, no civil suit to disturb that possession could lie. Whether that order was right or wrong, it was sufficient for the disposal of the suit and the subsequent finding of the Subordinate Judge that the plaintiffs were not entitled to interest was superfluous.

The plaintiffs then instituted a fresh suit for interest and obtained a decree for Rs. 165-13-0 in the Court of a Munsif. The defendants appealed to District Judge with the result already stated.

Obviously the finding of the Subordinate Judge on the question of interest is not res judicata nor is the present suit barred under Order II, rule 2, seeing that it was held in the former suit that possession was not a remedy to which the plaintiffs were entitled and it was not, therefore, one of the alternative remedies between which the plaintiffs could have chosen [see Prab Devi v. Harkishn Das (1)].

On the merits, as the Munsif found, the plaintiffs are clearly entitled to interest at the rate claimed; but they have claimed for a period of five years and six months, whereas they are precluded by limitation from claiming for more than four years and nine months. The sum to which they are entitled is Rs. 142-8-0.

I allow the revision and grant the plaintiffs a decree for that sum. They will get proportionate costs throughout.

Revision allowed

(1) 47 P. R. 1884.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 2262 OF 1915.

July 12, 1917.

Present:—Mr. Justice N. R. Chatterjea and Mr. Justice Richardson.

NIBARAN CHANDRA SEN—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

NAGENDRA CHANDRA SEN AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss. 68, 69, 70, 71—Attestation of document—Admission by executant, effect of—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 43—Mortgage—Mortgagor having no title but subsequently obtaining one—Attesting witness of mortgage deed purchasing property, effect of.

An admission of execution of a document by the executant thereof dispenses with the necessity of complying with the provisions of section 68 of the Evidence Act as against the party making the admission. Those provisions, however, must be complied with in order to prove the execution of a document as against the other parties to the suit who do not admit such execution. The document must be proved as against them in accordance with the provisions of sections 68, 69, 70 and 71 of the Act. [p. 985, col. 2.]

A mortgagor had lost title to a property at the time he mortgaged it along with other properties. But the title to that property had come back to the mortgagor when an attesting witness to the mortgage bond purchased the equity of redemption:

Held, that the provisions of section 43 of the Transfer of Property Act would come into operation and that therefore the mortgagee's lien was enforceable against that property in the hands of the purchaser of the equity of redemption, who being an attesting witness to the mortgage bond could not be held to be a bona fide transferee without notice. [p. 986, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decree of the Additional District Judge, Chittagong, dated the 30th June 1915, reversing that of the Munsif of South Ranjan, dated the 18th December 1913.

Babu D. L. Kastgir, for the Appellant.

Babu Khitish Chandra Sen, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit to enforce a mortgage bond executed by the defendant No. 1. The defendant No. 2, who is the purchaser of the equity of redemption in respect of one of the properties in Schedule II at a sale held in execution of a decree upon a subsequent mortgage, and the defendants Nos. 3 and 4, who were subsequently added as parties defendants to the suit upon objection raised by the defendant No. 2, contested the suit. The defendant No. 2 in a written statement admitted that the defendant No. 1 had executed the bond but pleaded that the bond was not a bona fide transaction and that no consideration passed.

The Court of first instance decreed the suit, but that decree was reversed and the suit dismissed by the lower Appellate Court. The plaintiff has appealed to this Court.

The first question for consideration is whether the lower Appellate Court was right in holding the bond to be invalid because one of the attesting witnesses was not examined as required by section 68 of the Evidence Act. The learned Judge says:—"Under section 59 of the Transfer of Property Act, the bond must be attested by two witnesses and under section 68 of the Evidence Act, one of the attesting witnesses must be examined to prove execution if there be an attesting witness alive and subject to the process of the Court and capable of giving evidence. In this case one of the attesting witnesses is a defendant, another is related to the defendants and the third is a very old man who is said to have lost his eyesight. Even if it be supposed that the first two would not speak the truth, the third ought to have been examined, as there is no evidence that he has lost his memory and no reason why he could not have spoken to the execution of the bond. Under the circumstances, it is quite clear that Exhibit I cannot be used in evidence so that the plaintiff's claim must fail on this ground."

Having regard to the admission of the defendants, however, we do not think that it was necessary to examine any attesting witnesses in this case.

Section 70 of the Evidence Act lays down that "an admission of a party to an attested document of its execution by himself shall be sufficient proof of its execution as against him, though it be a document required by law to be attested." The defendant No. 1, the mortgagor, admitted the execution of the bond and the defendant No. 2, who now represents the interests of the mortgagor also, clearly admitted in his written statement that the bond was executed by defendant No. 1, and it appears that he was himself an attesting witness to it. We think that the admission of the defendants in the suit dispenses with the necessity of calling attesting witnesses or giving any other evidence.

We may in this connection refer to the provisions of section 58 of the Evidence Act and Order XII, rule 1, Civil Procedure Code.

But although an admission of execution dispenses with the necessity of complying with the provisions of section 68 of the Evidence Act as against the party making the admission, the said provisions must be complied with in order to prove the execution of a document as against other parties to the suit who do not admit such execution. The document must be proved as against them in accordance with the provisions of sections 68, 69 and 71. This view was taken by Woodroffe and D. Chatterjee, JJ. (Newbould, J. differing), in the case of Satish Chandra Mitra v. Jogendra Nath Mahalanobis (1) and the learned Judges held that the effect of section 70 is that the proof by calling attesting witnesses is dispensed with when the party executant admits execution only as against himself. It may be pointed out that in that case Mr. Justice Woodroffe in referring to the case of Jogendra Nath Mukhopadhya v. Nitai Churn Bundopadhya (2) said that he was unable to agree with the decision if it meant that even when the executant admits execution, his admission or proof of execution or signing only does not dispense with the proof of attestation.

So far as the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 are concerned, therefore, it was not necessary to call any attesting witnesses and the document must be taken to be a valid document as against them.

There are, however, defendants Nos. 3 and 4 who were subsequently added as party defendants. It is contended on behalf of the appellant that they were not necessary parties to the suit. The defendant No. 2 alone purchased the mortgaged property at an auction sale and the defendants Nos. 3 and 4 have been made parties only in order to obviate the objection that they were also interested in the purchase made by him. Under the circumstances, the plaintiff prays that the defendants Nos. 3 and 4 may be dismissed from the suit and as they do not object, we order accordingly. Any question arising between the plaintiff and the defendants Nos. 3 and 4 is left undecided.

(1) 34 Ind. Cas. 862; 20 C. W. N. 1044; 24 C. L. 175; 44 C. 345.

(2) 7 C. W. N. 384.

The next question is whether the learned Judge was right in holding that the plaintiff could not claim any right to the property described in Schedule II, as the mortgagor had no right to the property at the date of the mortgage. There is no dispute that originally the mortgagor had title to the property. It appears that at the date of the mortgage the title had passed to other persons; but before the defendant No. 2 acquired the equity of redemption, the title had come back to the mortgagor. Under the circumstances, the provisions of section 43 of the Transfer of Property Act will come into operation. It is contended on behalf of the respondent that the equity cannot be enforced as against the defendant No. 2 who is a purchaser, but he himself was an attesting witness to the mortgage-bond. He is not, therefore, a bona fide transferee without notice. This contention must, therefore, be overruled.

The result is that the decree of the lower Appellate Court will be set aside and that of the Court of first instance restored. It will, however, be stated in the decree that the defendants Nos. 3 and 4 are dismissed from the action and that all questions arising between the plaintiff and the said defendants are left open.

The plaintiff is entitled to costs of this Court and of the lower Appellate Court from the defendant No. 2, and the defendants Nos. 3 and 4 will be entitled to their costs of this Court and of the lower Appellate Court from the plaintiff.

Appeal allowed in part.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION No. 520 OF 1917.

January 12, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Leslie Jones.

RATAN LAL—DECREE-HOLDER—PETITIONER

versus

BALA PARSHAD, MINOR, THROUGH BRIJ NATH—OBJECTOR AND LALTA PARSHAD—JUDGMENT-DEBTOR—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 115, 151, O. XXI, r. 58—Mortgage decree, execution of—Attachment, whether necessary—O. XXI, r. 58, objection under, whether can be taken—Court, inherent power of, when to be exercised—Revision—High Court, power of interference of.

Where property is directed to be sold under a mortgage decree, no objection under Order XXI, rule 58, of the Civil Procedure Code can be entertained to the attachment of such property, the reason being that the property directed to be sold under a decree of that kind does not require to be attached by way of execution and the mere fact that there has been an unnecessary attachment does not make the rule applicable. [p. 987, col. 1.]

Duyachand Nenchand v. Hemchand Dharamchand, 4 B. 515 (F. B.), 2 Ind. Dec. (N s.) 852, Himatram v. Khushal Jethiram Gujar, 18 B. 98; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 574, Deefholts v. Peters, 14 C. 631; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 418, followed.

Order XXI, rule 58, Civil Procedure Code, applies only to attachments in execution of a decree and not to attachments made before decree. [p. 987, col. 1.]

An objection having been taken under Order XXI, rule 58, of the Civil Procedure Code to the attachment of property sold in execution of a mortgage decree, the Court, holding that Order XXI, rule 58, was inapplicable entertained the application under section 151 of the Civil Procedure Code to save the objector the trouble of bringing a regular suit:

Held, that the Court had no jurisdiction to entertain an application or to pass an order upon it and that the Court having entertained the application the High Court had power to interfere under section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code. [p. 987, col. 1.]

Petition, under section 44 of Act III of 1914, for revision of the order of the Subordinate Judge, 2nd class, Delhi, dated the 20th April 1917, dismissing the application under Order XXI, rule 58, and deciding to entertain the application under section 151, Civil Procedure Code.

Mr. Mukerji, for the Petitioner.

Lala Moti Sagar, R. S., for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The petitioner obtained a preliminary decree for money on a mortgage of one-third of certain property on 30th August 19 6. Before that decree he had secured attachment. On 16th December 1916, he obtained a final decree and the property was advertised for sale. Thereupon the respondent, a brother of the judgment-debtor, filed an objection that the share of the judgment-debtor in the property was not one-third as stated in the decree but one-fourth.

The Court of execution found that the application was not one under Order XXI, rule 58, but decided nevertheless to entertain the application in exercise of the powers conferred by section 151 of the Code of Civil Procedure. This was done in order to save the objector the trouble of bringing a regular suit.

The decree-holder has now filed a petition for revision in this Court. It is clear that the objection was not and could not be one under Order XXI, rule 58, as that rule does not apply where the property in dispute is directed to be sold under a mortgage decree. The reason is that the property directed to be sold under a decree of that kind does not require the property to be attached by way of execution [see Dayachand Nenchand v. Hemchand Dharamchand (1)]. Himatram v. Khushal Jethiram Gujar (2) and Deefholts v. Peters (3) are further authorities for holding that the mere fact that there has been an unnecessary attachment does not make the rule applicable. In the present case, moreover, as already remarked, the attachment was before the decree and rule 58 applies only to attachments in execution of the decree.

Hari Mohan Dalal v. Lachmichand (4) is authority for holding that in such a case a Court has no jurisdiction to entertain any application for claim or to pass any order upon it and if it does so, the High Court will interfere under section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure. That Division Bench ruling of the Calcutta High Court is directly in point. I, therefore, allow the petition with costs and dismiss the respondent's application. Pleader's fee Rs. 32.

Petition allowed.

(1) 4 B. 515 (F. B.); 2 Ind. Dec. N. S.) 852.
(2) 18 B. 98; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 574.
(3) 14 C. 631; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 418.
(4) 18 Ind. Cas. 215.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 564 OF 1916.

November 28, 1917.

Present:—Justice Sir William Ayling, KT., and Mr. Justice Phillips.

C. SUBRAMANIA IYER alias SUBBA IYER AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS —APPELLANTS

versus

MUTHU VAITHILINGA MUDALIAR AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXII, rr. 3, 5 —Representatives of deceased party, conflicting claims by, decision on—Duty of Court—Appellate Court, order by, effect of—Order, whether can be questioned in appeal from final decree.

When a question arises as to who are the representatives of a deceased party to a suit or proceeding, it is obligatory on the Court to decide it. [p. 988, col. 1.]

An order passed by an Appellate Court deciding the question is as final as a similar order passed by the Court of first instance and its propriety cannot be questioned in an appeal on the merits from the final decree. [p. 988, col. 1.]

Second appeal against the decree of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Kumbakonam, in Appeal Suit No. 24 of 1915, preferred against the decree of the Court of the District Munsif, Tiruvalur, in Original Suit No 103 of 19:3..

FACTS.—The original plaintiff brought the suit to recover a site from the defendant. Pending suit she died, and the 2nd plaintiff applied to be brought on the record as her legal representative. Plaintiffs Nos. 3 to 12 also claimed to be her legal representatives; and the District Munsif, without adjudicating on the claims of the rival claimants, brought all of them on the record, and gave them a decree for a portion of the site in dispute. Second plaintiff alone appealed against the decree disallowing the remaining portion of the site; and in the appeal, also raised the contention that the lower Court ought to have raised the question as to who was the legal representative of the deceased. The Subordinate Judge framed a preliminary issue on the point and called for a finding. The District Munsif found in favour of the 2nd plaintiff; and the Subordinate Judge, after hearing the objections to the finding, passed a decree for the whole site.

Plaintiffs Nos. 3 to 12 preferred the second appeal on the only ground that they were also entitled to be impleaded as the legal representatives and that the first order impleading all of them as representatives should not have been interfered with.

Mr. T. R. Venkatarama Sastri, for the Appellant.

Messrs. A. Sambamurthi Iyer, K. Bhashyam Iyenyar and N. Kunjithapadham Iyer, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—In the First Court, on the death of the original plaintiff, the question arose whether Subramania Iyer (referred to as 2nd plaintiff) alone should be recognised as his legal representative or whether certain other persons (referred to as plaintiffs Nos. 3 to 12) should also be recognised along with him as legal representatives of the original plaintiff.

This is a question which under Order XXII, rule 5 of the Code of Civil Procedure, it was obligatory on the Court to decide; but it is clear from the order recorded and the Munsif's remarks in his finding dated the 15th October 1915 that he did not determine the question, but simply added all the claimants (plaintiffs Nos. 2 to 12) as legal representatives without enquiry or hearing 2nd plaintiff's objections and proceeded with the case.

When the case came up on appeal, the lower Appellate Court called for a finding as to who were the proper persons to be added as legal representatives of the original plaintiff, and passed an order adding 2nd plaintiff alone.

In our opinion, this order has the effect of removing plaintiffs Nos. 3 to 12 from the suit (except as regards their liability for costs) just as would have been the result of a similar order passed by the Original Court at the proper stage.

An order under Order XXII, rule 5, is not appealable and we do not think it is open to plaintiffs Nos. 3 to 12 to question it by way of appeal against the decree passed by the lower Appellate Court in favour of 2nd plaintiff against the defendant, which decree is not sought to be altered so far as defendant is concerned.

The present appeal does not lie and is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

M. C. P.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 149 OF 1916.

March 9, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Piggott and Mr. Justice Walsh.

MIR DAD KHAN AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

RAMZAN KHAN AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Agra Tenancy Act (II of 1901), ss. 10, 20, 21—Ex-proprietary tenancy, relinquishment of, validity of—Mortgage of sir land—Covenant to put mortgagee in possession—Relinquishment, deed of, simultaneous, effect of.

The object of section 10 of the Agra Tenancy Act is that a right of occupancy should be secured and preserved to a proprietor who becomes by a transfer the ex-proprietor, whether he wishes it to be secured and preserved to him or not, and notwithstanding any agreement to the contrary between himself and the transferee. [p. 989, col. 2]

If a covenant to relinquish the sir lands is part of a transaction of sale or of mortgage, then the agreement to surrender will be void and unenforceable, no matter what ingenious devices may be employed to give colour to it. If the Court is satisfied that there was first of all a transfer by way of sale or mortgage and that the transferee, having obtained the status of an ex-proprietary tenant, with full knowledge of that fact and of the rights preserved to him by the Statute, deliberately chooses, as a separate transaction, to relinquish his ex-proprietary tenancy into the hands of the new proprietor, or of the mortgagee in possession, then the law cannot go further in the way of protecting a reckless and imprudent man against the consequences of his own acts. [p. 990, col. 1.]

A Zemindar executed a usufructuary mortgage of a part of his sir lands for Rs. 8,000 and covenanted to put the mortgagee in actual cultivating possession of the land and not to assert his rights as an ex-proprietary tenant. By a deed of relinquishment executed on the same date the mortgagor purported to surrender or to relinquish in favour of the mortgagee, in return for a consideration of Rs. 1,000, his rights as an ex-proprietary tenant in the mortgaged lands. It was found that the mortgagee held a decree for Rs. 9,000 against the mortgagor, which was satisfied by the execution of the mortgage deed and the deed of relinquishment:

Held, that the transactions in the two deeds were in substance one transaction, and that the deed of relinquishment and the covenant to put the mortgagee in actual possession of the mortgaged land, being devices to evade the provisions of section 10 of the Agra Tenancy Act, were void and unenforceable. [p. 990, col. 2.]

First appeal from the decree of the Additional Subordinate Judge, Aligarh, dated the 26th January, 1916.

Mr. Panna Lal, for the Appellants.

Messrs. M. L. Agarwala and G. L. Agarwala, for the Respondents.

MIR DAD KHAN v. RAMZAN KHAN.

JUDGMENT.

PIGGOTT, J.—The suit out of which this first appeal arises is based upon the following state of facts:—

Mir Dad Khan and others were the owners of proprietary rights in a certain Mahal. Appurtenant to those proprietary rights was a considerable area of land of which these Zemindars were in possession either as sir or khudkasht. With reference to the khudkasht land it is sufficient to say that it was land which had been held by the proprietors in their own cultivation for the full statutory period and which had, therefore, acquired the essential character of sir land, so far as section 10 of the Local Tenancy Act No. II of 1901 is concerned. For purposes of brevity, therefore, it will be convenient hereafter to speak of these lands as the sir lands of Mir Dad Khan and others. Now these proprietors were indebted, and the evidence on the record shows that there was a decree out against them for a sum of Rs. 9,000 held by Thakur Das and others. The proprietors endeavoured to come to terms with these creditors and I do not think that there can be any doubt as to the nature of the arrangement effected. The creditors were willing to accept a usufructuary mortgage for Rs. 9,000, that is to say, for a sum sufficient to pay off their decree provided that the land mortgaged, being 30 bighas of the sir land of the debtors, should pass into their actual cultivating possession. In endeavouring to effect such a transaction the parties concerned had to get round the difficulties placed in their way by Statute, that is to say, by the Local Tenancy Act, and particularly by sections 10 and 20 of that Act. It so happens that the law on this point has been recently settled by the highest possible authority in the case in Moti Chand v. Ikram Ullah Khan (1). So far as I am concerned I think I am entitled to say that there is nothing in the propositions of law there laid down other than I have been consistently asserting for some years past, or other than were given effect to by Mr. Justice Tudball and myself in the case of Dipan Rai v. Ram Khelawan Rai (2). Their Lordships of the Privy Council, in deciding the case before them, by no means overlooked the provisions of section 83 of the Tenancy Act, according to which a tenant may at the end of any agricultural year surrender his holding to his proprietor. What they point out is that this right of surrender cannot be permitted to be used in such a manner as to defeat the provisions of the law by which ex-proprietary tenancies are created. They point out that the policy of Act No. II of 1901 is to secure and preserve to a proprietor, whose proprietary rights in a Mahal, or in any portion of it, are transferred, otherwise than by gift or exchange between co-sharers in the Mahal, a right of occupancy in his sir lands. Such right of occupancy is secured and preserved to the proprietor, who becomes by a transfer the ex-proprietary tenant, whether he wishes the right to be secured and preserved to him or not, and notwithstanding any agreement to the contrary between him and the transferee. It is further pointed out that the Courts must not allow the policy of the Act to be defeated by any ingenious devices, arrangements or agreements between a vendor and a vendee for the relinquishment by the vendor of his sir land. They go on to point out, more particularly, that devices to compel such a surrender by the inclusion in the deed of transfer of provisions amounting to a penalty against the transferor, in the event of his failing to relinquish the ex-proprietary tenancy, must also be regarded as devices or arrangements for defeating the policy of the Act. Cases in which attempts have been made, more or less openly, to evade the provisions of the law on the subject of ex-proprietary tenancies do from time to time come before the Courts, and we have to notice more particularly the decision of a Bench of this Court in Lekhraj v. Parshadi (3), in which it would appear that a transaction which one might at least suspect of having been of this nature was given effect to by the Court. According to their Lordships of the

(1) 39 Ind. Cas. 454; 39 A. 173; 5 L. W. 388; 15 A. L. J. 150; 21 M. L. T. 267; 32 M. L. J. 383; 21 C. W. N. 616; 19 Bom. L. R. 433; 26 C. L. J. 24; (1917) M. W. N. 453 (P. C.).

(2) 5 Ind. Cas. 557; 32 A. 383; 7 A. L. J. 330.

(3) 2 Ind. Cas. 409; 6 A. L. J. 713.

Privy Council I take the true test to be this:—If a covenant to relinquish the sir lands is part of the transaction of sale or of mortgage then the agreement to surrender will be void and unenforceable, no matter what ingenious devices may be employed to give colour to it. If the Court is satisfied that there was first of all a transfer by way of sale or mortgage and that the transferee, having obtained the status of an ex-proprietary tenant, with full knowledge of that fact and of the rights preserved to him by the Statute, deliberately chooses, as a separate transaction, to relinquish his ex-proprietary tenancy into the hands of the new proprietor, or of the mortgagee in possession, then the law cannot go further in the way of protecting a reckless and imprudent man against the consequences of his own acts.

In the present case what we have to consider is the nature of the agreement actually entered into between Thakur Das and his fellow creditors on the one hand and Mir Dad Khan and his fellow Zemindars on the other. Two documents were executed on one and the same date, namely, the 19th of June 1913. By one of these documents the proprietors covenanted to mortgage with possession 30 bighas of land forming part of their sir lands. They declared themselves to have put the mortgagees in actual possession of the land in question, surrendering all their rights in the sir and khudkasht. They further covenanted that, if the mortgagees should fail to obtain possession, or if the mortgagors should after all not give up the sir from their own cultivation, or should set up any claim to hold it as ex-proprietary tenants, then the mortgagees should be entitled to sue for their mortgage money with heavy interest and to enforce the same by sale of the proprietary rights of the mortgagors, not merely in the 30 bighas of land already referred to, but in a total area of 63 bighas and odd belonging to the mortgagors. The consideration for this document was stated at a sum of Rs. 8,000. A further attempt was made to safeguard the mortgagees in any event, against a possible refusal on the part of the mortgagors to carry out the contract in its entirety. The mortgagees did not content themselves with taking a usufructuary mortgage pure and simple. They inserted a covenant that, in spite of their right to obtain possession of the 30 bighas of land and to enjoy the usufruct in lieu of interest, they should nevertheless be entitled at any time to sue for the principal of their mortgage debt and to bring to sale the proprietary rights of the mortgagors in the area of 30 bighas, which were formally hypothecated as security for the debt. The other document of the same date was a deed of relinquishment, by which the mortgagors under the former deed purported to surrender or to relinquish in favour of the mortgagees, in return for a consideration of Rs. 1,000, their rights as ex-proprietary tenants in the 30 bighas of sir land in question. Whatever doubt there may be in particular cases as to the precise nature of the transaction entered into, it seems to me that there is no room for doubt in the present case. The total sum of money which Mir Dad Khan and his fellow Zemindars owed to Thakur Das and others was Rs. 9,000 and this was distributed between the two deeds, the mortgage-deed and the deed of relinquishment. Moreover, the mortgage-deed itself contained, not merely an express stipulation to put the mortgagees in actual cultivating possession of the sir lands, but a penalty clause binding the mortgagors not to assert their rights as ex-proprietary tenants. The transaction, therefore, was one single transaction effected under cover of two deeds. It was a determined attempt to evade "by ingenious devices and arrangements," as their Lordships of the Privy Council have put it, the provisions of sections 10 and 20 of Act No. II of 1901. It is quite immaterial that, according to the terms of the two documents, the surrender purports to have been actually effected. In any such attempt to get round the provisions of the law the transferee is certain to insist upon a statement that he has actually been put in possession and that the surrender which he desires has actually been effected. I must note, however, that the mortgage-deed in question is not a usufructuary mortgage pure and simple; to a certain extent it is a combination of a simple and a usufructuary mortgage, and is, therefore, what the Courts in India commonly speak of as an anomalous mortgage. We are principally concerned in the present case with the effect of this document as a usufructuary mortgage. On the principles laid down by their Lordships of the Privy Council all the stipulations about the surrender of ex-proprietary rights and about the transfer to the mortgagees of actual cultivating possession over this area of 30 bighas are void and unenforceable. The penalty clause goes along with the rest, being strictly analogous to the sort of device spoken of by their Lordships of the Privy Council at the close of the judgment already referred to, whereby the vendor covenants to make himself liable to a suit for breach of contract on his failing or refusing to carry out the stipulated relinquishment of his ex-proprietary rights. Such a stipulation would, in the opinion of their Lordships, be void and unenforceable. I can see nothing in the stipulation in the deed in suit by which the mortgagors bound themselves, in the event of their setting up any claim to possession as ex-proprietary tenants, to submit to a decree for sale against their proprietary rights in an area of 63 bighas and odd, to distinguish it from a stipulation that they should be liable to a suit for damages, or to any other kind of penalty, in the event of their failure to relinquish. In the view of the case which I take I am by no means disposed to differ from such decisions as that which we have been referred to, viz., Rajendra Prasad v. Ram Jatan Rai (4), where a mortgage affecting some property which was transferable, along with other property which was by law non-transferable, was allowed to be enforced against the former of the two properties. I do not say for a moment that the mortgage deed in suit, regarded as a usufructuary mortgage, was altogether void and of no effect. What it gave the mortgagees was the right affirmed by Mr. Justice Tudball and myself in Dipan Rai v. Ram Khelawan Rai (2), namely, the right to proprietary possession in respect of this area of 30 bighas and the right to have rent assessed thereon upon the mortgagors as ex-proprietary tenants and to receive and enjoy the said rent in lieu of interest on their money. This was no doubt less than the mortgagees wanted and hoped to secure by the transaction, but it was the legal effect of the transaction actually entered into, in view of the provisions of section 10 of the Tenancy Act by which the ex-proprietary tenure was preserved to the former proprietor, "whether he wished it or not," as the Privy Council have said.

We have been asked, however, to consider further the anomalous nature of this mortgage and the legal effect of hypothecation of the proprietary rights in this area of 30 bighas as security for re-payment of the principal loan. For reasons which I shall have to state presently I do not think that any decision on this point is necessary to the determination of this appeal. My own opinion undoubtedly is that the original mortgagees, Thakur Das and others, could have enforced this stipulation. They could have taken up the position that the contract of mortgage which they had entered into was a usufructuary mortgage combined with a simple mortgage; that they had made a mistake in attempting to evade the Statute Law by the terms of their usufructuary mortgage, and that they, therefore, claimed to fall back upon the document as a simple mortgage and to ask for a decree on that basis. It may, however, be noted at the same time that this remedy would have been worth extremely little to the mortgagees. If the proprietary rights of Mir Dad Khan and his fellow Zemindars in this area of 30 bighas had been brought to sale on a decree enforcing the hypothecation of the same for re-payment of the loan of Rs. 8,000, the sale itself would at once have given rise in favour of the mortgagors to this very ex-proprietary tenure which it was the object of the deed in suit to get round. The purchaser at auction, whether Thakur Das or another, would have had to be content with the rent assessed by the Collector on this ex-proprietary tenure as representing to him the usufruct of the property purchased. This right the original mortgagees could have enjoyed as mortgagee under the usufructuary part of the mortgage, and it would not have made much difference to them to have endeavoured to work out the same result by enforcing the hypothecation lien, if that were limited (as it must be limited apart from the penalty clause) to the proprietary rights in the area of 30 bighas.

(4) 39 Ind. Cas. 785; 39 A. 539; 15 A. L. J. 544.

The case now before us is not between the mortgagors and the original mortgagees. The plaintiffs, who are the respondents to this appeal, were co-sharers in the same Mahal, and the transfer of the proprietary rights of Mir Dad Khan and others by way of usufructuary mortgage gave rise to a right of pre-emption on their part. This right they claimed to enforce and they brought a suit accordingly. That suit was finally settled by a compromise and the compromise decree, which is dated the 16th of June 1914, gives these plaintiffs as pre-emptors the right of possession as mortgagees over the property pre-empted, that is to say, over the 30 bighas of sir land in suit. It gives them nothing more: even if what I have called the penalty clause of the original contract of mortgage were enforceable by the original mortgagees, which I believe it was not, there is nothing in this decree to make it enforceable by the pre-emptors. Still less does this decree give the plaintiffs any right, under the mortgage-deed of June the 19th, 1913, to bring the property to sale under the hypothecation effected in the earlier part of the said deed. I doubt whether an alienation by way of simple mortgage would have given rise to any right of pre-emption. The presumption is that persons possessing the right of pre-emption would have had to wait until the property was brought to sale in enforcement of the hypothecation lien, and then to have asserted any rights of pre-emption which they might claim. However this may be, the pre emption decree actually passed does not transfer to these plaintiffs any rights as simple mortgagees in respect of the land in suit.

In the suit as brought the plaintiffs claim the full benefit of the terms of the mortgage of June the 19th, 1913. They say that they are entitled to actual possession over the area of 30 bighas in question or, failing this, that they are entitled to recover the mortgage debt of Rs. 8,000 with interest at 2 per cent. per mensem under the penalty clause of the mortgage deed, by sale of the area of 63 bighas and odd referred to in that clause. The learned Subordinate Judge who tried the case was not an officer with any revenue experience, nor had he before him at the time of his decision the clear pronouncement of their Lordships of the Privy Council to which reference has already been made. It is, therefore, no imputation against him to say that, in the very brief judgment pronounced by him, he has not shown much appreciation of the difficulties of the case. He has definitely held that the plaintiffs were not entitled to possession as mortgagees over the land in suit; but he has enforced in their favour the penalty clause in the original contract of mortgage, which they were most certainly not entitled to have the benefit of. The decree as passed is for recovery of the principal of Rs. 8,000, with arrears of interest and costs, by sale of the 63 bighas and odd of land already referred to. From the operation of this decree, however, a certain share has been excluded, on the ground that one of the former proprietors was a minor and that his certificated guardian joined in this mortgage on his behalf without having duly obtained the sanction of the District Judge. We have a petition of cross-appeal before us challenging the decision of the trial Court on this point; but in view of the decision which we have arrived at on the main question it seems unnecessary for us to go into it. If the appeal of the defendants succeeds the cross-objection must obviously fail.

Now, as regards the appeal of the defendants, I have already given abundant reasons why in my opinion the decree as passed cannot stand. In the very able and ingenious argument addressed to us by Mr. M. L. Agarwala on behalf of the respondents, although he very properly declined to give up any part of his clients' case, it is doing him no injustice to say that he could not make out much of a case for affirming the decree of the Court below as it stands. What he really pressed upon us was the right of his clients to one or other of two different reliefs. He contended that, in any event, his clients should be given the benefit of what I have called the hypothecation clause in the mortgage-deed of June 19th, 1913, and the proprietary rights of the mortgagors in the 30 bighas of land in question be brought to sale, at least in satisfaction of the principal of the mortgage-debt. In reply to the suggestion that the right to enforce this hypothecation clause had not passed to his clients under the pre-emption decree, Mr. Agarwalla contended with much keenness that no plea to this effect had been taken in the written statement of any of the defendants. It seems a fair rejoinder to this to say that neither was any claim to this effect set up in the plaint. The claim in the plaint was for cultivating possession over the land in suit, by ejectment of Mir Dad Khan and his fellow mortgagors, or in the alternative for enforcement of the penalty clause by the passing of a decree for sale in respect of the entire area of 63 bighas and odd. I feel quite satisfied that, whatever might have been the rights of Thakur Das and others in respect of the hypothecation of the area of 30 bighas, those rights did not pass to the present plaintiffs under the pre-emption decree and that, therefore, this relief is not open to them.

The other contention pressed upon us by Mr. Agarwalla has caused me more difficulty. It is based not merely on the documentary evidence already referred to, but upon certain evidence as to transactions which followed the execution of the mortgage deed in suit. Broadly speaking, Mr. Agarwalla's contention is this:—That the mortgagors, Mir Dad Khan and others, whatever may or may not have been their rights under the deed in suit, did carry out their part of the contract by actually surrendering to the mortgagees, Thakur Das and others, the ex-proprietary tenancy which the Statute created in their favour. The argument is that the original mortgagees thus obtained actual cultivating possession of the land in question and enjoyed the same for the period of about a year; that by this possession the ex-proprietary tenure became finally extinguished and can no longer be set up against the plaintiffs, pre-emptors. I admit the contention to be a highly ingenious one and the question which it raises seems to me of some difficulty. In the first place, however, I think that on the evidence on this record Mr. Agarwalla is asking too much of us in the way of findings of fact in his favour. The Patwari of the village was not put into the witness box nor were any of the original mortgagees called. We know from the plaint that Mir Dad Khan and the other mortgagors were in actual cultivating possession of the 30 bighas of land when the suit was instituted on the 5th of July 1915, and the plaint certainly does not explain how or when they recovered that possession, if they did in fact surrender their ex-proprietary tenancy into the hands of the original mortgagees. One of the plaintiffs went into the witness box and deposed that the mortgagees, Thakur Das and others, had entered into actual possession of the land. He said he himself failed to get actual possession because Mir Dad Khan forcibly cultivated it. He was cross-examined on this point in a manner which clearly showed that the defendants did not admit the facts stated by him to be correct, but the only evidence by which he sought to support himself was the production of certain records of the Revenue Courts showing the mutation proceedings which followed the execution of the mortgage-deed in suit. Now the execution of that deed required in any event to be taken due notice of in the village records. There had to be some mutation of names in respect of it and the natural tendency of the Revenue Courts, unless their attention was specially called to the matter, would be to effect formal mutation of names in accordance with the terms of the deed. What I notice more particularly is that the Tahsildar, on whom the duty of making the necessary preliminary enquiries lay, when reporting the matter for the orders of the Assistant Collector in charge of the Sub-Division, contented himself with mentioning that there had been a surrender of the ex-proprietary holding, keeping back the very important fact which he should certainly have mentioned, that that surrender purported to have been made and attested by a deed of even date with the usufructuary mortgage itself, that is to say, at a time when it was at least doubtful whether the mortgagees were entitled to receive any such surrender, and under circumstances strongly suggestive on the face of them of an attempt to evade the law. The Assistant Collector appears to have passed his order for mutation of names, without further consideration or enquiry, on the strength of the Tahsildar's report. I am not satisfied, therefore, that this evidence proves that there was an effective surrender of the land in suit into the hands of Thakur Das, much less that the possession of Thakur Das and his fellow mortgagees lasted for the entire period of one year, or for anything like that period. It is, of course, possible that, as between the original mortgagees and the original mortgagors, the contract would have been carried out according to its terms, if the plaintiffs had not interfered with their suit for pre-emption. The fact remains that, by the time when the present plaintiffs tried to obtain the benefit of their pre-emption decree, they found the original mortgagors in effective possession of the land in suit and claiming to be exactly what the law says they are, namely, ex-proprietary tenants of the same. Looking at the matter in its broadest aspect, I would say that the rights which these plaintiffs took under their pre-emption decree in respect of the mortgage deed in suit, regarded as a usufructuary mortgage, were simply the rights which the law would permit the original mortgagees themselves to take under the same, namely, the right to proprietary possession subject to an ex-proprietary tenancy in favour of the original mortgagors. This is the position taken up by the defendants in this suit, and I think, that position is correct in law and that the plaintiffs are not entitled, either to the relief which has been decreed to them by the Court below, or to any of the reliefs which have been claimed on their behalf in the alternative. In this view of the case I would allow the appeal, set aside the decision of the Court below and dismiss the plaintiffs' suit with costs, including fees on the higher scale, and similarly dismiss with costs the cross-objection filed by the plaintiffs-respondents.

WALSH J.—I agree. I think this is a colourable transaction. The two deeds were in fact an attempted sale of the ex-proprietary rights. If so, the case is clearly covered by the decision of my learned brothers Tudball and Piggott, JJ., in Dipan Rai v. Ram Khelawan Rai (2) and also by the observations of the Privy Council reported as Moti Chand v. Ikram Ullah (1), where Sir John Edge in delivering judgment affirmed the principle laid down by the High Court that the transaction was not a lawful one, whether it was regarded as an attempted sale of the ex-proprietary rights or an agreement to relinquish those rights when they should arise, and he pointed out that the policy of Act No. II of 1901 was that the right of occupancy should be secured and preserved to the proprietor who becomes by a transfer the ex-proprietor, whether he wishes it to be secured and preserved to him or not and notwithstanding any agreement to the contrary between himself and the transferee.

The transactions in these two deeds are in substance one transaction which took place on the same day—they are in form inseparable, but I think that the same principle would apply even if they were in form separable. I apply the same reasoning which was applied by the House of Lords in the case of Maas v. Pepper (5), the law being in England that no mortgage of moveable chattels could be entered into where the chattels remained in the possession of the grantor without a registered document. There had been a sale of furniture to an alleged purchaser who by a contemporaneous document re-let them on a hire agreement for the original price at which he had bought them plus an addition to that sum which the Court regarded as merely interest under another name, the agreement giving to the hirer the right to become the owner by re-purchase if he paid the instalments under the agreement. Now those two documents were entirely independent in form. Nonetheless the House of Lords held that the trial Court had been right in going behind the form and deciding what was in substance the real transaction, and pointed out that the sale was really a colourable sale to disguise what was in substance a loan. I think by the same reasoning this was a colourable relinquishment to disguise what was in fact a sale. No doubt an ex-proprietary tenant can, as such, surrender his rights by proper relinquishment. Nobody can put the point, I think, better than it has been put by Mr. M. L. Agarwalla at page 69 of his book on the Tenancy

(5) (1905) A. C. 102; 74 L. J. K. B. 452; 92 L. T. 371; 53 W. R. 513; 12 Manson 197; 21 T. L. R. 304.

Act in this sentence: "It comes to this that though a proprietor can, in fact, give up his ex-proprietary rights, when they accrue, by not availing himself of them he cannot bind himself by an express stipulation to that effect in a deed of transfer of the property or the like."

I think that is what these documents purported to do. I agree with what my brother has said about the decision in Lekhraj v. Parshadi (3). Unless the facts of that case are distinguishable from this case by something which does not appear in the judgment, I am bound to say, having regard to the facts reported, that the two transactions in that case being contemporaneous in date, I should have found difficulty in holding that the alleged relinquishment in that case was not also a colourable transaction. To that extent I am unable to agree with the decision.

BY THE COURT.—We allow the appeal, set aside the decision of the Court below and dismiss the plaintiffs' suit with costs, including fees on the higher scale. We also dismiss with costs the cross-objection filed by the plaintiffs-respondents.

Appeal allowed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL SIDE APPEAL No. 62 OF 1916.

July 19, 1917.

Present:—Sir John Wallis, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Oldfield.

GANTASALA KUPPIAH CHETTY—DEFENDANT No. 1—APPELLANT

versus

N. GUNAVATHIAMMA AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Madras High Court Fees Rules, r. 40—Fees, award of, on higher scale—'Special grounds', meaning of—Fraudulent or reprehensible conduct of party, whether 'special ground.'

The 'special grounds' which would justify an award of fees to a party on the higher scale under rule 40 of the High Court Fees Rules are limited to cases where the special grounds are such as to affect the costs of the litigation. The reprehensible or fraudulent conduct of a party is not such a 'special ground' as would justify such an award. [p. 994, col. 1.]

Assets Development Company Ltd. v. Close, (1900) 2 Ch. 717; 69 L. J. Ch. 715; 83 L. T. 162; 48 W. R. 699, considered.

Appeal from the judgment of Mr. Justice Coutts Trotter, dated the 15th September 1916 passed in the exercise of the Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction of this Court, in Original Suit No. 100 of 1916.

Messrs. Venkatasubba Rau and Radhakrishnayya, for the Appellant.

Mr. M. A. Tirunarayanacharri, instructed by Mr. P. Kandasami, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

WALLIS, C. J.—(After discussing the facts) * * * * * *

There only remains one other question. The learned Judge, in view of the conduct of the 1st defendant of which he takes a very unfavourable view, granted plaintiffs' costs on the higher scale. Rule 40 of the High Court Fees Rules provides "on special grounds the Court may..... order that the fees set forth in the column headed higher scale, shall be allowed." This rule is adopted from Order LXV, rule 9, of the Rules of the Supreme Court, which sets forth that fees on the higher scale may be allowed "if on special grounds arising out of the nature and importance, or the difficulty or urgency of the case the Court or a Judge shall.....so order." Some difficulty was experienced by the Courts in England in interpreting the words which I have read as to what was meant by "nature and importance or the difficulty or urgency of the case." Standing by themselves it might have seemed at first sight that they were wide enough to authorise the Court to grant costs on the higher scale where it thought that the conduct of one of the parties to the suit had been particularly reprehensible, or to cover a case in which an unfounded charge of fraud had been made. That was the case in Assets Development Co. Ltd. v. Close (1), where not only was an unfounded charge of fraud made, but also the facts required a great deal of investigation and a lengthy trial. It was, however, held by Mr. Justice Buckley in accordance with the previous decisions that these facts were not enough to justify a grant of costs on the higher scale. The learned Judge says: "I think the meaning of the rule is that it is to apply where the nature and importance or difficulty or urgency of the case necessitates the expenditure of more money," that is to say, that the special grounds must affect the costs of the litigation. I do not think that the omission of the words, to which I have called attention, in our reproduction of the rule affords any ground for disregarding the restricted construction which was put upon the rule by English Courts, and I think that we should do well to follow the example of the English Courts in limiting the rule as to the power of the Court to award costs on the higher scale on special grounds to cases in which the special grounds are such as to affect the costs of the litigation, and I do not think that that is so in this case. We must, therefore, vary the order of the learned Judge to that extent by reducing the costs to costs on the ordinary scale while otherwise dismissing the appeal with costs.

(1) (1900) 2 Ch. 717; 69 L. J. Ch. 715; 83 L. T. 162 48 W. R. 699.

OLDFIELD, J.—I entirely agree.

Order varied.

M. C. P.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEALS FROM APPELLATE DECREES NOS. 1162, 1507 TO 1516 OF 1915.

February 4, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Richardson and Mr. Justice Beachcroft.

MAHAMAD JALIS AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Limitation—Suit for declaration of title and confirmation of possession, whether can be treated as suit for recovery of possession for purpose of limitation.

Where a plaintiff in a suit for declaration of title and confirmation of possession alleges facts which show that he was out of possession, his suit, even though framed for confirmation of possession, may be treated as one for recovery of possession if his title to recover possession has not been barred by limitation; but where the plaintiff in such a suit makes a case that he is in possession, but fails to prove his possession, the Court will not give him recovery of possession, even though he proves his title and the suit has been instituted within the limitation period prescribed for suits for recovery of possession. [p. 997, col. 2.]

Moulvie Abdoollah v. Shaha Mujeesooddeen, 16 W. R. 27 and Bisseswari Koer v. Ram Protap Singh, 4 Ind. Cas. 547; 14 C. W. N. 366, explained.

Appeals against the decrees of the District Judge, Noakhali, dated the 27th of January 1915, modifying that of the Munsif, Additional Court at Sundwip, dated the 30th of April 1914.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

Dr. Jadu Nath Kanjilal (with him Babu Girija Prosanna Sanyal), for the Plaintiff-Appellants.—The twelve years' law of limitation will apply in this case under Article 142 of the Limitation Act, and not the six years' law of limitation. The suit was no doubt for declaration of title and confirmation of possession and the six years' rule of limitation would apply to the suit as it was framed. But when it has been found that the plaintiff was not in possession, he might very well ask for recovery of possession and the twelve years' rule of limitation will apply. Referred to Rash Dharee Singh v. Nuthoonee Singh (1).

[RICHARDSON, J. referred to Secretary of State v. Kalika Prosad (2).]

Of course if the suit is a mala fide one, the plaintiff may not be allowed the benefit of the twelve years' rule of limitation in such cases but where there is no question as to the bona fides of the plaintiff and his title has been established in both Courts, there is no reason why his suit should be dismissed on the ground of limitation, on the finding of the Court that his suit was a mere declaratory one and not for recovery of possession. The lands in dispute being accretions there might be bona fide dispute between the parties as to which of them was in possession. The plaintiff, bona fide believing that he was in possession, merely asked for declaration of title and confirmation of possession. But when it was found by the Court that he was not in possession, he ought to have been allowed to amend the plaint by adding a prayer for recovery of possession. That would have caused no injury to the other side. Referred to Amir Hossein v. Imambandi Begum (3). The recovery of possession of the land

(1) 24 W. R. 301.
(2) 14 Ind. Cas. 609; 15 C. L. J. 281.
(3) 11 C. L. R. 443 at p. 451.

might be regarded as a consequential relief in the suit. Referred to Chukkun Lal Roy v. Lolit Mohan Roy (4).

Babu Ram Charan Mitter, for the Respondent.—The six years' rule of limitation is applicable to suits for confirmation of possession. See Mohabharat Shaha v. Abdul Hamid Khan (5). The case of Chukkun Lal Roy v. Lolit Mohan Roy (4) is distinguishable. The plaintiff might have asked that if his possession was not found his suit might be treated as for recovery of possession, but when he came with a definite case that he was in possession and he only asked for declaration of title, he cannot change the nature of the suit by converting it into a suit for recovery of possession.

Dr. Jadu Nath Kanjilal replied.

JUDGMENT.

RICHARDSON, J.—Having read my learned brother's judgment I concur in the conclusion at which he has arrived. The question is merely on which side of the line of demarcation drawn by the authorities the present case falls. That depends on the facts, and the facts as found bear out the view which the District Judge has taken on the point of law.

The appeals are dismissed with costs. We assess the hearing fee in all the appeals at five gold mohurs to be paid in equal shares by the appellants in each case.

BEACHCROFT, J.—These appeals relate to a large area of riverside land in the Hudrakali Khas Mahal in the Noakhali District. The plaintiffs who are the appellants got settlement of some land, bounded on the north by the river, in 1893. Since then there has been a considerable accretion of land on the north side of the plaintiffs' holding and this land has been dealt with in three separate strips. The strip immediately to the north of the plaintiffs' holding was kept as gopat, the strip to the north of that was settled with the plaintiffs in 1905, and the northernmost strip, which is now the riverside land, was settled, also in 1905, with some persons other than the plaintiffs.

In the present suit the first Court gave the plaintiffs a decree in respect of all the accreted land, but on appeal the District Judge reversed the Munsif's decision in respect of the northernmost strip of land and the present appeals concern only that strip.

The learned Judge found that though the plaintiffs had title to the land in dispute as being an accretion to their holding, their suits were barred by limitation as they were not for recovery of possession but for declaration of title and confirmation of possession. The period of limitation for such a suit is six years and the learned Judge found that the persons with whom the strip in dispute was settled in 1905 had been in possession for over 7 years when the suit was brought in 1912.

In appeal it is argued with reference to the question of limitation that though the suit was framed as one for confirmation of possession the Court may treat it as one for recovery of possession and give plaintiffs the appropriate relief, as admittedly the land had only been formed within 12 years of the date of filing the suit.

We have been referred to a number of authorities ranging from the case of Moulvie Abdoollah v. Shaha Mujeesooddeen (6) decided in 1871 to the case of Bisseswari Koer v. Ram Protap Singh (7) decided in 1909. These authorities establish this, that where a plaintiff alleges facts which show that he was out of possession, his suit, even though framed as one for confirmation of possession, may be treated as one for recovery of possession, but where he makes a case that he is in possession and fails to prove his possession, the Court will not give him recovery of possession even though he proves his title.

There is no hardship in this rule. Apart from the fact that a plaintiff cannot complain of the Court's refusal to give him relief if he comes with a false story, it is clear that if he came after 6 years with an allegation that he was in possession and succeeded in proving that possession, his suit would be barred: Shyamanand Das v. Raj Narain Das (8). It is obvious that he ought not to be placed in a better position because part of his case turns out to be false.

(4) 20 C. 906; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 609.
(5) 1 C. L. J. 73.
(6) 16 W. R. 27.
(7) 4 Ind. Cas 547; 14 C. W. N. 366
(8) 4 C. L. J. 569; 11 C. W. N. 186.

In the present case plaintiffs alleged that they were in possession and had brought the land under cultivation at great expense, and they brought their suits because the land had been settled with others. Their allegations have been found to be false.

That being so, I am of opinion that the suits were rightly dismissed by the learned District Judge and that these appeals ought to be dismissed with costs.

Appeals dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

EXECUTION FIRST APPEAL No. 279 OF 1917.

March 2, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Tudball and Mr. Justice Rafique.

BASANTI—DECREE-HOLDER—APPELLANT

versus

KUNJ BIHARI LAL—JUDGMENT-DEBTOR—RESPONDENT.

Mortgage decree, execution of—Property assessed to revenue—Decree describing property as muafi—Objection by purchaser in execution of money decree—Identity of property—Objector not deceived—Court, duty of, to correct error in decree where no question of doubt.

A mortgage-deed described the mortgaged property as muafi whereas it was assessed to a small sum of revenue. The mortgagee sued upon the basis of the mortgage and obtained a decree in which the property was again described as muafi. In execution it was objected by a previous purchaser of the property in execution of a money-decree that the property was not revenue-free and was, therefore, not the property mortgaged. At the time of the objector's purchase the burden of the mortgagee's loan had been duly notified:

Held, that as the objector was not in any way deceived when he purchased the property, the burden of the mortgage having been clearly notified at the time of his purchase, it was utterly unjust to allow a slight misdescription to prevent a Court from doing what was right. [p. 999, col. 1.]

It is the Court's duty to see that all errors in the decree are amended when there is no question of doubt. [p. 999, col. 1.]

Execution first appeal from a decree of the Subordinate Judge, Moradabad.

Messrs. Narain Prasad Asthana and Shiam Krishna Dar, for the Appellant.

Mr. Surendro Nath Sen, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal and Execution First Appeal No. 280 of 1917 cover the same point and are connected. One Jamil-ur-Rahman in the year 1910 borrowed Rs. 4,000 from Musammat Basanti, the appellant, under a mortgage deed and hypothecated certain property in two villages. The description of the property is as follows:—No. 1, Mauza Daranagar muafi Mahal Mustahkam Rang Surkh three biswas fifteen biswansis out of fifteen biswas, situate in Pargana Hasanpur, district Moradabad (the names of the villages on boundaries of the village are also given); No. 2, Mauza Walipore, Mahal Sutaid muafi, $2\frac{1}{2}$ biswas out of 20 biswas, Pargana Hasanpur, District Moradabad. In this case also the bounding villages were named. The description in the mortgage-deed contained one error. These properties were not revenue-free but actually were assessed to small sums of revenue. It is probable that they were commonly spoken of as revenue-free. The mortgagee sued upon the basis of the mortgage and obtained a decree. The preliminary decree and the final decree described the property as it is described in the mortgage-deed. In the meantime these properties had been attached in execution of a simple money-decree against the mortgagor and were purchased in case of one village by the respondent in the present appeal, Kunj Behari Lal, and in the other by the respondents, Muhammad Hashmat Ali, etc. When proclaimed for sale the burden of the mortgagee's loan upon the property was duly notified. The mortgagee has now applied for execution of the decree by sale of the mortgaged property. The auction-purchasers under the simple money-decree have objected that there is no muafi in these villages or mahals, that the property that they have purchased is not revenue-free property and is, therefore, not the property mortgaged. Inquiry has been made and it is established beyond all doubt whatsoever that these properties are not revenue-free and never have been; that the description "revenue-free" entered in the mortgage-deed was a mistake, though the properties may perchance have been locally spoken of as revenue-free, but it is also equally clear that the property purchased by the respondents is the property that was mortgaged to the appellant. The Court below has held that it is prevented by reason of the misdescription in the decree from putting this property to sale and has refused the decree-holder's application. It is not as if the opposite party had been in any way deceived when they purchased the property, for the burden upon it was clearly notified and we think it utterly unjust to allow a slight misdescription, such as has crept in in the present case, to prevent a Court from doing what is right. We allow the appeal. It is the Court's duty to see that all errors are amended when there is no question of doubt. The Court executing the decree is the Court which passed the decree. We direct that the word "muafi" be struck out of the decree and direct that the Court below proceed to put the property to sale in the manner laid down by law. The appellant will have her costs in both Courts.

Appeal allowed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

LETTERS PATENT APPEAL No. 19 OF 1917.

August 22, 1917.

Present:—Sir Lancelot Sanderson, KT., Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Teunon and Mr. Justice Walmsley.

JAGAT CHANDRA ACHARJI AND ANOTHER —PLAINTIFFS—PETITIONERS—APPELLANTS

versus

SYAMA CHARAN BHATTACHARJEE AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—OPPOSITE PARTIES—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XLVII, r. 5—Review, jurisdiction of one of two Judges constituting Division Bench of High Court to hear application for—Appeal from judgment of single Judge of High Court, disposing of application for review without jurisdiction—Letters Patent (Cal.), cl. 15.

Want of objection by or consent of the parties to the exercise of jurisdiction by a Court will not give a jurisdiction to the Court which it does not possess under the law. [p. 999, col. 2.]

During the absence on leave of one of two Judges of a High Court constituting a Division Bench, the other Judge has no jurisdiction to hear an application for review of its decree, unless the former Judge has ceased to be a member of the Court or is precluded by absence or other cause, for a period of six months next after the application, from considering the decree to which the application refers. [p. 1,000, col. 1.]

The judgment of a single Judge thus disposing of an application for review without jurisdiction is subject to appeal under clause 15 of the Letters Patent. [p. 1,000, col. 2.]

In the matter of an application for a review of the judgment of this Court, dated the 11th May 1914, passed in Appeal from Appellate Decree No. 527 of 1914, being an appeal from the decree of the Sub-Judge, 1st Court, Chittagong, passed in Title Appeal No. 449/337 of 1912 dated the 26th November 1913, modifying the decree of the Munsif, 1st Court, Patiya, passed in Title Suit No. 220 of 1911, dated the 12th June 1912.

FACTS appear from the following

JUDGMENT.

SANDERSON, C. J.—In these two cases the point which has been raised (the same point has been raised in each case), is a very unusual point, and one upon which there is no authority.

What happened is as follows:—Mr. Justice Holmwood sitting with Mr. Justice Chapman heard these second appeals under Order XLI, rule 11, of the Civil Procedure Code and dismissed them. After that Mr. Justice Chapman took a month's leave immediately before the long vacation, and while he was away applications were made to Mr. Justice Holmwood for a review of the judgments which had been delivered by him and Mr. Justice Chapman. Mr. Justice Holmwood heard the applications for review and dismissed them. As far as I understand the facts, the parties did not object at the time of his hearing the applications on the ground that he had no jurisdiction so to do: but, of course, that fact or the consent of parties will not give jurisdiction if he had no jurisdiction under the Act.

The learned Vakil who appeared in the first of these cases mentioned to us a case* which was decided by Mr. Justice Woodroffe and Mr. Justice Mookerjee and seemed to think that his case was covered by that decision. But in that case the facts were materially different from those in this case. There Mr. Justice Teunon sitting with Mr. Justice Smither, who was then acting as a Judge of the High Court, had dealt with a second appeal. Then after Mr. Justice Smither left the Court, i. e., after his officiating period had come to an end and he ceased to be a member of the Court, an application was made to Mr. Justice Teunon for a review of the judgment delivered by him and Mr. Justice Smither, and he dealt with that application; and then an appeal was filed against the decision of Mr. Justice Teunon under section 15 of the Letters Patent. That appeal came on for hearing before Mr. Justice Woodroffe and Mr. Justice Mookerjee who came to the conclusion that no appeal lay. They referred to the Code, and amongst other reasons they referred to the fact that if they had heard the appeal from Mr. Justice Teunon they would in effect be hearing an appeal from a decision of two Judges, because after Mr. Justice Smither had ceased to be a member of the Court. Mr. Justice Teunon represented the Court which had been constituted by the two Judges, and, therefore, to hear an appeal from Mr. Justice Teunon would be to hear an appeal from the two Judges, which, of course, they could not. If I may say so, I entirely agree with the judgment of Mr. Justice Woodroffe and Mr. Justice Mookerjee, but that judgment does not cover the present cases, because Mr. Justice Chapman did not cease to be a member of this Court, nor was he in the words of the rule "precluded by absence or other cause for a period of six months next after the application from considering the decree to which the application referred"—he was merely away on a month's leave prior to the usual long vacation and, the applications, if they had been postponed, could have been heard by Mr. Justice Holmwood and Mr. Justice Chapman after the expiration of the long vacation in the beginning of the next term. In my judgment, therefore, Mr. Justice Holmwood, when he heard the applications and refused them, was acting without jurisdiction. I ought to have mentioned that the rule which applies to this matter is rule 5 of Order XLVII.

*See 41 Ind. Cas. 183.—Ed.

Now, if Mr. Justice Holmwood acted without jurisdiction, the next question which arises is whether there is a right of appeal from his judgment. If there was any doubt, the matter has been set at rest by the judgment of the Privy Council in the case of Hurrish Chunder Chowdhry v. Kali Sunderi Debi (1), the passage which is material being at page 493. There His Lordship Sir R. P. Collier said: "Their Lordships do not think that Mr. Justice Pontifex can be properly treated as having usurped jurisdiction; but if he had, this would have been a valid ground of appeal," and they are unable to agree with the Chief Justice that if a Judge of the High Court makes an order under a misapprehension of the extent of his jurisdiction, the High Court have no power by appeal, or otherwise, in setting right such a miscarriage of justice." Acting on that judgment I am of opinion that we must hear the appeals, even though the learned Vakil in one of the cases brought to our attention—and quite properly brought to our attention—the judgment of Mr. Justice Woodroffe and Mr. Justice Mookerjee, to which I have alluded, and even though he seemed to have thought that his case was covered by that judgment. We must treat both the cases alike, and we will hear both the appeals.

We, therefore, direct that notices of the appeals be served on the respondents and that Rules be issued on them to show cause why the applications for review should not be granted.

Both the appeals and the review Rules will come for hearing to the same Court at the same time, and they will be heard by the Court taking the Letters Patent Appeals.

CHATTERJEA, J.—I agree.

The Letters Patent Appeal and the Rule came on for hearing before the Court taking the Letters Patent Appeals.

Babu Khitish Chandra Sen, for the Appellant.—The second appeal was heard under Order XLI, rule 11, of the Civil Procedure Code by two Judges of this Hon'ble Court, viz., Mr. Justice Holmwood and Mr. Justice Chapman, and was dismissed. Then there was an application for review of judgment which was heard and decided by Mr. Justice Holmwood alone, as Mr. Justice Chapman was then absent on leave. Mr. Justice Holmwood dismissed the application for review of judgment. The present Letters Patent Appeal has been preferred against the decision of Mr. Justice Holmwood dismissing the application for review of judgment, on the ground that Mr. Justice Holmwood acted without jurisdiction in hearing the application and dismissing it. The case in Kailash Chandra Somaddar v. Revati Mohan Roy (2) does not apply to this case as in that case the circumstances were somewhat different. As regards the competency of this appeal from the judgment of Mr. Justice Holmwood, reference may be made to the case of Hurish Chunder Chowdhry v. Kali Sunderi Debi (1).

(1) 9 C. 482 at p. 493; 10 I. A. 4; 12 C. L. R. 511; 7 Ind. Jur. 161; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 406; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 970 (P. C.).

(2) 41 Ind. Cas. 183; 25 C. L. J. 360; 21 C.W.N. 652.

[WALMSLEY, J.—When the applications were heard by Mr. Justice Holmwood alone did you object to his jurisdiction so to do?]

No. But that would not, I submit, give jurisdiction if he had no jurisdiction under the Act.

Babu Dhirendra Lal Kastgir, appeared for the Respondents but said he had no instructions).

JUDGMENT.

This Letters Patent Appeal is decreed, the judgment of Mr. Justice Holmwood on the application for review is set aside, the Rule is made absolute and the appeal from the appellate decree is admitted.

Let the record be sent for and the usual notices be issued.

Appeal decreed.

— —

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 477 OF 1916.

September 24, 1917.

Present:—Sir Henry Stanyon, KT., J. C.

Musammat KALWA—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

BHAWAR SINGH AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS NOS. 1 AND 2—RESPONDENTS.

C. P. Tenancy Act (XI of 1898), s. 46—Suit for possession of occupancy tenancy by heir—Civil Court, jurisdiction of, whether barred—Gift of occupancy holding by widow, validity of—Testamentary direction for disposal of occupancy holding, whether can be given by occupancy tenant—Occupancy tenancy, devolution of—One of several tenants, whether can take up entire holding.

In a suit for possession of an occupancy holding in the Civil Court on the ground that it devolved on the plaintiff after the death of the former holder, her mother, the defendant resisted the claim on the ground that as the land was gifted to him by a registered deed by the plaintiff's mother the suit was barred by the Central Provinces Tenancy Act:

Held, (1) that as the suit was one for possession of an occupancy tenancy and not a suit to set aside an alienation made by the former tenant in contravention of the provisions of the Tenancy Act, the Civil Court had jurisdiction to entertain the suit. [p. 1002, col. 1.]

(2) that irrespective of the provisions of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act the deed of gift regarded as an attempt to alienate anything more than the life-interest of a Hindu widow was invalid. [p. 1002, col. 2.]

An occupancy tenant in the Central Provinces cannot leave any testamentary direction for the disposal of his tenant right by his widow after his death. [p. 1002, col. 2.]

In the absence of legal necessity a Hindu widow cannot alienate more than her life-interest merely because to do so would be to give effect to some wish, indicated but not carried into effect, by her husband during his lifetime. [p. 1002, col. 2.]

On the death of an occupancy tenant the occupancy right devolves by operation of law on all the heirs as co-tenants and any one of them willing to do so can take up the whole tenancy in the event of the other heirs being unwilling to do so. [p. 1003, col. 1.]

Appeal from the decree of the Court of the District Judge, Raipur, dated the 29th July 1916, in Appeal No. 178 of 1916.

Mr. D. T. Mangalmurti, for the Appellant.

Mr. J. C. Ghosh, for the Respondent No. 1.

JUDGMENT.—It is necessary to state the facts of this case. One Badri Lodhi was a tenant of an occupancy holding. He died some three years before the suit, leaving him surviving a widow Durpat, three daughters (1) Kalwa, (2) Kelhi and (3) Mathura, and a nephew Bhawarsingh, the son of his younger brother Gopy Lodhi. During his lifetime Badri executed a document purporting to gift some of his holding to his nephew but the document was never registered or acted on. After Badri's death the tenancy devolved on his widow Durpat. On the 21st December 1912, Durpat executed a deed of gift in favour of Bhawarsingh in respect of 12 of the occupancy fields and a house. This deed (Exhibit D1) does not purport to transfer anything except Durpat's right, title and interest in the gifted property. Durpart died in or about October 1914. On the 28th July 1915, Musammat Kalwa, one of the daughters of Badri, sued Bhawarsingh for possession of the property included in Durpat's gift. Her two sisters being unwilling to join in the suit as plaintiffs were impleaded as defendants. Musammat Mathura died soon after, and as her legal representatives in the estate of Badri were her two sisters her name was expunged from the record without any other person being substituted. Kelhi stated that she had no objection to the disposition made by her father. The suit, therefore, resolved itself into a contest between the plaintiff and Bhawarsingh. The defendant Bhawarsingh pleaded that he had become re-united with his uncle and was entitled to the fields gifted to him by survivorship. He also relied upon the unregistered document executed by Badri and the registered deed of gift executed by Durpat. The first Court found for the plaintiff and gave her a decree. The lower Appellate Court has reversed that decree and dismissed the plaintiff's suit with costs. The plaintiff has, therefore, made this second appeal.

I have no doubt whatever that the decision of the lower Appellate Court is wrong. It was urged before the Judge that this suit was barred by the Central Provinces Tenancy Act, as being a suit to set aside an alienation made by Durpat in contravention of the provisions of section 46 of the Tenancy Act, and the case of Ganeshdas v. Shankar (1) was cited in support of that contention. The lower Appellate Court rightly found on the pleadings that the ruling cited had no application. No doubt Durpat made an alienation of her own interest in the occupancy holding in contravention of section 46 of the Tenancy Act and if the plaintiff, as one of the persons upon whom the tenancy would devolve on the death of Durpat, had sought to set aside Durpat's alienation of her own tenant right, the ruling would have been applicable and the Civil Court would have had no jurisdiction. But the suit is not one to set aside the alienation by Durpat. It is a suit for the possession of an occupancy right which, according to the Tenancy Act, devolved upon the plaintiff and her sisters on the death of Durpat. It is the defendant who sets up Durpat's gift and the plaintiff's reply is that the gift has been exhausted by the determination of the subject-matter of it, viz., the life-interest of Durpat. Regarded as an attempt to alienate anything more than that life interest the deed of gift is invalid irrespective of the provisions of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act, and, therefore, that enactment is not called into operation.

But after having gone right up to this point, the lower Appellate Court went completely off the rails and expounded the so-called law which is without foundation or authority. It held the deed of gift of an occupancy holding made by the widow to be binding upon the person on whom the holding would devolve under the Tenancy Act, because the gift was made by Durpat, (in the Judge's own words) "in order to complete the wish of her husband." This decision is unsustainable from every point of view. In the first place it was never pleaded that the widow executed the gift under the authority, or in furtherance of any wish, of her husband; nor does the deed itself contain any recital of such an authority or purpose. Therefore, the decision of the learned District Judge is of a case neither pleaded nor put in issue nor proved. The mere fact that during his lifetime Badri made an abortive attempt to gift certain property to his nephew raises no presumption that he left authority behind to his widow to complete his intention. Next, it is manifest that an occupancy tenant cannot leave any testamentary direction for disposal of his tenant right in the Central Provinces by his widow after his death. Finally, it is an entirely novel proposition that, in the absence of legal necessity, a Hindu widow can alienate more than her life-interest merely because to do so would give effect to some wish indicated, but not carried into effect, by her husband during his lifetime.

In this second appeal the learned Advocate for the respondent has felt the difficulty of supporting the obviously unsound view of the law adopted by the lower Appellate Court, and he attempted to sustain the verdict in favour of his client by putting forward a number of pleas which were neither pleaded nor put in issue; such as that the gift was for legal necessity or for the securing of religious benefit to Badri, or was part of a family arrangement made by Badri. I give no consideration to these irrelevant pleas.

(1) 13 Ind. Cas. 909; 8 N. L. R. 22.

An attempt was also made, for the first time before me, to set up a jus tertii, viz., that of the plaintiff's sister Musammat Kelhi; but I am clear that the defendant Bhawarsingh cannot resist the suit on that ground. On the death of Musammat Durpat the occupancy tenant right devolved by operation of law upon the three daughters as co-tenants. Any one of those three daughters willing to do so can take up the whole tenancy in the event of her sisters being unwilling to do so. The decree of the first Court was perfectly correct, and the lower Appellate Court was not justified in interfering with it.

I, therefore, allow this appeal. I reverse the decree of lower Appellate Court and restore the decree of the first Court. The defendant Bhawarsingh must pay the costs of the plaintiff-appellant in both the Appellate Courts.

Appeal allowed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORDER No. 577 OF 1915.

January 7, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Teunon and Mr. Justice Newbould.

GOPI NATH MONDAL—APPELLANT

versus

ASHUTOSH GHOSE, RECEIVER TO THE ESTATE OF NILRATAN MONDAL, AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Mortgage—Priority—Property belonging to five brothers mortgaged by four of them—Mortgagees, rights of, on partition.

A property belonging to five brothers, one of whom was a minor and was represented by his duly appointed guardian, the eldest of the four adult brothers, was mortgaged to N., and then it was mortgaged by the four adult brothers to G. On the adjudication of the four adult brothers as insolvents the Receiver in insolvency got the joint properties partitioned and the mortgaged property was allotted to the four adult brothers, which was then sold by the Receiver at the instance of a prior mortgagee who was paid off out of the sale-proceeds:

Held, that N. was entitled to the whole of the balance of the sale-proceeds in priority to G. as he had not lost the priority to the extent of the 1/5th share which belonged to the minor brother by reason of the partition and sale of the property. [p. 1004, col. 2.]

Appeal against the order of the Additional District Judge, 24-Pergannahs, dated the 28th of September 1915.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

Sir Rash Behary Ghose (with him Babus Mohendranath Ray and Panchanon Ghose), for the Appellant, contended that having regard to the facts and circumstances of the case the Court below was wrong in allowing the prior mortgagee to appropriate the whole of the proceeds of the sale held by the Receiver in insolvency in satisfaction of the whole of his dues under the mortgage, in preference to the appellant who was a subsequent mortgagee and who had been allowed to appropriate in part satisfaction of his mortgage the small balance that was left after paying off the prior mortgagee in full. The insolvent mortgagors could not, by any admission on their part, affect the rights of the appellant whose case was that Nripendra, the prior mortgagee, was entitled only to the extent of 4/5th share of his dues under the mortgage, because he released the share of the fifth brother. He could not, however, release that share from liability without allowing a proportionate abatement of the money due under his security.

Babu Provash Chandra Mitter (with him Babus Jogesh Chandra Bose and Bhupendra Nath Bose), for the Respondents.—There was a mortgage by the five brothers, and those five brothers were liable under the mortgage. In the insolvency proceedings four out of the five brothers were declared insolvent. Nripendra's mortgage was previous to the present appellant's mortgage and, therefore, Nripendra was entitled to have his dues under the mortgage satisfied in full before the appellant.

[TEUNON, J.—To whom was the property sold allotted?]

To the four brothers.

TEUNON, J.—Nripendra accepted that allotment.]

He was not a party to the partition proceedings.

In the insolvent proceedings both Nripendra's and Gopi's names and their respective dues appear, but Gopi did not ever object that Nripendra, whose mortgage was prior to his, was not entitled to have his dues satisfied in full. Sections 81 and 82 of the Transfer of Property Act which deal with the question of marshalling and contribution do not apply to this case, and so the appellant's case must fail.

[TEUNON, J.—Nripendra is said to have released the minor's share in the property allotted to the four brothers and sold by the Receiver in insolvency.]

There is nothing on the record to show that.

Sir Rash Behary Ghosh in reply.

JUDGMENT.—In this case it appears that four brothers mortgaged their share in certain properties to one Rai N. N. Sahu Bahadur. On the 4th day of December 1911 they and a fifth brother, a minor represented by his duly appointed guardian the eldest of the four adult brothers, executed a second mortgage of the same properties in favour of one Nripendra Nath Sahu. The four adult brothers next executed a third mortgage in favour of one Gopi Nath Mondal.

On the 10th of May 1912 the four adult brothers were adjudicated insolvent and on the 27th of June of that year a Receiver of their properties was appointed.

It thus became necessary to effect a partition between the five brothers, and by the decree in the partition suit dated 4th January 1913 the three properties now in question were allotted to the four adult brothers. Next followed a sale by the Receiver at the instance of the 1st mortgagee on the 22nd and 23rd April 1913. The properties were sold free of incumbrances and, with a certain amount (Rs. 2,002) due or realised from the minor brother as owelty money, fetched a sum of Rs. 25,320. Out of this sum Rs. 7,846 odd was paid to the 1st mortgagee, and the only question argued in this appeal is whether the 2nd mortgagee Nripendra is entitled to priority over the 3rd mortgagee Gopi in respect of the whole of the balance Rs. 17,473 odd or in respect only of 4/5ths of the same.

It is argued that by reason of the partition and by the sale of these properties as the sole property of the four insolvent adult brothers, Nripendra the 2nd mortgagee has released or exonerated the share of the fifth brother, and to the extent of the 1/5th which that share was liable to contribute to the debt secured by Nripendra's mortgage has, therefore, lost priority over the 3rd mortgagee.

We are unable to accede to this contention.

It does not appear that the partition or the sale proceedings were at the instance of the 2nd mortgagee. It is exceedingly doubtful whether any liability under the 2nd mortgage, executed ostensibly on his behalf by the eldest brother, could be fastened upon the minor. In any case it is not disputed that the four adult brothers are jointly and severally liable to pay the whole debt due under that mortgage, and it cannot, we think, be said that by demanding payment out of the surplus sale-proceeds now in the hands of the Receiver the 2nd mortgagee has done anything which can be appropriately described as a relinquishment or release of any portion of the property mortgaged to him.

In this view this appeal fails, but we should further point out that the whole question raised appears to be academic.

Out of the balance Rs. 17,473 odd, payment of a sum of Rs. 13,221 odd has been made or directed in favour of the 2nd mortgagee in full satisfaction of the mortgage debt. This is less than 4/5ths of the balance.

The appeal is dismissed with costs. We assess the hearing fee at five gold mohurs.

The appeal having been dismissed, the connected Rule No. 647 of 1917 is discharged.

Out of the hearing fee assessed one gold mohur will be given to the Receiver and four gold mohurs to the respondent Nripendra Nath Sahu, who will also have the costs incurred by him in the preparation of the paper book. Let the record be sent down at once.

Appeal dismissed.

GOKUL v. MOHRI BIBI.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 51 OF 1916.

January 18, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Piggott and Mr. Justice Rafique.

GOKUL—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

MOHRI BIBI—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 58—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 11, scope of—Objection, dismissal of, without investigation—Suit to establish right, limitation for—Non-production of evidence, effect of—Inquiry into objection, materials for.

An objection under Order XXI, rule 58, of the Civil Procedure Code, if dismissed without investigation, takes the case of the objector out of the operation of the one year's rule of limitation prescribed by Article 11, Schedule I, of the Limitation Act for the establishment of his right by a suit. [p. 1006, col. 2; p. 1007, col. 1.]

The only order under Order XXI, rule 58, upon which the character of finality is impressed, is an order made upon enquiry. It does not follow, however, that merely because the claimant does not advance evidence or is absent, there are no materials before the Court to enable it to inquire into the matter [p 1007, col. 1.]

Where, therefore, plaintiff made an objection under Order XXI, rule 58, the correctness of which was disputed by the opposite party, and no evidence having been produced to make out the truth of the claim, the Court dismissed the objection and the plaintiff brought a suit to establish his right more than a year after the date of the order:

Held, that though the plaintiff produced no evidence in support of his objection, it did not follow that there was no material on the record to enable the Judge to dispose of the objections, which could not, therefore, be said to have been decided without investigation and that as the plaintiff failed to bring a suit to establish his right within one year from the date of the order, his claim was barred under Article 11, Schedule I of the Limitation Act. [p. 1007, col. 1.]

Second appeal from a decree of the Subordinate Judge, Mirzapur.

Mr. S. A. Haidar, for the Appellant.

Mr. Surendra Nath Sen, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The facts which have given rise to this appeal are as follows :—

There were three brothers, Kauleshar, Chandu and Jageshar, who owned a fixed-rate holding of seven bighas and five biswas. According to the plaint the three brothers separated and the holding was privately divided amongst them. On the 9th of January 1900, the name of Jageshar was entered in respect of two bighas and five biswas and the rest, five bighas, stood in the name of the two brothers, Kauleshar and Chandu. Kauleshar died leaving him surviving his son, Gokul. Chandu died leaving him surviving a widow only and no issue. One Basant Lal obtained a simple money-decree against Jageshar, one of the brothers mentioned above, and against Govind, a third party. In execution of his decree Basant Lal attached the whole of the holding, namely, the fixed-rate holding of seven bighas and five biswas. At the time of the attachment the two widows of Kauleshar and Chandu were alive, as also the son of Kauleshar, called Gokul, who was a minor at the time. On the 27th of March 1901, Gokul filed an objection through his mother as guardian, objecting to the attachment, presumably on the ground that his father and uncle, Chandu, were separate from Jageshar and their property was not liable to sale and attachment in the decree of Basant. On the 5th of June 1901, the date fixed for hearing the objections, an application was presented to the Court on behalf of the guardian of the minor praying for an adjournment, on the ground that the information of the date of hearing had reached the guardian too late to take steps for production of evidence. The learned Subordinate Judge rejected the application for adjournment and proceeded to dispose of the objections. The order, he made on the objections, is as follows :—" This is an objection under section 278 of the Civil Procedure Code. The correctness of it is disputed by the defendants. The objector has produced no evidence to make out the truth of his claim and it is dismissed with costs." After the rejection of the objection the entire holding of seven bighas and five biswas was put up to auction and purchased by Basant Lal, the decree-holder. On the 21st of June 1902, the Amin, who was deputed to deliver possession to the purchaser, reported that the widows of Kauleshar and Chandu had obstructed him in his duties. The purchaser having taken no steps, his application for delivery of possession was rejected on the 5th of July 1902. On the 19th of July 1903, he again applied for delivery of possession and succeeded in getting it on the 23rd of February 1904. On the 20th of June 1914, Gokul, the plaintiff-appellant, instituted the suit out of which this appeal has arisen, for possession of five bighas of the fixed-rate holding on the allegation that the said land was not liable to attachment and sale in execution of the decree of Basant Lal against Jageshar. Gokal further stated in his plaint that his father Kauleshar and his two uncles Jageshar and Chandu had separated long prior to the decree of Basant and had divided the holding equally amongst themselves. After the separation each brother was in possession of his own share. Basant Lal, the decree-holder, could only sell the share of Jageshar. At the time of the execution of the decree of Basant Lal he, the plaintiff, was a minor and was entitled to object as regards the share of the holding that belonged to his father only. Chandu's widow, Musammat Katwari, was alive at the time of the attachment and the sale of the holding. She died some years after. On her death the share of Chandu came to the plaintiff as the reversionary heir. He attained majority in June 1912, hence the suit was brought for recovery of possession of that portion of the holding which belonged to his father and his uncle, Chandu. The claim was resisted on various pleas. It was urged on behalf of the defendant that the three brothers were joint and had never separated and that the decree against Jageshar had been passed in the capacity of the karta of the family. It was, therefore, binding on all the three brothers and their legal representatives. The plea of limitation was urged in respect of the entire claim on the basis of the plaintiff's objections, dated the 27th of May 1901. The learned Munsif, in whose Court the suit was filed, held that the three brothers were joint and therefore the decree of Basant Lal was binding on the plaintiff. He further found that the objections, dated the 27th of May 1901, made by the plaintiff through his mother related to the whole of five bighas, the alleged share of Chandu and Kauleshar, and the objections having been dismissed and the suit having been brought more than one year after the dismissal, the present claim was barred under Article 11 of Schedule I of the Limitation Act. The plaintiff preferred an appeal to the District Judge, who disagreed with the First Court as to the status of the family of the three brothers but agreed with it as to the plea of limitation. The learned District Judge held that the three brothers were separate but that the claim was obviously barred under Article 11 of Schedule I of the Limitation Act.

The plaintiff in his second appeal to this Court advances two contentions. He says that his claim is not barred under Article 11 of Schedule I of the Limitation Act, inasmuch as his objection was dismissed without any investigation and, secondly, in any case his claim with regard to 2 bighas 10 biswas of the holding, which he inherited from his uncle, Chandu, after the death of the latter's widow, cannot be said to be barred by limitation as the lady died after the dismissal of the objections and she had taken no objection to the attachment and sale of the holding. The second contention may be dismissed in a few words. There is a distinct finding of the learned Munsif that the objections of the plaintiff related to 5 bighas of the holding, that is, the share of his, i.e., plaintiff's father and uncle. The plaintiff took no objection to this finding in his appeal to the District Judge. There is nothing on the record to make us come to a different conclusion and hold that the objections related only to the share of Kauleshar. In the plaint itself the plaintiff does not mention the fact of having made an objection in 1901 and there does not seem to be any replication or any statement by him in reply to the written statement that his claim was barred because it was brought a year after the order of the 5th of June 1901. In support of the first contention a number of cases have been cited by the learned Counsel for the plaintiff-appellant. The following cases have been relied upon by the plaintiff, namely, Kullar Singh v. Toril Mahton (1), Kunj Behari Lal v. Kandh Prashad Narain Singh (2), Sarat Chandra Bisu v. Tarini Prasad Pal Chowdhry (3), Sarala Subba Rau v. Kamsala Timmayya (4) and Sajan Ram v. Ram Rattan (5). According to these cases an objection, made under section 278 of the old Code of Civil Procedure, corresponding to Order XXI, rule 58 of the present Code,

(1) 1 C. W. N. 24.
(2) 6 C. L. J. 362.
(3) 34 C. 491; 11 C. W. N. 487.
(4) 31 M. 5; 17 M. L. J. 554; 3 M. L. T. 106.
(5) 87 P. R. 1904; 119 P. L. R. 1904.

if dismissed without investigation, would take the case of the objector out of the operation of one year's rule of limitation. But the question is, what does the word "investigation" mean? There are cases which go to show that the circumstances under which the objections of the plaintiff were disposed of were not such as to warrant the conclusion that they were decided without investigation, vide Rahim Bux v. Abdul Kader (6), Shagun Chand v. Shibbi (7) and Chandi Prasad v. Nand Kishore (8). We would also refer to Lachmi Narain v. Martindell (9), for the principle according to which the limitation of one year should be enforced. Most of the case-law has been discussed by Mr. Justice Mookerji in the case of Kunj Behari Lal v. Kandh Prashad Narain Singh (2). After the consideration of the case-law the learned Judge concludes thus:—"It is manifest, therefore, from the language of the Code itself, that the only order upon which the character of finality is impressed is an order made upon enquiry." He also remarks: "It does not follow, however, that merely because the claimant does not advance evidence or is absent, there are no materials before the Court to enable it to enquire into the matter." In the present case the learned Subordinate Judge dismissed the objections of the plaintiff, not in default, nor without any investigation. It is true that the plaintiff produced no evidence in support of his objections but it does not follow that there was no material on the record to enable the Judge to dispose of the objections. We think that the cases relied upon by the plaintiff-appellant are distinguishable from the case before us.

The appeal, therefore, fails and is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(6) 32 C. 537.
(7) 10 Ind. Cas. 401; 8 A. L. J. 626.
(8) 20 Ind. Cas. 369.
(9) 19 A. 253; A. W. N. (1897) 60; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 166 (F. B.).

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL RULE No. 65 OF 1917.

January 25, 1918.

Present :—Mr. Justice Richardson and Mr. Justice Walmsley.

KAMALA KANTA SEN—CLAIMANT—PETITIONER

versus

DURGA KUMAR SEN AND OTHERS—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, rr. 58 59, 60—Claim proceedings—Order allowing claim conditionally, validity of—Revision.

A Court has no jurisdiction to make an order allowing a claim preferred under Order XXI, rule 58, Civil Procedure Code, to a property attached in execution of a decree, conditional on the claimant paying a certain sum to the decree-holder, on the ground that in the conveyance by which the claimant purchased the property there was an undertaking on his part to pay that sum to the decree-holder as part of the consideration. If such a claimant is in possession of the property on his own account under title of a conveyance executed in his favour by the judgment-debtor, his claim should be allowed and allowed unconditionally. [p. 1003, cols. 1 & 2.]

Rule against the order of the Sub-Judge, 1st Court, Chittagong.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

Babu Charu Chandra Sen, for the Petitioner.—The Court below was not entitled and had no jurisdiction to pass an order conditionally allowing the claim. A conditional order is bad in law. The claimant petitioner purchased the property before the attachment and is in possession since the purchase and he adduced evidence under Order XXI, rule 59, Civil Procedure Code, which has been accepted. The property ought to have been released from attachment under Order XXI, rule 60, Civil Procedure Code. The question whether he gave an undertaking by his sale-deed to pay off the decree-holder or whether this undertaking is binding upon him or whether he is liable to pay this debt because he has agreed with the judgment-debtor, cannot be gone into in this proceeding, which is a summary one. I rely on Sheoraj Nandan Singh v. Gopal Suran Narain Singh (1) and Manmohiney Dassee v. Radha Kristo Dass (2).

Babu Khitish Chandra Sen, for the Opposite Party.—The claimant is bound by his under-

(1) 18 C. 290; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 193.
(2) 29 C. 543.

taking and is a mere trustee in respect of the money agreed to be paid and for the ends of justice the conditional order can be passed. No application lies under section 115 of the Code; he has got a remedy open to him by a suit under Order XXI, rule 63, Civil Procedure Code.

JUDGMENT.

RICHARDSON, J.—The petitioner in this Rule preferred a claim under Order XXI, rule 58, Code of Civil Procedure, in respect of a property which had been attached by the opposite party in execution of a decree. The petitioner's plea was that he had purchased this property from the judgment-debtor under the decree prior to the attachment and was in possession of the property on his own account. The learned Subordinate Judge in the Court below states in his order under appeal that the petitioner has proved his Kobala. There is, however, no clear finding in the order whether the petitioner is or is not in possession of the property on his own account. On the strength of the terms on which the property was purchased as evidenced by the conveyance, the learned Subordinate Judge has made a conditional order. It appears from the conveyance that as part of the consideration the petitioner gave an undertaking to the vendor to pay the sum of Rs. 2,500 on account of the Execution Case No. 1392 of the Court of the First Munsif of Chittagong. Execution Case No. 1392 was pending at the date of the conveyance and execution was sought thereby of the decree which is now again under execution, the present case being No. 1651 of 1916. As I have said, on the strength of that undertaking the learned Subordinate Judge has allowed the petitioner's claim conditionally, the directions are that if the petitioner pays Rs. 2,500 within ten days the property claimed will be released from the attachment and if that amount is not paid the claim is to stand rejected and the property sold for the sum of Rs. 2,500 or any larger sum it may fetch. Without expressing any opinion as to the precise meaning or effect of the conveyance, I am of opinion that the learned Subordinate Judge on the facts, so far as he has found them, was not entitled and had no jurisdiction to make any such conditional order. The transaction on which the petitioner's claim is based bears a strong resemblance to the transaction which this Court had before it in the case of Sheoraj Nandan Singh v. Gopal Suran Narain Singh (1) and the observations of Sir Comer Petheram, C. J., in that case are pertinent in the present connection. The learned Chief Justice said: "If the object of the decree-holder is to get rid of the effect of that transaction by showing that it is not binding upon him under section 53 of the Transfer of Property Act, or by contending that notwithstanding that transaction the applicant is liable to pay this debt because he has agreed with the judgment-debtor to pay that for her, he must be made liable to pay it in some other proceeding much more elaborate than this one." These observations are strictly applicable in the present case, if the petitioner is in possession of the property on his own account. If he is not in possession on his own account other consideration will, no doubt, arise. The order in the mode in which it was made is clearly bad, as the learned Subordinate Judge has not determined the crucial question whether the petitioner is in possession on his own account or is in some way in possession on account of the judgment-debtor or the representative of the judgment-debtor. The order, in my opinion, must be set aside in its entirety and the case remitted to the Subordinate Judge to be re-heard with reference to the observations I have made. If the learned Subordinate Judge finds on the materials on the record that the petitioner is in possession on his own account under title of the conveyance executed in his favour by the original judgment-debtor, the claim should be allowed and allowed unconditionally; otherwise the learned Subordinate Judge will make such order as he thinks fit. To this extent the Rule is made absolute. The costs of this Rule will abide the result. We assess the hearing fee in this Court at three gold mohurs.

WALMSLEY, J.—I agree.

Rule made absolute.

END OF VOLUME XLIV.

GENERAL INDEX

VOLUME XLIV—1918.

—— -o:-O-:o-: ——

Abwab—Peshkash, whether abwab—Antiquity and purpose of payment, whether ground for inferring legitimate origin—Jalamutha and Majnamutha estates in Midnapore.

The levy of peshkash by the proprietors of the two estates known as Jalamutha and Majnamutha in the District of Midnapore from the nisfidars (holders of resumed lakheraj lands) and lakherajdars of those estates is not illegal, as peshkash cannot be regarded as an imposition in the nature of an abwab but a right to it is an interest in the land to which a title may be made out by prescription.

From the peculiar situation and character of the lands of the estates and the antiquity and purpose of the payment of peshkash, it may be inferred that a right to levy it had a legitimate contractual foundation at its inception. C LAKSHMI NARAYAN ROY v. SECRETARY OF STATE, 22 C. W. N. 824 497

Acts-General.

Act 1843—XIX. See REGISTRATION ACT.
—— 1850—XXI. See CASTE DISABILITIES REMOVAL ACT.
—— 1856—XV. See HINDU WIDOWS' RE-MARRIAGE ACT.
—— 1855—XIV. See LIMITATION ACT.
—— 1860—XLV. See PENAL CODE.
—— 1870—VII. See COURT FEES ACT.
—— 1871—I. See CATTLE TRESPASS ACT.
—— 1871—IX. See LIMITATION ACT.
—— 1872—I. See EVIDENCE ACT.
—— 1872—IX. See CONTRACT ACT.
—— 1875—IX. See MAJORITY ACT.
—— 1877—I. See SPECIFIC RELIEF ACT.
—— 1878—I. See OPIUM ACT.
—— 1878—XI. See ARMS ACT.
—— 1879—XVIII. See LEGAL PRACTITIONERS ACT.
—— 1881—V. See PROBATE AND ADMINISTRATION ACT.
—— 1881—XXVI. See NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS ACT.
—— 1882—IV. See TRANSFER OF PROPERTY ACT.
—— 1882—V. See EASEMENTS ACT.
—— 1882—XIV. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE.
—— 1887—IX. See PROVINCIAL SMALL CAUSES COURTS ACT.
—— 1889—VII. See SUCCESSION CERTIFICATE ACT.
—— 1890—VIII. See GUARDIANS AND WARDS ACT.
—— 1890—IX. See RAILWAYS ACT.
—— 1894—I. See LAND ACQUISITION ACT.
—— 1897—X. See GENERAL CLAUSES ACT.

Acts-General—concld.

Act 1898—V. See CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE.
—— 1899—II. See STAMP ACT.
—— 1899—IX. See ARBITRATION ACT.
—— 1907—III. See PROVINCIAL INSOLVENCY ACT.
—— 1908—V. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE.
—— 1908—IX. See LIMITATION ACT.
—— 1908—XVI. See REGISTRATION ACT.
—— 1909—III. See PRESIDENCY TOWNS INSOLVENCY ACT.
—— 1910—I. See PRESS ACT.
—— 1912—II. See CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETIES ACT.
—— 1913—VII. See COMPANIES ACT.
—— 1915—IV. See DEFENCE OF INDIA (CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT) ACT.

Acts—(Local)—Bengal.

—— 1859—XI. See BENGAL LAND REVENUE SALES ACT.
—— 1880—IX. See BENGAL CESS ACT.
—— 1885—VIII. See BENGAL TENANCY ACT.
—— 1899—III. See CALCUTTA MUNICIPAL ACT.
—— 1907—I. See BENGAL AMENDING ACT.
—— 1908—VI. See CHOTA NAGPUR TENANCY ACT.
—— 1911—V. See CALCUTTA IMPROVEMENT ACT.

Acts—(Local)—Bihar and Orissa.

—— 1913—II. See ORISSA TENANCY ACT.
—— 1915—II. See BIHAR AND ORISSA EXCISE ACT.

Acts—(Local)—Bombay.

—— 1865—I. See BOMBAY SURVEY AND SETTLEMENT ACT.
—— 1866—XII. See SIND COURTS ACT.
—— 1879—V. See BOMBAY LAND REVENUE CODE.
—— 1890—IV. See BOMBAY DISTRICT POLICE ACT.
—— 1901—III. See BOMBAY DISTRICT MUNICIPAL ACT.

Acts—(Local)—Burma.

—— 1898—III. See BURMA MUNICIPAL ACT.
—— 1902—IV. See BURMA FOREST ACT.

Acts—(Local)—C. P.

—— 1875—XX. See C. P. LAWS ACT.
—— 1881—XVIII. See C. P. LAND REVENUE ACT.
—— 1898—XI. See C. P. TENANCY ACT.
—— 1904—II. See C. P. COURTS ACT.

Acts—(Local)—Madras.

—— 1873—III. See MADRAS CIVIL COURTS ACT.
—— 1884—IV. See MADRAS DISTRICT MUNICIPALITIES ACT.

Acts—(Local)—Madras—contd.

Act 1889—III. See MADRAS TOWN NUISANCES ACT.
—— 1900—I. See MALABAR COMPENSATION FOR TENANTS' IMPROVEMENTS ACT.
—— 1902—I. See MADRAS COURT OF WARDS ACT.
—— 1908—I. See MADRAS ESTATES LAND ACT.

Acts—(Local)—Punjab.

—— 1887—XVI. See PUNJAB TENANCY ACT.
—— 1887—XVII. See PUNJAB LAND REVENUE ACT.
—— 1900—XIII. See PUNJAB ALIENATION OF LAND ACT.
—— 1911—III. See PUNJAB MUNICIPAL ACT.
—— 1913—II. See PUNJAB REDEMPTION OF MORTGAGES ACT.
—— 1914—III. See PUNJAB COURTS ACT.

Acts—(Local)—U. P.

—— 1869—I. See OUDH ESTATES ACT.
—— 1886—XXII. See OUDH RENT ACT.
—— 1901—II. See AGRA TENANCY ACT.
—— 1901—III. See U. P. LAND REVENUE ACT.
—— 1916—II. See U. P. MUNICIPALITIES ACT.

Regulations.

Reg. 1806—XVII. See REGULATION.
—— 1895—I. See KACHIN HILL TRIBES REGULATION.
—— 1896—I. See BURMA CIVIL COURTS REGULATION.

Statutes.

12 & 13 VIC., C. 96. See ADMIRALTY OFFENCES (COLONIAL) ACT.
24 & 25 VIC., C. 67. See COUNCILS ACT.
24 & 25 VIC., C. 104. See HIGH COURTS ACT.
57 & 58 VIC., C. 60. See MERCHANT SHIPPING ACT.
5 & 6 GEO. V., C. 61. See GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT.

Admiralty Offences (Colonial) Act (12 & 13 Vict., C. 96), s. 1—"Sea", meaning of.

The word "sea" in section 1 of the Admiralty Offences (Colonial) Act means only that part of the sea over which the Admiral or Admirals has or have jurisdiction, that is to say, territorial waters. B PUNJA GUNI v. EMPEROR, 20 BOM. L. R. 98; 19 CR. L. J. 337 449

Admission of party, effect of 447

Adverse entry in revenue records, effect of 912

Agency 813

Agra Tenancy Act (II of 1901), s. 10.

Section 10 of the Agra Tenancy Act fixes a maximum rent and there is nothing to prevent the parties concerned from contracting for the payment of a lower rate, or from coming to an understanding amongst themselves as to what the prevailing rates of rent are and what advantages the ex-proprietary tenant is likely to get under the section. Such an agreement is not enforceable in itself and cannot be sued upon as it stands. What is wanted is an order under section 10 (5) fixing the rent to be paid by the ex-proprietary tenant, but the law does not lay down that this order cannot lawfully be based upon an agreement come to by the parties, still less that in passing it the Collector must not take into account the terms of such an agreement. A JAHANGIRA v. KARRAR HUSAIN, 16 A. L. J. 212 513

Agra Tenancy Act—contd.

—— ss. 10, 20, 21—Ex-proprietary tenancy, relinquishment of, validity of—Mortgage of sir land—Covenant to put mortgagee in possession—Relinquishment, deed of, simultaneous, effect of.

The object of section 10 of the Agra Tenancy Act is that a right of occupancy should be secured and preserved to a proprietor who becomes by a transfer the ex-proprietor, whether he wishes it to be secured and preserved to him or not, and notwithstanding any agreement to the contrary between himself and the transferee.

If a covenant to relinquish the sir lands is part of a transaction of sale or of mortgage, then the agreement to surrender will be void and unenforceable, no matter what ingenious devices may be employed to give colour to it. If the Court is satisfied that there was first of all a transfer by way of sale or mortgage and that the transferee, having obtained the status of an ex-proprietary tenant, with full knowledge of that fact and of the rights preserved to him by the Statute, deliberately chooses, as a separate transaction, to relinquish his ex-proprietary tenancy into the hands of the new proprietor, or of the mortgagee in possession, then the law cannot go further in the way of protecting a reckless and imprudent man against the consequences of his own acts.

A Zemindar executed a usufructuary mortgage of a part of his sir lands for Rs. 8,000 and covenanted to put the mortgagee in actual cultivating possession of the land and not to assert his rights as an ex-proprietary tenant. By a deed of relinquishment executed on the same date the mortgagor purported to surrender or to relinquish in favour of the mortgagee, in return for a consideration of Rs. 1,000, his rights as an ex-proprietary tenant in the mortgaged lands. It was found that the mortgagee held a decree for Rs. 9,000 against the mortgagor, which was satisfied by the execution of the mortgage deed and the deed of relinquishment:

Held, that the transactions in the two deeds were in substance one transaction, and that the deed of relinquishment and the covenant to put the mortgagee in actual possession of the mortgaged land, being devices to evade the provisions of section 10 of the Agra Tenancy Act, were void and unenforceable. A MIR DAD KHAN v. RAMZAN KHAN, 16 A. L. J. 329 988

—— ss. 20, 21 988

—— ss. 20, 122—Transfer of occupancy holding, whether permissible—Tenancy acquired by one member of joint family—Profits thrown into common stock, effect of.

Where a tenancy is created in favour of one member of a joint Hindu family, his throwing of the profits derived from the tenancy into the common stock of the joint family does not change the tenancy from a tenancy in favour of that member to a tenancy in favour of the entire joint family inasmuch as if that were so, it would mean a transfer of the holding from that member to a body of persons, namely, the members of the joint family, in contravention of the provisions of section 20 of the Agra Tenancy Act.

The interest of a non-occupancy tenant or of an occupancy tenant under the Agra Tenancy Act is not transferable except under the restrictions laid down by section 20 of the Act. A KALLU v. SITAL, 16 A. L. J. 225 717

——— ss. 34, 199—Landlord and tenant—Mortgage of sir lands, before Act—Mortgagee, possession of—Equity of redemption, purchaser of, possession by, without landlord's consent—Question of title, determination of, by Civil Court—Revenue Court, ejectment by - Appeal, whether lies to District Judge.

Plaintiffs, as usufructuary mortgagees of certain sir lands, brought a suit in the Revenue Court for ejectment of the defendant, on the allegation that they were in possession of the lands under a mortgage existing before the passing of Act II of 1901 and that the defendant was a non-occupancy tenant of the same. The defendant, who had acquired a part of the equity of redemption of the mortgaged land, denied the relationship of landlord and tenant between himself and the plaintiffs. The Revenue Court referred the parties for the determination of the question of title to the Civil Court, which held that the plaintiffs were entitled to remain in exclusive possession as mortgagees and that defendant had acquired a share in the equity of redemption. In accordance with this the Revenue Court, holding that defendant was a non-occupancy tenant, ordered his ejectment. On the Commissioner's refusal to entertain the defendant's appeal, the latter appealed to the District Judge who rejected it, holding that the question of title had been finally and completely disposed of by the Civil Court in the civil suit:

Held, (1) that the District Judge was right in holding that no appeal lay to his Court;

(2) that the defendant had been rightly ejected by the Revenue Court.

Per Walsh, J.—The words "a person occupying land without the consent of the landlord" in section 34 of the Agra Tenancy Act mean one who enters into occupation without the express consent of the landlord or without any previous arrangement with him. A JAGARDEO SINGH v. ALI HAMMAD, 16 A. L. J. 249 919

——— s. 95 608

——— s. 122 717

——— s. 164—Profits, suit for, against lambardar —Interest, when allowable—Accounts, falsification of, effect of—Lambardar, liability of.

In a suit by a co-sharer against the lambardar for his share of the profits, the lambardar is liable to pay interest on the amount of profits awarded to the co-sharer, where it is found that the lambardar has falsified the accounts. O DORI LAL v. RAM CHARAN LAL, 4 O. L. J. 708 415

——— s. 164—Suit for profits—Profits, mode of calculation of—Sir and khudkasht, profits of.

If different co-sharers in a mahal are entitled to different portions of the mahal as their sir or khudkasht, each co-sharer would be entitled to the profits of his own sir and khudkasht and would not be obliged to account for those profits to the other co-sharers. On the other hand, if any co-sharer has in his hands and in his own cultivation an excess of land, over and above his proper share of sir and khudkasht, he must account for the excess. The share of each co-sharer need not necessarily be identical in area, because a larger share of inferior land might be given to one co-sharer where the others have land of superior quality. If some co-sharers neglect to cultivate their shares of sir and khudkasht, they are not entitled to call upon the other co-sharers to account for the profits of their sir or khudkasht unless the latter are cultivating an area in excess of their shares. A ANGAD SINGH v. ZORAWAR SINGH, 16 A. L. J. 146 542 ——— ss. 177, 198—Ejectment, suit for—Tenant denying plaintiff's proprietary title—Appeal, forum of.

In a suit for ejectment in the Court of a 1st Class Assistant Collector, on the allegation that the defendants were the plaintiff's tenants without rights of occupancy, the defendants denied the title of the plaintiff, alleging that they were lessees from other persons and that the plaintiff had no right to sue them. The Court of first instance dismissed the suit:

Held, that the defendants' plea raised a question of proprietary title and as it was in issue in the Court of first instance and was also a matter in issue in appeal, the appeal lay to the District Judge under the provisions of section 177 of the Agra Tenancy Act. A HAR PRASAD v. TAJAMMUL HUSAIN, 16 A. L. J. 239 720

——— s. 198 720

——— s. 199 919

Ala and adna maliks—Right to share of produce—Declaratory suit to establish right as adna maliks—Burden of proof.

Plaintiffs sued for a declaration that they were the adna proprietors and in possession of the land in suit and that the defendants were merely ala proprietors entitled to receive malikana dues at 25 per cent of the land revenue. It appeared that the land in dispute had been entered in the successive settlement records as the property of the defendants whose names were written across both the columns relating to ala and adna maliks:

Held, (1) that the onus was on the plaintiffs to establish their claim to inferior proprietorship and to prove that the defendants were merely superior proprietors entitled to recover only 25 per cent. on the land revenue;

(2) that the mere fact that tenants had been located by the village officers was no adequate ground for depriving the defendants of their right of ownership when the entries with regard to that matter had all along been in their favour;

(3) that the plaintiffs having failed to discharge the onus that lay on them, the defendants were entitled to the ownership, both ala and adna, of the land in suit P AHMAD YAR v. MUHAMMAD KHAN, 63 P. W. R. 1918 534

Amendment of plaint 447

———, effect of 287

Amendment of Statute, effect of—Precedents, value of.

Where there have been decided cases before an Act is amended, if the amendment does not expressly show that the law as interpreted by the decisions is altered, the rule laid down by the decisions is to be adhered to. A MOHAMMED ISHAQ KHAN v. MOHAMMED RUSTAM ALI KHAN, 16 A. L. J. 182 88

Appeal (Civil) 416, 666, 671, 690, 847, 870

——— Appellate Court, failure of, to consider admission—Remand.

A Munsif made the following statement in the course of his judgment: "The learned Pleader for the plaintiff concedes in his argument that the land in suit is included in the lands mentioned in the sale certificate." In decreeing the appeal from the decision of the Munsif, the Appellate Court entirely ignored this admission or concession of the Pleader made in his argument in the Trial Court:

Held, that as the Appellate Court did not appreciate or realise the legal effect of the admission by the Pleader, the case must be remanded to that Court in order that the appeal thereto might be re-heard, on the footing that the admission in question was in fact made in the Trial Court. C JAHADALI v. AJIMANNESSA BIBI 18

———, forum of 287

——— from judgment of single Judge of High Court, disposing of application for review without jurisdiction—Letters Patent (Cal.), cl. 15.

The judgment of a single Judge thus disposing of an application for review without jurisdiction is subject to appeal under clause 15 of the Letters Patent. C JAGAT CHANDRA ACHARJI v. SYAMA CHARAN BHATTACHARJEE, 22 C. W. N. 550 999

——— Judgment containing unfavourable observation against person in whose favour decree passed—Appeal, whether lies.

No appeal lies from a decree merely on the ground that certain observations made in the judgment of the Court below are unfavourable to the person in whose favour the decree is passed. An opinion of the Appellate Court in the course of a judgment in such an appeal cannot operate as res judicata when in point of law, no appeal lay and the Court had no power to adjudicate on the rights of the parties on an appeal from such a decree. N NARAYAN v. SYED BAHADUR 723 ——— on particular point—Appellate Court, duty of.

Where a defendant appeals only on a particular point and not on the whole case, the Appellate Court is precluded from taking up a point which would involve the dismissal of the suit in toto. P HUKAM SINGH v. SHAHAB DIN, 14 P. W. R. 1918 890

————Pleadings—New case, whether can be set up.

A new case cannot be allowed to be set up in appeal. O FARKHUND ALI v. MOHAMMAD SAHIB, 4 O. L. J. 731 624

———, whether lies against award 622

———(Criminal), forum of 120

———, temporary dismissal of, legality of 582

———(Second)—Construction of document—Question of law.

The interpretation of a document is a point of law which can be taken in second appeal and that, taken with the intention of the parties, is a mixed question of law and fact which the High Court can itself deal with in second appeal. M KRISTNASWAMI IYENGAR v. SUBRAMANIA GANAPATHIGAL, 23 M. L. T. 85; 7 L. W. 210; (1918) M. W. N. 231 523

——— — Cross-objections rejected—Appeal, whether lies—Revision.

An appeal, purporting to be filed on behalf of the defendant, was dismissed by the lower Appellate Appeal (Second)—concld.

Court on the ground that it was not filed by the defendant or his duly authorised agent. In the meantime an appeal was filed by the plaintiff and the defendant preferred cross-objections challenging the decree on practically the same grounds as were taken in his memorandum of appeal. The cross-objections were rejected by the lower Appellate Court, on the ground that as the defendant had already preferred an appeal which had been dismissed he was not entitled to re-open the matter by filing cross-objections to the plaintiff's appeal:

Held, (1) that a second appeal was not competent from the order rejecting the cross-objections;

(2) that the defendant's appeal having been held not to have been filed by the defendant, he was entitled to file cross-objections and the order rejecting the cross-objections was, therefore, subject to revision. P ALLAH BAKHSH v. NUR BAKHSH, 20 P. R. 1918 812

——— — Judgment based on conjectures and presumptions, whether liable to be set aside—Succession to occupancy holding—Burden of proof.

A judgment based on mere conjectures and presumptions is liable to be set aside in second appeal.

Where on the death of an occupancy tenant his collaterals claim to succeed to the tenancy, the onus lies on them to establish affirmatively that the common ancestor occupied the land. In such a case conjecture cannot be accepted as a substitute for proof. P BHAGWAN DAS v. SHAMSHER SINGH, 55 P. W. R. 1918; 33 P. L. R. 1918 433

——— —New point involving question of fact, whether can be taken.

A point involving questions of fact, which was not taken in either of the lower Courts, cannot be taken for the first time in second appeal.

Where such a point was allowed to be taken in second appeal, the High Court reversed the decision of the Court of second appeal. C JADUB CHANDRA MAULIK v. MANIK SARKAR, 22 C. W. N. 156 91

——— —Suit undervalued by plaintiff—Defendant's appeal heard by inferior Court—Jurisdiction—Plaintiff, whether can object.

When an inferior Court disposes of a case which should have been heard by a superior Court, there is ground for thinking that the parties are prejudiced.

Where the plaintiff undervalued his suit for an injunction and the defendant, putting the same value on the appeal as had been put upon the suit, preferred his appeal to the Court of the Senior Subordinate Judge instead of the District Judge and the former Court heard and decreed the appeal:

Held, that the plaintiff was entitled in second appeal to raise an objection to the jurisdiction of the lower Appellate Court notwithstanding his own undervaluation of the suit. P CHELOO v. KALI DAS, 21 P. R. 1918 816

Appellate Court, order by, effect of—Order, whether can be questioned in appeal from final decree.

An order passed by an Appellate Court deciding the question is as final as a similar order passed by the Court of first instance and its propriety cannot be questioned in an appeal on the merits from the final decree. M SUBRAMANIA IYER v. MUTHU VAITHILINGA, 1918) M. W. N. 198 987

Approver, statement of.

Where reasonable proof exists that a sum of money deposited by the accused with a banker was borrowed by him from a certain person for the purpose of redeeming a mortgage which existed on his land, the story as told, unless proved to be untrue, cannot be said to be material corroboration of the statement of an approver that the accused had got the money as his share of the booty in a dacoity. P GURDIT SINGH v. EMPEROR, 9 P. W. R. 1918 CR.; 19 CR L. J. 439 967

Arbitration 122

——— Reference on application of some of the parties, validity of.

Quære.—Whether an order of reference to arbitration made by the Court on the application of the plaintiff and one of the defendants is legal? C HARIDAS DEY v. KAILASH CHANDRA BOSE 480

Arbitration Act (IX of 1899), ss. 5, 8—Arbitration—Arbitrator neglecting to act—Reference, whether revocable without leave of Court—Procedure.

Once a valid submission has been made to an arbitrator, it is irrevocable without leave of the Court, under section 5 of the Arbitration Act, and if the arbitrator refuses or neglects to act, the procedure laid down by section 8 of the Act should be adopted. So long as the arbitrator holds his mandate unrevoked, the parties cannot appoint a fresh arbitrator. S DWARKAPARSAD v. DIPCHAND PARSRAM, 11 S. L. R. 101 360

Arms Act (XI of 1878), s. 8 360

——— s. 19 (f)—Minor in possession of arms without license—Offence.

There is nothing in law which prevents a minor from being in actual fact in possession of arms without a license or which prevents him from being guilty of an offence under section 19, clause (f), of the Arms Act.

An Honorary Magistrate, who was exempt from the operation of the Arms Act and kept certain arms, died leaving behind him a pardanashin woman as a widow and a minor son. No license was obtained by the son for the arms, but they were retained in the house and were properly looked after:

Held, that the arms were in the custody and under the control of the minor and that he was guilty of an offence under section 19 (f) of the Arms Act. A EMPEROR v. GHULAM HUSAIN, 16 A. L. J. 323; 19 CR. L. J. 447 975

Benami transaction, tests of—Burden of proof.

With regard to the question whether a sale is a benami or a real transaction, the fact that the transactions relating to the property sold were carried out in the name of the transferee is not conclusive. Though the question of actual possession is in some cases a test and an important test, yet where the property transferred is a house and the transferor is the husband of the transferee, much importance cannot be attached to the fact of actual possession, inasmuch as the husband might after the sale not unnaturally live in the house which he has transferred to his wife.

The question of the burden of proof retains little, if any, importance where there is evidence on both sides. C BASIRUDDIN v. MOKIMA BIBI, 22 C. W. N. 709 915

Benefit of doubt 969

Bengal Amending Act (I B. C. 1907) 922

Bengal Cess Act (IX B. C. of 1880), ss. 54, 56—Plaintiff, whether can recover road-cess on basis of re-valuation without notice under s. 54.

Plaintiff brought a suit to recover arrears of road cess due and payable under the re-valuation of 1907 in respect of certain rent-free lands held by the defendants within the plaintiff's tenure:

Held, that under the terms of section 56 of the Cess Act the notice required by section 54 not having been published by the plaintiff the defendants were not bound to pay cesses upon the basis of the re-valuation of 1907. C BARANASHIBASI MUKERJEE v. HARI KRISHNA SHAHA 32

——— s. 56 32

Bengal Land Revenue Sales Act (XI of 1859), ss. 31, 53—Revenue sale—Encumbrances—Sale-proceeds, disposal of—Purchase by proprietor—Sale brought about by proprietor from dishonest motives.

Section 31 of the Bengal Land Revenue Sales Act provides that the purchase-money, after paying the public claims, shall be held on account of the recorded proprietor or proprietors, provided that if before payment the same be claimed by any creditor in satisfaction of a debt, it shall not be paid over without a decree of the Court, but the section nowhere transfers any charges on the property from the property to the proceeds, and as the revenue sale conveys a title free from encumbrances to the purchaser the mortgagees are clearly entitled to claim the same as creditors under the section and the Court would undoubtedly direct that such claims, in due order of priority, should be satisfied out of the sums in the hands of the Collector.

Where the property is bought by the recorded proprietor and the estate is acquired, under section 53 of the Act, subject to all its encumbrances existing at the time of the sale, the transaction of the sale merely provides money for payment of the Government claims, and the encumbrances are left entirely unaffected and can only be enforced against the property and the rights to the sale-proceeds of the recorded proprietor, who has purchased the property, are those under section 31, notwithstanding the fact that the motives which led him to cause the sale or purchase were dishonest. P C TARINI CHARAN SARKAR v. BISHUN CHAND, 23 M. L. T. 147; 7 L. W. 315; 27 C. L. J. 303; 34 M. L. J. 361; 4 P. L. W. 249; 16 A. L. J. 271; 22 C. W. N. 505; (1918) M. W. N. 295; 20 BOM. L. R. 553 304

——— s. 37—Occupancy tenant at fixed rent, whether liable to ejectment.

A raiyat who has acquired a right of occupancy before the passing of the Bengal Tenancy Act can retain the privileges of an occupancy raiyat, although his rent has been fixed in perpetuity by reason of which he becomes a raiyat holding at fixed rates according to the classification of raiyats in the Bengal Tenancy Act.

A person who has already acquired an occupancy right does not by obtaining a grant of fixed rent lose that occupancy right, and such a person is protected from ejectment under section 37 of the Bengal Revenue Sales Act. C LAKHI CHARAN SAHA v. HAMID ALI, 27 C. L. J. 284 543

——— s. 53 304

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII B. C. of 1885), ss. 3, 4, 5 94

——— ss. 22 (2), 85 (1)—Landlord purchasing raiyati *interest in execution of money decree, whether can eject under-*raiyat—Amending Act I B. C. of 1907, change made by, in s. 22, cl. (2), of Bengal Tenancy Act.

A landlord who purchases a raiyati interest at a sale in execution of a decree for money is in no better position than the landlord who purchases such interest under a private alienation; consequently he cannot insist upon any right which he as landlord might otherwise have had under section 85 (1) of the Bengal Tenancy Act to treat the under-raiyat as a mere trespasser.

As regards clause (2) of section 22 of the Bengal Tenancy Act the change made by the Amending Act of 1907 does not seem to have altered the law as previously understood. A fractional landlord who gets a transfer of an occupancy holding still acquires from the raiyat some sort of tenancy or intermediate interest (except the right of occupancy) which prevents him from treating the under-raiyat as a trespasser. C BABU RAM DHENG v. UPENDRA NATH 922

——— s. 23 451

——— s. 29—Compromise enhancing rent in contravention of section, legality of.

An enhancement of rent of an occupancy holding in excess of that allowed by section 29 of the Bengal Tenancy Act agreed to by means of a compromise is illegal. Pat SRIKISHUN LAL v. SHEOBALAK GOPE, 4 P. L. W. 247 638

——— s. 29—Landlord and tenant—Hajat or rent kept in abeyance—Landlord's right to realise full nominal rent.

Where a tenant by a kabuliyat agreed to pay rent at the rate of Rs. 37-1-0 per annum subject to a hajat or deduction of Rs. 21-10-0 and the kabuliyat contained the following clause: "If after the expiry of the term I do not within a year deliver a fresh dowl kabuliyat for the whole amount inclusive of the sum kept in abeyance I shall pay Rs. 37-1-0, being the iull amount of actual rent inclusive of the sum kept in abeyance:"

Held, (1) that the clause in the kabuliyat was in the nature of a threat that the rent at the full nominal rate would be levied in case the tenant did not execute a kabuliyat within a year after the expiry of the term;

(2) that the landlord's claim at the full nominal rate was inadmissible, as the stipulation in the kabuliyat with regard to the deduction to be allowed was a device to evade the provisions of section 29, Bengal Tenancy Act;

(3) that as in cases of this nature each case must depend on its own facts, it would be better in all such cases for the lower Courts to record an express finding one way or the other whether or not the agreement was a device to evade the Statute. C PRODYAT KUMAR TAGORE v. CHUNDRA MOHUN SIL 574

——— s. 37—Enhancement of rent—Illegal contract for enhancement, whether bars subsequent suit for enhancement.

Section 37 of the Bengal Tenancy Act contemplates a prohibition against enhancement of rent in respect of a contract validly made and binding between the parties; an illegal or invalid contract made within fifteen years of the last enhancement does not come within the provisions of the section so as to operate as a bar to the institution of a suit for enhancement of rent. Pat BUDHAN MAHTON v. WAZI HUNNISSA BEGUM, 4 P. L. W. 210; (1918) PAT. 162 292

Bengal Tenancy Act—contd.

——— ss. 49, 85—Lease from year to year—Ejectment—Notice—Lease in contravention of s. 85—Grantor, whether can question lease.

In 1891 plaintiff granted an under-raiyati lease to the defendant. The lease was not for any specified term, but was described as a harsana patta (yearly lease). The plaintiff stated that she had a raiyati interest in the land and the defendant was enjoined to have an entry made in the Survey and Settlement Record that the grantor possessed a raiyati right and the grantee himself a harsana right:

Held, that the lease was terminable by a notice to quit under section 49 (b) of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

Per Mookerjee, J.—It is of the very essence of an annual tenancy that it is terminable by the landlord on notice to quit.

Section 49 of the Bengal Tenancy Act prescribe no form of notice, nor does it give any indication as to the length of notice. An under-raiyat is protected from ejectment until the end of the agricultural year in which a notice to quit is served upon him by his landlord, and this indicates the time when it becomes obligatory upon him to leave.

Per Beachcroft, J.—A sub-lease by a raiyat for a period exceeding nine years, whether registered or not, is void, and can be questioned by the grantor or a person claiming through him.

Where a raiyat giving a permanent sub-lease in contravention of the provisions of section 85 (2) of the Bengal Tenancy Act induces his lessee to accept it on the faith of a representation that his own status is such as to validate such a sub-lease, he cannot afterwards be allowed to prove in a suit against his lessee that his status was other than it was in the first instance represented to be. C CHANDI CHARAN NATH v. SOMLA BIBI, 22 C W. N. 179 254

——— s. 49—Notice to quit by several joint landlords signed by one only, validity of.

A notice under section 49 of the Bengal Tenancy Act purporting to emanate from three landlords but in fact signed by one of them is a proper notice to quit.

There is no necessity that the notice should be signed by the landlord at all. It is sufficient if the notice is at the instance of the landlord calling upon the under-raiyat to quit the land. C MAFEDUL SHA FAKIR v MAHARUDDIN 49

——— s. 50 (2), presumption under—Kabuliyat stipulating enhanced rent, whether rebuts presumption

Where in a kabuliyat executed in 1840 there was an express stipulation that the tenants would pay enhanced rent according to the Pargana rate:

Held, that the kabuliyat might be considered either as a new contract under which the tenants agreed to pay enhanced rent or as a contract containing recitals of the incidents of the tenancy which was in existence before. In either view the kabuliyat showed that the rent was enhanceable. Therefore, the presumption under section 50 (2) of the Bengal Tenancy Act was rebutted. C UPENDRA NATH GHOSE v. DWARKANATH BISWAS, 22 C. W. N. 322 593

Bengal Tenancy Act—contd.

——— s. 50 (2), presumption, under, rebuttal of —Landlord and tenant—Amalgamation of tenures, whether creates new tenancy.

Where four separate tenures were amalgamated into one by a kabuliyat of 1853, which expressly stated that enhanced rent would be paid according to the rate of enhancement in the village, and there was no suggestion that the other incidents of the tenure as mentioned in the kabuliyat were the same as those of the four original tenures:

Held, that the kabuliyat created a new tenancy in 1853, so that the presumption arising under section 50 (2) of the Bengal Tenancy Act was rebutted. C UPENDRA NATH GHOSE v. GOPI CHARAN SAHA, 22 C. W. N. 321 595

——— s. 52—Landlord and tenant—Holder of temporary tenure, whether can contract himself out of his right to apply for reduction of rent.

A holder of a temporary tenure under a kabuliyat, which provides that diluvion or no diluvion the tenant would remain liable for the full rent payable, is not entitled to claim reduction of rent on the ground of diluvion.

Apart from any question of contract section 52 of the Bengal Tenancy Act is applicable both to tenure-holders and to raiyats. But a tenure-holder is at liberty to contract himself out of his right to apply for a reduction of rent under section 52

In the case of a holder of a temporary tenure, section 52 of the Bengal Tenancy Act must be read subject to the terms of the contract between him and his landlord. C SECRETARY OF STATE v. KAMAL KRISHNA PAL 222

——— s. 52—Landlord and tenant—Landlord, whether can claim additional rent for excess area within boundaries specified in pattah.

Where rent is fixed for the whole area within the boundaries specified in a pattah, the landlord is not entitled to additional rent on account of excess area merely because the area within the boundaries specified in the pattah is considerably more than the area stated therein, although he may claim additional rent for excess lands outside the boundaries, C MANJANALI DEBI v. KAILASH NATH MITRA 24

——— s. 60, applicability of 129

——— s. 66—Extension of time, application for, after expiry of period—Court, power of, to allow extension.

It is open to a Court to grant an extension of the time limited by section 66 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, even where the application for extension is made after the expiry of the period prescribed by the section. C SARADA CHARAN BASAK v. JURO RAM MANDAL 473

——— s. 66—*Payment of decree by under-*raiyat of non-occupancy raiyat, whether can prevent ejectment.

Section 66 (2) of the Bengal Tenancy Act clearly contemplates that the payment of the amount decreed against a non-occupancy raiyat, in order to be a good payment, must be made by or on behalf of the judgment-debtor.

Where the under-raiyat of a non-occupancy raiyat, against whom a decree for arrears of rent was obtained by the landlord under section 66 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, paid the decretal amount expressly to protect his own interest and on the allegation that the judgment-debtor was in collusion with the decree-holder landlord:

Held, that the payment, not having been made on behalf of the judgment-debtor, was not a good payment under section 66 (2) of the Bengal Tenancy Act so as to prevent the execution of the decree for ejectment. C BROJENDRA NATH MITRA v. ARMAN SHEIKH, 27 C. L. J. 478 977

——— ss. 69, 70 177

——— s. 74 497

——— s. 85 254

——— s. 85 (1) 922

——— ss. 105, 109 A—Appeal against decision of Settlement Officer—Schedule directed to be prepared by judgment—Limitation, commencement of.

Where a Settlement Officer, in an order on an application for settlement of fair rents under section 105, Bengal Tenancy Act, arrived at certain findings and laid down certain principles, in accordance with which fair rents were to be ascertained and entered in a schedule directed to be prepared by the order:

Held, that limitation for preferring an appeal against the decision of the Settlement Officer began to run from the date on which the schedule was signed by the Settlement Officer, and not from the date on which the order was made, inasmuch as the schedule settling the rents was clearly a part of the decision and in fact read with the order was the decision. C DHARANI KANTA LAHIRI v. AMIR SHEIKH 152

——— ss. 105A, 109—Status of tenant—Decision by Settlement Officer—Suit for declaration, maintainability of.

Under section 105 A of the Bengal Tenancy Act a Settlement Officer hearing an application for the settlement of a fair rent is authorised to decide whether the tenant belongs to a class different from that to which he is shown in the Record of Rights as belonging. When a Settlement Officer has decided that question, it is not competent to a Civil Court, having regard to the terms of section 109 of the Act, to entertain a suit for a declaration of the status of the tenant. C BEPIN KRISHNA KUMAR v. HARI DAS GHOSE, 27 C. L. J. 210 562

——— s. 109 562

——— s. 109A 152

——— s. 116 94

——— s. 153—Appeal, whether lies—Question of title raised but not decided.

Under section 153 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, it is not sufficient merely that there should be a controversy on the question of title as between parties having conflicting claims to land but the section requires that some question of title should be decided as between such parties. Therefore, where in a suit for rent the lower Court does not decide the question of title which is raised between parties having conflicting claims thereto,

Bengal Tenancy Act—contd.

no appeal lies under section 153 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. C JILLOR RAHMAN v. EBRAHIK KHAN 558

——— s. 174—Sale, order setting aside—Suit for declaration, maintainability of.

Where a sale in execution of a rent-decree is set aside under section 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, the purchaser is entitled to bring a suit for a declaration that the defendant had no right to make the deposit. Pat GOLAB CHAND RAY v. FEDA HUSSAIN, 3 P. L. W. 264; 3 P. L. J. 122 532

——— Sch. III, Art. 1 (a), ss. 3, 4, 5, 116—Zirat land, acquisition of non-occupancy rights in—Ejectment from zirat land—Limitation.

Per Curiam (Chapman and Jwala Prasad, JJ., dissenting).—The Bengal Tenancy Act applies to a proprietor's private land, and a suit by a landlord to eject a non-occupancy raiyat of his private land on the ground of the expiration of his lease is governed by Article 1 (a) of Schedule III of the Act.

Per Chamier, C. J.—The operation of Article 1 (a) of Schedule III of the Bengal Tenancy Act is not excluded by section 116 of the Act in the case of zirat land.

Section 116 of the Bengal Tenancy Act prevents the application of Chapter VI to raiyats of a proprietor's private land in two cases only, namely, where such land is held under a lease for a term of years and where it is held under a lease from year to year. Except in these two cases Chapter VI of the Act was intended to apply to raiyats of a proprietor's private land, and such raiyats may be non-occupancy raiyats within the meaning of the Act.

Per Mullick, J.—There is nothing in the Bengal Tenancy Act to support the view that it is not open to a zemindar to create raiyati interests in his private lands. On the contrary section 116 of the Act clearly contemplates the acquisition of occupancy rights in such land under certain circumstances and, if of occupancy rights, then why not of non-occupancy rights also?

Per Chapman, J.—The classification of tenants in sections 4 and 5 of the Bengal Tenancy Act was not intended to be scientific or precise, and in order to render the Act intelligible these sections must be applied with a reasonable amount of elasticity.

Zirat land is not raiyati land although the zemindar may lose his rights in it by treating it as if it was raiyati. But if he lets it for a term or from year to year, it remains his own and the tenant of it is not a raiyat.

Article 1 (a) of Schedule III of the Bengal Tenancy Act does not apply to tenants in zirat land.

Per Jwala Prasad, J.—The Bengal Tenancy Act does not purport to be a complete and exhaustive Code even in respect of the law of landlord and tenant. A person holding zirat land under a lease for a term of years is not a raiyat and will not be governed by the Bengal Tenancy Act but by the general law. He does not become a non-occupancy raiyat after the expiry of the lease and is a trespasser only. Therefore, Article 1 (a) of Schedule III of the Bengal Tenancy Act does not apply to persons holding under a lease the proprietor's private lands.

Bengal Tenancy Act—concld.

A Court is required to have regard to custom in determining whether a person is a raiyat or not. No custom is more certain than that a tenant in zirat is not a raiyat. Pat JANKI SINGH v. JAGANNATH DAS, 3 P. L. J. 1 94

Berar Land Revenue Code, s. 78 (2)—Anti-ijara tenancy—Presumption—Burden of proof.

It is the tenant who wants to remain on the land in spite of the landlord's wishes to the contrary that has to prove the circumstances which entitle him to do so. He has, therefore, to prove, in the case of an anti-ijara tenancy in Berar, that no satisfactory evidence of the commencement of his tenancy and of the period agreed upon between the landlord and tenant for its duration is forthcoming.

If he fails to do so no presumption under section 78 (2) of the Berar Land Revenue Code can be made in his favour. N ABDULLAKHAN v. ABHIMAN 531

——— ss. 78, 79—Notice under s. 78, not acted upon for one year, effect of—Fresh notice, whether necessary—Termination of tenancy.

If a notice has been duly served under section 78 of the Berar Land Revenue Code, then in the absence of waiver the person so served is not entitled to a fresh notice under section 79 merely because more than one year has elapsed since the time when in accordance with the notice the tenant should have vacated the land.

Section 78, sub-sections (4) and (8), are not restricted to the tenancies mentioned in sub-section (2) of that section, but the enhancement contemplated therein can be decreed only if in the judgment of the Court it be just and reasonable.

A notice to quit under section 79 of the Berar Land Revenue Code unconditionally determines the tenancy, but a notice under section 78 (8), if not complied with, is not intended to have that effect inasmuch as the tenant has a right to appeal to the Court for a decision as to whether in its opinion the enhancement is just and reasonable.

A tenant is to be evicted for not paying the enhanced rent only after it has been determined to be just and reasonable by the Court. N NARAYAN v. SYED BAHADUR 723

——— s. 79 (2)—Annual tenancy, whether includes tenancy for a year—Notice to quit, whether necessary—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 111 A.

The expression "annual tenancy" as used in section 79 of the Berar Land Revenue Code is meant to cover a tenancy from year to year only and not a tenancy lasting for a year only. No notice by either party to a contract of tenancy for one year is therefore, necessary to determine the tenancy. N KESHAO v. MANSHA 212

——— Ch. VIII (a), s. 96 (j)—Officer in charge of Record of Rights, powers of.

The officer-in-charge of a Record of Rights is not an officer who is authorised to recognise a Subdivision of a Survey number or to form two recognised Sub-divisions into one Survey number. N GADADHAR v. CHUNNILAL, 14 N. L. R. 55 541

Berar Municipal Law of 1886, ss. 85, 86—Application for permission to build, no order passed on, effect of—Steps and balcony projecting over street—Encroachment—Notice to remove obstruction, necessity of—Notice to show cause, whether notice to remove.

Accused applied to the Municipal Committee, Amraoti, for sanction to build a house, but no order was passed on the application within one month by the Committee. The applicant built steps over a roadside drain and a balcony eleven feet high projecting over it without the written permission of the Committee. The latter issued a notice to the former to show cause why the balcony and steps should not be removed and why he should not be prosecuted. The applicant was then prosecuted on a complaint made by the Secretary duly authorised by a resolution of the Committee and was convicted of two offences, one in respect of the steps and the other in respect of the balcony, under rule 10 read with rule 30 of the rules framed under section 116 of the Berar Municipal Law, and fined Rs. 25 on each count. The steps and the balcony were ordered to be removed within eight days, on failure of which he was ordered to pay a continuing daily fine of Re. 1:

Held, that the notice to show cause was not a notice to remove the obstruction as required by section 86 (2) of the Berar Municipal Law.

Section 86, sub-section (2) contemplates a notice issued personally to an individual.

Section 85 of the Berar Municipal Law merely requires a person intending to erect or re-erect any building to give written notice of his intention to the Committee, but the mere fact that such a permission was applied for and no order prohibiting the errection was passed within one month does not place the applicant in the same position as if written permission was accorded to him by the Committee as required by section 86. So far as the encroachments dealt with by section 86 are concerned, they are not in themselves punishable though declared unlawful by that section, but it is the disobedience to the order of the Committee for their removal under section 130 which has been made punishable. N RADHAKISAN v. MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, AMRAOTI, 19 CR. L. J. 392 744

——— s. 116—Daily fine, when can be imposed—Rules 10 and 30 framed under s. 116, whether ultra vires.

The rules framed under section 116 of the Berar Municipal Law must be consistent with the Act. The effect of rule 10 framed under section 116 of the Berar Municipal Law is to do away with the notice required by section 138, and the rule is, therefore, ultra vires.

The policy of the Berar Municipal Law is not to authorise a daily fine except in cases of contumacy, that is, disobedience of a lawful order. N RADHAKISAN v. MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, AMRAOTI, 19 CR. L. J. 392 744

——— ss. 132, 133.

A balcony eleven feet above the level of a street is not an encroachment within the meaning of section 132 of the Berar Municipal Law.

Section 133 of the Berar Municipal Law makes an encroachment punishable without a notice of removal being issued to the offender. That section does not, however, justify a daily fine but only allows a fine which may extend to Rs. 50. N RADHAKISAN v. MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, AMRAOTI, 19 CR. L. J. 392 744

——— s. 138 744

——— s. 151.

All that section 151 of the Berar Municipal Law lays down is that a Court shall not take cognizance of an offence under the Berar Municipal Law, except on the complaint of the Committee or of some person authorised by the Committee in their behalf. The complaint need not specify the section or rule of the Berar Municipal Law which has been broken. It need only state the facts and it is for the Court to decide under what section or rule an offence has been committed.

When a Statute expressly deals with any matter and lays down certain procedure, it is not competent to a Corporation to repeal any of the provisions of the Act under which power to make rules has been given. N RADHAKISAN v. MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, AMRAOTI, 19 CR. L. J. 392 744

Bihar & Orissa Excise Act (II B. & O. of 1915), s. 47 (a) 974

Bombay District Municipal Act (III of 1901), ss. 92, 96—Re-construction of old building—Failure to give notice—Offence—Scope and object of s. 96.

The reference to section 92 in section 96, clause (1), of the Bombay District Municipal Act, does not govern the whole of the clause but is limited to the clause describing projecting portions of buildings in respect of which the Municipality are empowered by that section to enforce a removal or set-back, so that notice or permission is requisite in case of all buildings whether on a public road or in a private mahala.

Section 96 of the Bombay District Municipal Act does not empower the Municipality to deprive owners of the legitimate use of their land or to refuse permission to build at all, but it does confer on the Municipality a very wide power of regulating buildings. The object of the power is to secure the safety and sanitation of buildings to be newly erected. This power, though an encroachment on private rights, is not inconsistent with the Act. S KHUSHALDAS MOOLCHAND v. EMPEROR, 11 S. L. R. 90; 19 CR. L. J. 330 346

——— s. 96 346

——— s. 160 (3)—Award of compensation by District Court—Power of Court to award 15 per cent. on market value—"Procedure," meaning of—Revision—High Court, power of interference of—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115.

Under section 160 (3) of the Bombay District Municipal Act, the matter of the compensation is to be determined by the District Court, which decides the question in the exercise of its jurisdiction as a Civil Court. Its proceedings are, therefore, subject to revision by the Judicial Commissioner's Court under section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code.

The word "procedure" in section 160 (3) of the Bombay District Municipal Act is used in its popular and not in its strictly legal sense, and a District Court in awarding compensation under that section has power to award 15 per cent. of the market value in addition to such value. S HYDERABAD MUNICIPALITY v. MOORIJMAL MUSHTAKRAM, 11 S. L. R. 93 363

Bombay District Police Act (IV Bom. of 1890), s. 44, order under, form of—Technical errors, effect of.

An order under section 44 of the Bombay District Police Act must relate to certain persons or parties and to an actual or intended occurrence.

Where an order under section 44 of the Bombay District Police Act set out the occurrences which had led to the order, its purpose and the particular occasion to which it was to apply, but its operative part was in the following terms: "No one shall obstruct religious or ceremonial processions passing with music in front of any Masjid within the Municipal limits of the Haliyal town:"

Held, that the errors in the form of the order were so purely of a technical character as not to render the order invalid. B ABDUL HAMID RAJABALI v. EMPEROR, 20 BOM. L. R. 114; 19 CR. L. J. 366 590

Bombay Land Revenue Code (Act V Bom. of 1879), s. 40 872

Bombay Survey and Settlement Act (I Bom. of 1865), ss. 37, 38 872

Buddhist Law, Burmese—Succession—Exclusion from inheritance, requisites for.

Mere non-attendance on a deceased during his or her illness is not sufficient to exclude those who would ordinarily inherit from him or her. The law requires that on the part of the person sought to be excluded, there must be conduct such as constitutes an intention on his part to destroy the natural tie between him and the deceased. L B MAUNG NGE v. MAUNG ZIN BA 239

Burden of proof 915

Burma Civil Courts Regulation (I of 1896), s. 15 690

Burma Forest Act (IV of 1902), rr. 22, 98—License to fell timber, breach of condition of—Licensee, liability of, for acts of servants.

A licensee or other person permitted to fell timber in accordance with certain conditions under rules framed under the Forest Act is liable to be punished under those rules for the acts of his servants, whether authorised by him or not, and even if the acts are in contravention of his instructions, provided that those servants were acting within the scope of their master's authority and unless the master can show that he acted in good faith and did all that could be reasonably expected of him to prevent the breach of the conditions under which he is permitted to fell the timber. L B EMPEROR v. U GYAW, 9 L. B. R. 112; 19 CR. L. J. 331 347

—— r. 98 347

Burma Municipal Act (III of 1898), ss. 2 (6), 142 (d)—Lodging-house, what is—Receiving lodgers.

A lodging-house need not be let in lodgings: it is still a lodging-house if it is occupied to any extent in common by members of more than one family. The persons living in the lodging house are lodgers, whether they pay rent or not and the owner of the lodging-house receives them when he allows them to occupy the building. U B AMANATH MISTRY v. EMPEROR, 3 U. B. R. (1917) 52; 19 CR. L. J. 370 674

—— s. 142 (d) 674

Calcutta Improvement Act (V B. C. of 1911) 331

Calcutta Improvement Act—concld.

—— ss. 41 (a), 42 (a), 78, 81—Board, whether has power to acquire land for recoupment—"Affected" in s. 42 (a), meaning of—'Recoupment,' 'Betterment,' meaning of.

By the Full Bench (N. R. Chatterjea, J., dissenting).—Section 42 (a) of the Calcutta Improvement Act authorises the Board of Trustees to acquire land compulsorily for purposes of "recoupment," i.e., by selling or otherwise dealing with the land under section 81 or by abandoning the land in consideration of the payment of a sum under section 78 of the Act.

Per Fletcher, J.—The word "affected" in section 42 (a) of the Calcutta Improvement Act means affected in any way; and the expression "by the execution of the scheme" means through or owing to the execution of the scheme.

Betterment means that persons whose property has clearly been increased in market value by an improvement effected by local authorities should specially contribute to the cost of the improvement.

Recoupment means the acquisition of land by a public body beyond what is necessary for the actual execution of an improvement, so that some part at least of the improved value may be secured by the improving public body in ease of the burden on the rate-payers.

Per Richardson, J.—The phrase "land affected by the execution of the improvement scheme" in section 42 a of the Calcutta Improvement Act suggests land affected for the better, and though the words may be wide enough to include land prejudicially affected should the Board choose to acquire such land, they specially include and signify land beneficially affected.

The words "by the execution of the scheme", which qualify the word "affected" refer not only to the period of construction but also to the period immediately following, when the improvement scheme is completed and in operation and "a going concern."

Per Chatterjea, J.—The words "land required for the scheme" in section 41 (a) of the Calcutta Improvement Act mean the land which is actually required for what may be called the engineering or construction works, for instance, in a street scheme the land necessary for laying out the street.

The word "affected" in section 42 (a) of the Calcutta Improvement Act has no reference to value. In that section it is used in the sense of acted upon physically or materially.

The Calcutta Improvement Act does not authorise the Board of Trustees to acquire land compulsorily for the purpose of recoupment.

Where there are two possible constructions of certain words in a section of the Calcutta Improvement Act defining the power of the Board of Trustees, if on the one construction the Board would have almost unlimited power of interference with private rights, and in the other they are not clothed with such power, but with a power more convenient and limited, the latter construction should be preferred C MANI LALL SINGH v. TRUSTEES FOR THE IMPROVEMENT OF CALCUTTA, 22 C. W. N. 1; 27 C. L. J. 1; 45 C. 343 770

—— ss. 78, 81 770

Calcutta Municipal Act (III B. C. of 1899), ss. 171, 228 669

——— ss. 299, 593—Notice, service of, on one of several co-owners of premises, validity of.

The service of a notice under section 299 of the Calcutta Municipal Act upon one of the co-owners of the property in the manner provided in section 593 is effectual against the other co-owners. C CORPORATION OF CALCUTTA v. HEMANGINI DASSI 413

——— s. 593 413

Caste Disabilities Removal Act (XXI of 1850) 299

Cattle, illegal seizure of—Damages, suit for—Burden of proof.

In a suit for damages for wrongful seizure of cattle the burden lies on the defendant to prove that the seizure was legal. N MADHORAO v. ABDUL GAFUR 241

Cattle Trespass Act (I of 1871), s. 22 592

——— Chap. V, s. 22—Suit for damages for illegal seizure, whether barred—Burden of proof.

In cases where a Statute provides a special remedy for a right or liability already existing, unless the Statute contains words which either expressly or by necessary implication exclude the common law remedy, the person suing has his election to pursue either that or the statutory remedy.

In a suit for damages for illegal seizure of cattle the onus lies on the defendant to prove that the seizure was justifiable in law.

Such a suit is not barred by reason of Chapter V of the Cattle Trespass Act. N BALA v. VITHU 237

Cause of action 912, 980

Cause of action.

When a cause of action for money is once complete in itself, whether for goods sold, or for money lent or for any other claim, and the debtor then gives a bill or note to the creditor for payment of the money at a future time, the creditor, if the bill or note is not paid at maturity, may, always as a rule, sue for the original consideration, provided that he has not endorsed, or lost, or parted with, the bill or note, under such circumstances as to make the debtor liable upon it to some third person. But when the original cause of action is the bill or note itself, and does not exist independently of it, then the bill or note is the only contract between the parties, and if for want of proper stamp or some other reason it is not admissible in evidence, the creditor must lose his money. P BHAGAT RAM-GANPAT RAI v. CHHAJJU RAM, 15 P. W. R. 1918 886

———, accrual of, after suit—Relief, whether can be granted.

Courts have power, in certain circumstances, to grant a decree in a case, where the cause of action arose subsequently to the filing of the plaint.

In a suit for money, where the money becomes payable to the plaintiff only after the filing of the suit the Court should pass a decree in favour of the plaintiff and not compel him to institute another suit, for the purpose. M SUBBARAYA CHETTY v. NACHIAR AMMAL, (1918) M. W. N. 199; 7 L. W 403 863

C. P. Courts Act (II of 1904), s. 15, scope of—"Value of suit," meaning of.

Plaintiff sued for the recovery of Rs. 1,651-15-0, but subsequently, on different dates, he gave up his claim to the extent of Rs. 651-2-5 leaving a balance of Rs. 1,000-3-0. Through mistake, however, he prayed only for a decree for Rs. 988-3-7. The first Court dismissed the claim but on appeal to the District Judge the decree was set aside and the suit was remanded for a decision on merits, with the result that a decree was passed in favour of the plaintiff for Rs. 988-3-7 claimed by him:

Held, that the value of the suit was Rs. 988-3-7 and that an appeal lay to the District Judge and not to the Court of the Divisional Judge.

Jurisdiction in the matter of appeals in the Central Provinces is governed by section 15 of the Central Provinces Courts Act, 1904. The words "value of the suit" as used in that section invariably mean value of the relief originally claimed by the plaintiff in the plaint or increased or reduced by voluntary amendment, that is to say, value of such relief as is made the subject-matter of the Court's decision.

Where a plaintiff voluntarily reduces an original claim, it is the reduced claim which represents the value of the suit for the purposes of appeal.

A Court cannot adjudicate itself out of the jurisdiction given to it by law over the suit as instituted. N DINDAYAL v. DEONATH 287

C. P. Land Revenue Act (XVIII of 1881), ss. 65A (4), 132, 152 - Gauntia, protected—Succession - Resignation by eldest heir—Surrender of Gauntiaship, validity of - Suit to recover Gauntiaship, whether cognizable by Civil Court.

The object of section 65 A of the Central Provinces Land Revenue Act is not to the benefit of the zemindar but to retain, if possible, certain selected families in the Gauntiaships of their villages, and to protect them against transfers and sub divisions.

Section 65 A, clause (4), of the Central Provinces Land Revenue Act is mandatory in its terms. The right of the eldest male heir to resign or renounce his rights as a Gauntia, with a view to giving up all claim to inherit the estate which has by statutory devolution descended upon him must be exercised at the time when the succession opens, viz., on the death of the last protected Gauntia.

The provisions of section 132 of the Central Provinces Land Revenue Act were drawn up with reference to section 65 A of the Act and were intended to enable the Deputy Commissioner merely to determine claims to protection under that section and to enforce the provisions of that section. It was never intended that the Deputy Commissioner should be empowered to deal with a suit for ejectment or for the recovery of a Gauntiaship. Such a suit is cognizable by the Civil Courts.

Per Atkinson, J.—The right of election under section 65A, clause (4) (b), must be exercised in respect of the entire estate which devolves on the eldest male heir. If two or more villages form the protected tenure of a Gauntia, even though they may have been declared protected by separate certificates at different times, the eldest male heir must exercise his choice of resignation or adoption in respect of all or none of such villages; there can be no splitting up of the estate or tenure into different parts having distinct entities.

C. P. Land Revenue Act—concld.

Per Imam, J.—There is nothing in section 65A of the Central Provinces Land Revenue Act to show that the protection afforded to the tenure of a Gauntia is to extend to a group of tenures. Where a person in whom two Gauntiaships are vested dies, it is open to his eldest heir to resign at the time of his succession in favour of another heir either both the Gauntiaships or one of them. Pat LAL NRIPARAJ SINGH v. MOHAN GAUNTIA, 3 P. L. J. 229; 4 P. L. W. 256 817

——— ss. 132, 152 817

C. P. Laws Act (XX of 1875), s. 5—'Hindu,' meaning of.

The term 'Hindu' in section 5 of the Central Provinces Laws Act, 1875, refers to persons who profess some form of the Hindu religion, whatever be the branch, school, sect, off-shoot or denomination to which they may belong, but it does not extend to persons who have never professed any form of the Hindu religion or to those who have been converted from it to some entirely different religion. The word would apply to dissenters and non-conformists but not to apostates. Thus a Jain is a Hindu but a Brahman converted to Buddhism or Islam is not. N UJIYARA v. TILOCHAN 435

C. P. Tenancy Act (XI of 1898), s. 2 (3)—Landlord and tenant—Tenancy of undefined land, whether permissible.

There can be no tenancy within the meaning of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act of a share of land, if that share is not defined by metes and bounds. N SUMERA v. PEMCHAND, 14 N. L. R. 62 845

—— —— ss. 35, 36 317

——— s. 46—Suit for possession of occupancy tenancy by heir—Civil Court, jurisdiction of, whether barred.

In a suit for possession of an occupancy holding in the Civil Court on the ground that it devolved on the plaintiff after the death of the former holder, her mother, the defendant resisted the claim on the ground that as the land was gifted to him by a registered deed by the plaintiff's mother the suit was barred by the Central Provinces Tenancy Act:

Held, (1) that as the suit was one for possession of an occupancy tenancy and not a suit to set aside an alienation made by the former tenant in contravention of the provisions of the Tenancy Act, the Civil Court had jurisdiction to entertain the suit;

(2) that irrespective of the provisions of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act the deed of gift regarded as an attempt to alienate anything more than the life-interest of a Hindu widow was invalid. N KALWA v. BHAWAR SINGH 1001

——— ss. 46, 47, 95—"Transfer," meaning of—Surrender, whether transfer—Surrender of tenancy in favour of co-sharer landlord—Lambardar, whether can apply for possession—Suit for possession by landlord who obtained surrender, whether barred—Jurisdiction.

The transfer contemplated by section 46 of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act must be either a sale or a gift or a mortgage or a sub-lease, and the words "otherwise transfer" must be limited to transactions of a similar nature. A surrender is in no sense a transfer, much less a transfer within the meaning of section 46.

C. P. Tenancy Act—concld.

The Central Provinces Tenancy Act, while making provision for the recovery of possession of a holding by the heir of a surrendering tenant, makes no provision for such recovery by a co-sharer landlord.

The institution of a suit for ejectment against a purchaser of a holding is not one of the duties which a lambardar can be held to have to perform as the representative of the proprietary body. He has no authority to represent the co-sharers for the purpose of ejectment before a Revenue Officer.

Plaintiffs Nos. 1 to 8 were co-sharer landlords with defendant who was also the lambardar. Certain tenants surrendered the lands in suit to plaintiffs Nos. 1 to 8, and the latter leased them to plaintiffs Nos. 9 to 12. Defendant then applied to the Revenue Officer under sections 46 and 47 of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act to be put in possession as landlord of the disputed lands, and his application was allowed. Plaintiffs then brought a suit in a Civil Court for declaration and possession:

Held, (1) that the surrender was not a transfer within the meaning of section 46 of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act and that the defendant had, therefore, no right to make an application under sections 46 and 47 of the Act;

(2) that section 95 of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act was no bar to the suit. Pat TRILOCHAN PANDA v. DINABANDHU PANDA, 3 P. L. J. 88 317

——— s. 95 317

Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act (VI of 1908), s. 139 (5)—Wrongful dispossession of tenant—Suit to recover possession in Civil Court, whether maintainable—Jurisdiction.

Where a tenant has been wrongfully dispossessed of his holding, he may bring a suit for possession of the land in the Civil Courts. Section 139 (5) of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act is no bar to such a suit. The word 'application' in the section does not include suits. Pat NARAIN SINGH v. BABA, 4 P. L. W. 189; (1918) PAT. 131 262

Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 17, Expl. III 863

——— s. 244 855

—— ss. 323, 325 15

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 9 659

——— s. 11—Finding in Civil Court as to landlord's right, whether res judicata in suit for rent in Revenue Court.

A mere finding by a Civil Court as to the existance of any right in a landlord will not operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit in a Revenue Court having exclusive jurisdiction over such a suit. But where the right is embodied in the decree of a competent Court in the former suit, such decree is res judicata between the parties as regards the rights established thereby. M RAMASAMI SERVAIGARAN v. ATHIVARAHA CHARIAR, 23 M. L. T. 183; 7 L. W. 471; (1918) M. W. N. 340 663

——— s. 11—Matter expressly excluded from decision, whether res judicata.

In deciding the validity or otherwise of the defence of res judicata, the Court is concerned with what was actually decided and not with what ought to have been decided in the previous suit.

Plaintiffs let the ground floor of their house to defendants from 1st January 1909. In the summer of 1911, a dispute arose between the parties with regard to the term of the tenancy and the extent of the property leased and the plaintiffs brought a suit for ejectment of the defendants from the house as well as two plots of land which, according to the plaintiffs, did not form part of the property leased. The defendants thereupon instituted a counter-suit for the specific performance of an agreement to lease the property for a period of 3 years. The litigation dragged on till the defendants vacated the premises on the 7th March 1912 and informed the Court accordingly, which consequently declined to adjudicate upon the various issues arising between the parties and simply granted the plaintiffs a decree for possession of the property, expressly stating that the said issues might be determined in the suit for damages which was to be instituted by the plaintiffs The present suit was then brought for damages for use and occupation on the allegations that the defendants were monthly tenants, that their tenancy was determined at the end of June 1911 by a notice to quit served on them in April 1911 and that thereafter they were in wrongful possession of the demised premises. It appeared that the parties had written to each other on the 15th and 22nd January 1909 with regard to the matter of the lease and it was contended that these letters amounted to a lease for a term exceeding one year and not having been registered were inadmissible in evidence:

Held, (1) that inasmuch as the Court dealing with the former suit expressly refused to adjudicate upon any of the matters covered by the issues in the subsequent suit, the plaintiffs could not avail themselves of the doctrine of res judicata and the Court was competent to determine the issues on the merits between the parties;

(2) that the contract between the parties was entered into orally and the letters subsequently exchanged between the parties were merely memoranda of a fait accompli and could not, therefore, be excluded from evidence on the ground of want of registration;

(3) that the tenancy was for three years from 1st February 1909 to 31st January 1912 and the plaintiffs had no right to eject the defendants from the premises before the expiry of that period;

(4) that the defendants were liable to pay damages for use and occupation for the period subsequent to 31st January 1912. P MADAN MOHAN LAL v. FIRM OF MESSRS. B. BOROOAH & COMPANY, 11 P. L. R. 1918; 71 P. W. R. 1918 859

—— ss. 11, 47—Mortgage—Redemption, suit for, decided on merits—Second suit for redemption, whether maintainable—Res judicata.

In a suit for redemption of a mortgage a decree was passed under the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act directing delivery of possession of the mortgaged property to the mortgagor and ordering the latter to pay off the mortgage debt by instalments Neither party executed the decree and possession of the property remained with the mortgagee. The mortgagor then mortgaged the property to the present plaintiff, who brought a suit to enforce the mortgage against the mortgagor and the prior mortgagee:

Held, (1) that the suit was practically one for redemption of the first mortgage and could be maintained only if it could be shown that the mortgagor could have maintained a second suit for redemption;

(2) that the first suit having been heard and decided on the merits in respect of the same matter, a second suit for redemption was not maintainable having regard to the provisions of section 11 of the Civil Procedure Code;

(3) that if the suit was to be treated as based on the previous decree, it was barred by section 47 of the Civil Procedure Code. B BAPUJI RAMCHANDRA KULKARNI v. GUJA MHADU DHANGAR, 20 BOM. L. R. 164 908

—— s. 11, O. XXXIV, rr. 1, 2, 3, 10—Mortgage—Redemption suit—Preliminary decree, payment under—Mesne profits, suit for, after date of payment, maintainability of—Remedy of plaintiff—Res judicata.

A suit lies for mesne profits after date of payment under a preliminary decree in a suit for redemption of mortgage, the mortgagor's remedy not being confined to a claim for adjustment of accounts at the time of the passing of the final decree. M VAIRAPPA THEVAN v. SUBBIAH THEVAN, 23 M. L. T. 158; 7 L. W. 269; (1918) M. W. N. 207 251

—— s. 11, O. II, r. 2—Previous suit for possession and interest—Suit dismissed as not maintainable—Second suit for interest, whether barred—Punjab Redemption of Mortgages Act (II of 1913).

Defendant mortgaged some land to the plaintiffs for a certain sum, a part of which was to carry interest. On an application to the Collector under Punjab Act II of 1913, the mortgagor was allowed to redeem the land on payment of the principal only. A suit was then brought by the mortgagees for possession of the mortgaged property and for a declaration of their charge together with interest, which was dismissed on the ground that no civil suit to disturb possession given under Act II of 1913 could lie and that the plaintiffs were not entitled to interest. In a subsequent suit brought by the plaintiffs for interest:

Held, that the finding of the Court in the former suit with regard to interest being superfluous, the present suit for interest was neither res judicata under section 11 nor barred under Order II, rule 2, of the Civil Procedure Code. P RAMJI SHAH v. GHULAM, 22 P. W. R. 1918 983

—— s. 11—Res judicata—Decree against person impleaded as legal representative of deceased defendant, whether binding on persons claiming through deceased.

A suit was brought for specific performance of a contract to sell certain property against the vendor and on his death pending the suit, his widow, daughter-in-law and mother were impleaded as legal representatives. The daughter-in-law did not appear or contest the suit, which was decreed by ordering the widow as legal representative to execute a conveyance. The other defendants being exonerated, the suit was dismissed as against them. In a subsequent suit for mesne profits of the property which remained in the possession of the daughter-in-law after the date of the first suit, she contended that she was in possession as legatee under a Will of the vendor and that as the first suit was dismissed as against her she was not liable:

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

Held, (1) that having been a party to the first suit she should have raised her contentions in that suit;

(2) that the decree passed in that suit against the widow as legal representative of the vendor was binding on all who claimed through him. M PISUPATI VENKATA RANGAYYA v. GANDAVARAPU NARASAMMA, 23 M. L. T. 208; (1918) M. W. N. 195; 8 L. W. 19 852

——— s. 11—Res judicata—Rent suit—Plaintiff's title negatived in previous suit—Subsequent suit, whether maintainable—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII B. C. of 1885), s. 60, applicability of.

Plaintiff sued defendants for rent of certain lands as usufructuary mortgagee thereof. The defendants pleaded that the plaintiff was not entitled to sue for rent inasmuch as his name had not been registered as mortgagee. The question of his title as mortgagee was also put in issue and was decided against him. He subsequently brought another suit for rent for the same period after registration of his name:

Held, (1) that the subsequent suit was barred by res judicata;

(2) that section 60 of the Bengal Tenancy Act had no application to the case, inasmuch as the defendants denied the mortgage in favour of the plaintiff altogether. Pat SHEO CHARAN DHOBI v. BANSI SINGH 129

——— s. 11—Res judicata—Suit by widow against daughter-in-law for share of estate—Previous suit by collaterals compromised by widow, effect of.

In a suit by a Hindu widow against her daughter-in-law for possession of a moiety of the estate alleged to have been left by the former's husband or in the alternative for maintenance, it appeared that the collaterals of the plaintiff's deceased son the husband of the defendant) had sometime previously sued for possession of the entire estate on the allegation that the defendant having become unchaste had forfeited her widow's estate. The present plaintiff, who was impleaded as a defendant in that suit, resisted the claim and eventually effected a compromise with the plaintiffs, according to which she agreed to relinquish her rights in their favour in lieu of certain property to be given to her as absolute owner in the event of the collaterals' suit succeeding. In the event of their defeat, she was to receive the property on the death of the defendant:

Held, that this compromise could not and did not affect the rights of the two widows inter se, and that so far as the plaintiff's claim against her daughter-in-law was concerned, there had been neither an adjudication nor any agreement which could be set up as a bar to the suit, and that, therefore, the rule of res judicata had no applicability to the case. P BHOLI BAI v. CHIMNI BAI, 45 P. W. R. 1918; 23 P. L. R. 1918 92

s. 11, Expl. iv—Res judicata against pro forma defendant.

Where one of several persons interested in a property brings a suit in respect of it, and the other persons interested therein being unwilling to join themselves as plaintiffs in the suit are made pro forma defendants, they cannot, upon the failure of the plaintiff, harass the defendant upon the same cause of action. Pat BISHESHWAR DAYAL SAHU v. BANSROPAN SAHU 546

——— s. 11, Expl. IV—Res judicata, partial 368

——— s. 11, Expl. V, O. II, r. 2, O. XX, r. 12—Res judicata—Suit for possession and mesne profits—Subsequent suit for mesne profits from date of institution of suit up to delivery of possession, maintainability of.

Plaintiff brought a suit for possession and claimed a certain sum for mesne profits. There was a further claim for mesne profits during the pendency of the suit and after decree. The suit resulted in a decree for possession and for a portion of the sum claimed for mesne profits. The Court did not purport to deal with the question of mesne profits during the pendency of the suit and after decree. Plaintiff then brought a suit for mesne profits from the date of the institution of the previous suit up to the date of delivery of possession:

Held, that the suit was maintainable and was not barred either by Explanation V to section 11 or by rule 2 of Order II of the Civil Procedure Code. A MOHAMMED ISHAQ KHAN v MOHAMMED RUSTUM ALI KHAN, 16 A. L. J. 182 88

——— ss. 11, Expl. VI, 91—Injury to plaintiff in exercise of public right—Damages, suit for—Finding as to nature of right—Res judicata

A private individual is not competent to obtain a declaration that a right is a public one, but he is entitled to sue for damages for injuries sustained by him in the exercise of his privileges connected with a public right.

Where the Court gives a finding in such a suit that the right is a public right, it becomes res judicata in a subsequent litigation by virtue of Explanation VI of section 11, Civil Procedure Code. M KHAJI SAYYID YUSUF SAHIB v. EDIGA NARASIMHAPPA, (19 8) M. W. N. 175 367

——— s. 20 659

——— ss. 20, 21—"Cause of action," meaning of—Suit on policy of insurance—Place of suing—Death of assured, whether part of cause of action.

One R sent proposal forms for two policies of life insurance from some place in the District of Chittagong to the head office of the defendant company at Calcutta, and the policies were made out in that office and thence despatched to the assured R R. subsequently died in the District of Noakhali. Thereafter R's son brought a suit in the Munsif's Court at Feni in the District of Noakhali upon the policies issued to R. by the defendant company. Objection was taken at the trial that the Court at Feni had no jurisdiction, but it was overruled and the suit was tried on the merits:

Held, that although the objection as to jurisdiction was taken at the earliest possible opportunity and before the issues were settled, yet having regard to the provisions of section 21 of the Civil Procedure Code and to the fact that evidence had been taken at length in the Feni Court, this was not a case in which the High Court should interfere in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction as no attempt was made to show that the company had been prejudiced in any way by the case being tried at Feni or that the disposal of the suit had been prejudicially affected on the merits.

Per Richardson, J. (Beachcroft, J., not expressing any opinion).—The death of the assured being a part of the plaintiff's cause of action and the death having taken place within the Feni jurisdiction, a part of the cause of action arose there and the Feni Court had jurisdiction to try the case.

The expression 'cause of action' means the whole cause of action, or every fact which must be either admitted or proved before the plaintiff can succeed.

It is not justifiable to interpret the language of section 20, clause (c of the Code of 1908 now in force by reading into it a repealed explanation, viz. explanation III of section 17 of the repealed Civil Procedure Code of 1882. C BENGAL PROVIDENT AND INSURANCE CO. v. KAMINI KUMAR CHOUDHURY, 22 C W. N. 517 694

——— S. 20 (c)—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV 1882), s. 17, Expl. III, —Jurisdiction—Cause of action —Contract, execution of, within jurisdiction, effect of.

Explanation III to section 17 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882 has not been re-enacted in the Code of 908, but owing to the addition of the words "wholly or in part" in section 20 (c) of the latter Code no change has been made in the law.

Where a contract on the basis of which a suit is brought was entered into within the jurisdiction of a certain Court, that Court has jurisdiction to try the suit notwithstanding that the place where the contract was to be performed and the place where the breach alleged in the plaint occurred are both outside such jurisdiction.

The making of the contract is part of the cause of action within the meaning of section 20 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code. P SITA RAM v. RAM CHANDRA, 26 P. R. 1918; 51 P. W. R. 1918 863

——— S. 20 (c)—Suit on contract—Cause of action—Place of suing—Jurisdiction.

Where in a suit on a contract it appears that the place where the contract was made, is not within the jurisdiction of the Court, the Court still has jurisdiction if the place where the contract was to be performed, or where in its performance the money to which the suit relates was expressly or impliedly payable, is within the jurisdiction of the Court. U B MEGHRAJ RAMNIRANJANDAS v. THAKURDAS, 3 U. B. R. (1917) 38 609

—— S. 24—Courts of Small Causes, what are—Small Cause suit transferred from Court of Sub-Judge to Court of Munsif—Munsif's Court, whether Court of Small Causes—Jurisdiction

A Court of Small Causes under section 24 (4) of the Code of Civil Procedure includes Courts vested with Small Cause Court jurisdiction as well as the special Courts constituted under the Provincial Small Causes Courts Act.

A suit of the value of Rs. 140 cognizable by a Court of Small Causes was transferred by the District Judge from the Court of a Subordinate Judge vested with Small Cause powers not exceeding Rs. 500 to the Court of a Munsif with Small Cause powers up to Rs. 100 only:

Held, that the Court of the Munsif to which the suit was transferred must be deemed to be a Court of Small Causes under section 24 (4) of the Code of Civil Procedure so as to permit the trial of the suit by that Court. C MADHU SUDAN GOPE v. BEHARI LALL GOPE, 27 C. L. J. 461 881

——— S. 24—Upper Burma Civil Courts Regulation I of 1896, s. 15—Costs—Appeal as to costs, when maintainable—Order of transfer and costs—Appeal, whether lies.

An appeal does not lie on the question of costs where there has been no appealable decree.

An order passed under the provisions of section 24 of the Code of Civil Procedure, read with section 15 of the Upper Burma Civil Courts Regulation, is not a decree and is not appealable. No appeal, therefore, lies from an order as to costs forming part of such order. U B MA TU v. KUMAR GANGADHAR BAGLA, 3 U. B. R. (1917) 61 690

——— S. 35—Costs—Appellate Court, power of, to interfere with costs awarded by Trial Court—Appeal on question of costs, maintainability of.

Under section 35, Civil Procedure Code, the costs of, and incident to, all suits are in the discretion of the Court and where the primary Court has exercised its discretion in dealing with the costs, it is an unusual course for the Appellate Court to interfere with that discretion of the primary Court.

Where costs are in the discretion of the Judge, the Court of Appeal will assume that the Judge exercised his discretion unless it is satisfied that he has not exercised it. The Appellate Court will not interfere with an exercise of the discretion of the primary Court unless it has proceeded on a manifestly wrong ground

It was never intended by the Legislature that the award of costs by a Court should form the subject of an appeal, unless some question of principle is involved on which that Court failed to exercise its discretion. C SARADENDU MUKERJEE v. CHARU CHANDRA DUTTA, 22 C. W. N. 372 870

——— S. 47 164, 908

——— S. 47, O. XXI, r. 63—Claim allowed —Suit, subsequent, by judgment-debtor against claimant decreed—Sale by judgment-debtor—Re-attachment of property — Claim by judgment-debtor's vendee, dismissal of—Suit to establish claim, maintainability of.

A claim preferred to property attached in execution of the respondent's decree having been allowed, the judgment-debtor sued the claimant to set aside the settlement which was the basis of the claim and obtained a decree for possession. He then sold the property to the appellant. The respondent having re-attached the property, appellant put in a claim and, having failed in it, he filed a separate suit for possession:

Held, (1) that the first attachment was not revived as the result of the judgment-debtor's suit;

(2) that the appellant's suit was not barred by section 47, Civil Procedure Code. M CHAMPAYIL KOPPAN v. KOLASSERI KELAPPAN NAMBIYAR 864

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

——— s. 47—Execution—Decree-holder ordered to furnish security—Order accepting security offered, whether appealable—Security accepted without enquiry into sufficiency—Court, duty of.

An order by which security proffered by the decree-holder for getting delivery of possession of the property forming the subject-matter of the decree is accepted and delivery of possession is directed to be made to the decree-holder is appealable, inasmuch as the order directing delivery of possession is a final order and not an interlocutory or intermediate one.

In an appeal by a judgment-debtor to the High Court it was ordered that on the decree-holder furnishing security in immoveable property, he should be at liberty to proceed with the execution. In accordance with the order the decree-holder proffered securities to which the judgment-debtor took various objections, but the executing Court without entering into the question of the sufficiency of the securities offered accepted the securities and ordered delivery of possession in execution of the decree:

Held, that the executing Court was wrong in accepting the securities without holding any enquiry into their sufficiency and that the case must go back to the executing Court for making the necessary enquiries. C RUDRA NARAYAN JANA v. NABA KUMAR DAS, 22 C. W. N. 657 156

—— s. 47, O. XXI, r. 95—Execution—Decree-holder purchasing at auction, position of—Suit for possession, maintainability of.

When a decree-holder by his own action combines the position of decree-holder and auction-purchaser by purchasing at the auction sale with the permission of the Court, he does not lose his character of a party to the suit, and proceedings in execution are not terminated until he obtains possession of the property, inasmuch as Order XXI, rule 95, of the Civil Procedure Code provides for delivery of possession being enforced in execution of the decree.

Section 47 of the Civil Procedure Code is a bar to a suit for possession by a decree-holder auction-purchaser. N LACHUSA MOTILAL v. MAHERALI RAHIMALI 563

—— s. 47, O. XXI, r. 92—Execution—Sale—Property purchased by decree-holder—Re-transfer, oral, validity of—Possession, suit for, maintainability of—Estoppel, title by.

Defendant, a decree-holder, purchased certain immoveable property belonging to his judgment-debtor in execution of a money-decree. The sale was confirmed, but the defendant afterwards agreed to accept the decretal amount and to re-convey the property to the judgment-debtor. No document was, however, executed and the judgment-debtor sold the property to the plaintiff. The latter then sued for possession of the property:

Held, (1) that the defendant having on confirmation of the sale become absolute owner of the property under Order XXI, rule 92 of the Civil Procedure Code, a re-transfer of the property to the judgment-debtor could only be effected by a registered deed;

(2) that the plaintiff having purchased the property from the judgment-debtor during the pendency of the execution proceedings the purchase was void;

(3) that the plaintiff being the representative of the judgment-debtor, a separate suit for possession was barred by section 47 of the Civil Procedure Code;

(4) that the Court in which the suit was brought not being the Court which passed the decree or in which the decree was executed, the suit could not be treated as an application under section 47 of the Code.

A decree-holder, who is an auction-purchaser, remains a party to the suit for the purposes of section 47 of the Code of Civil Procedure. N DEOBA v. LAXMAN 978

——— s. 47, O. XXI, r. 95—Execution—Sale—Suit by auction-purchaser decree-holder for possession, maintainability of.

A decree-holder who purchases at a sale held in execution of his decree property belonging to his judgment-debtor is in the same position as would be any other purchaser at an auction sale held in execution of a decree. If after confirmation of the sale in his favour such an auction-purchaser fails to obtain from the judgment-debtor possession of the property purchased, he may claim possession not only by an application under Order XXI, rule 95 of the Civil Procedure Code, but also by suit. Section 47 of the Code is not a bar to such a suit and does not apply to such an application. The subject-matter of such a suit does not relate to the "execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree" within the meaning of section 47.

The summary remedy provided for by rule 95 of Order XXI of the Code is concurrent with a remedy by separate suit, and either the one or the other can be availed of by the aggrieved party as the circumstances of a particular case may require. It does not follow that because the summary remedy provided for by rule 95 of Order XXI can be given to the decree-holder purchaser by the executing Court, if he fails to avail himself of that remedy or seeks it, but is unsuccessful, he is precluded from seeking the alternative remedy by regular suit which is open to other auction-purchasers, simply because he happened at one time to be the holder of a decree against the opposite party. P CHOTHA RAM v. KARMON BAI, 8 P. R 1918 169

——— s. 48, applicability of—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 181—Execution, stay of—Revival of antecedent application—Limitation.

Section 48 of the Civil Procedure Code applies only to a fresh application for leave to issue execution. It has no application whatsoever to the case of a revival of an antecedent application for execution which has been in suspense by reason of some bar or which has been stayed pending the determination of subsequent litigation. The limitation applicable to such a case is that provided by Article 181 of the Limitation Act, i. e., three years from the time when the bar is removed. Pat SAKINA BIBI v. GANESH PRASAD, 3 P. L. J. 103; 5 P. L. W. 21 560

——— s. 48, O. XX, r. 11—"Subsequent order," meaning of—Scope of s. 48.

"A subsequent order directing payment of money", in section 48 (b) of the Civil Procedure Code, means a subsequent order made by the Court which made the decree and acting as that Court, and not an order of a Court executing a decree. In all probability the section contemplates orders made under Order XX, rule 11, of the Code.

An order of an executing Court granting time to the judgment-debtor is not a "subsequent order directing payment of money" within the meaning of section 48 of the Civil Procedure Code and does not operate to extend the period of limitation for the execution of the decree.

Section 48 of the Civil Procedure Code does not in a strict sense provide a period of limitation It is an enactment which forbids an order for execution upon a decree which is more than twelve years old A JURAWAN v. MAHABIR DUBE, 16 A L. J. 71; 40 A. 198 24

——— ss. 63, 73, O. XXI, r. 57—Execution—Attachment—Discontinuance of execution case at instance of claimant, effect of—Attachment of property by two Courts—Sale by Court of inferior grade—Procedure—Rateable distribution.

Where an execution case is discontinued, not by reason of default on the part of the decree-holder, but at the instance of an unsuccessful claimant who has instituted a suit to contest the validity of the order in the claim case, the attachment effected at the instance of the decree-holder continues to be in force.

Where the same property is attached in execution of two decrees, one passed by a Court of superior grade and the other by a Court of inferior grade, the sale should be held by the Court of superior grade. Where, however, the Court of inferior grade has actually held the sale in ignorance of the fact that proceedings in execution have already been taken in the Court of superior grade and that the property brought to sale was subject to a legally subsisting attachment effected in the latter Court, the proper procedure is to move the District Judge to transfer the proceeds realised by the sale held by the Court of inferior grade to the Court of superior grade. If this procedure is adopted, full effect is given to the intention of the Legislature. The Court of superior grade in essence adopts the sale held by the Court of inferior grade as if it were a sale held by itself and the sale-proceeds are then rateably distributed in accordance with the provisions of the Code. C NILKANTHA RAI v. GOSTA BEHARI, 27 C. L. J. 145 249

——— s. 73 249

——— s. 91 367

——— s. 92—Suit by alleged gaddinashin of takia to eject trespasser—Trespasser found to be manager of waqf —Sanction of Collector, whether necessary—Alienations by trustee, validity of—Trustee alleging himself to be owner, effect of.

In a suit by the plaintiff for possession and management of waqf property, on the allegations that he was the gaddinashin of the Takia, that the property in dispute was the trust property attached to that institution, that the defendant being a mere trespasser had no sort of right to remain in possession of that property and that the alienations made by her of the waqf property were invalid, it appeared that the property was waqf property and that the defendant was not a trespasser but the trustee and manager thereof:

Held, (1) that upon that finding it was clear that a prayer for defendant's removal would convert the suit into one described in section 92 of the Civil Procedure Code and that there being no consent in writing of the Collector as required by the said section, the prayer for her removal could not be adjudicated upon.

(2) that no issue having been framed by the lower Court as to the necessity for the alienations of the waqf property made by the defendant, they could not be set aside until the alienees had been afforded an opportunity, and had failed, to establish the circumstances which would justify the transactions and render them binding upon the persons interested in the institution.

It was urged that no person other than the duly authorised trustee could alienate the property of a religious trust by sale or mortgage and that as the defendant was never appointed a trustee, the alienations made by her were not binding upon the persons interested in the institution:

Held, that this matter as well as the matter relating to the necessity for the transactions could properly be decided in a suit framed for the purpose of contesting alienations made by a de jure or de facto trustee and that as the plaint did not assign to the defendant the position of a trustee, but described her as a mere stranger to the institution, the lower Court was not called upon to decide these points and the Chief Court was not willing to pronounce any opinion thereon.

Where the father of the defendant was recorded in the revenue papers as the trustee of a shrine and remained in possession in that capacity up to his death, after which the property was held by or on behalf of the defendant:

Held, that the mere fact that after repeatedly describing herself as trustee, the defendant began to claim a higher status, did not alter her real position.

Where property belongs to a religious institution, the person in charge thereof cannot divest himself of his fiduciary position by merely asserting his title thereto. P MUHAMMAD ABDUL KADIR v. HUSSAIN BIBI, 11 P. W. R. 1918 879

——— s. 94 56

——— s. 100, O. XLI, r. 1—Appeal, second—Two decrees in Appellate Court in one case—Appeal, single, whether lies—Court-fee payable.

Where two appellate decrees are passed in one judgment in two cross-appeals arising out of the same case and the appellant in second appeal wants to challenge both of them, he must file two appeals. Pat RAM NARAIN LAL v. HARI KISHEN PRASAD NARAIN, 3 P L. J 96 418

——— ss. 100 (a), 103—Madars High Court Appellate Side Rules, r. 2—Custom or usage, evidence as to, whether question of fact—Appeal, second—High Court, power of, to review evidence of custom—Genuineness of documents, finding on—Full Bench, reference to, of whole case, legality of

By the Full Bench—The findings of an Appellate Court as to instances of usage, the genuineness of documents put forward as regards usage and the credibility of witnesses, are findings of fact and the High Court cannot, in second appeal, review the evidence on these matters and interfere with such findings.

Civil Procedure Code—1903—contd.

Per Wallis, C. J.—The words 'usage having the force of law' in section 100, Civil Procedure Code, are little more than words of amplification and do not give the Court any larger powers of interference with findings as to custom in so far as they are findings of fact, than with any other findings of fact.

Per Sadasiva Aiyar and Phillips, JJ.—It is competent to a Divisional Bench of the High Court to refer to a Full Bench, not merely a question of law but the whole matter of an appeal.

In dealing with second appeals the High Court is bound by the lower Appellate Court's opinion on the reliability of evidence but the value to be attached to the evidence (provided it is not mere opinion evidence) supposing it is accepted as true, and the relevancy of evidence, are questions to be considered by the High Court also. If notwithstanding uncontradicted instances ranging over a long period and recognised judicially in several cases, the lower Appellate Court finds against the existence of a proper custom on the ground that in its opinion the instances are insufficient in number, the High Court is entitled to hold that on the facts found by the lower Appellate Court, the custom is legally established M KUMARAPPA REDDI v. MANAVALA GOUNDAN, 23 M L T. 44 34 M. L. J. 104; 7 L. W. 243; 41 M. 374; (1918) M. W. N. 350 699

—— s. 103 699

—— ss. 107, 151, O. XLI, r. 33—Appellate Court, power of, to vary decree—Estoppel.

In a suit to which a puisne mortgagee was a party the prior encumbrancer prayed for and obtained a decree against the sale-proceeds of a revenue sale. The puisne mortgagee brought two suits, one for a declaration that the recorded proprietor was the benamidar of the purchaser at the sale and that consequently the latter acquired the property subject to encumbrances, and the second to enforce his mortgage against the property. The Court of first instance held that the purchaser was the real owner of the property and decreed both suits in favour of the puisne mortgagee. Against these two decrees the purchaser appealed and the puisne mortgagee appealed against the decree in favour of the prior mortgagee. The High Court heard all the appeals together, and affirming the finding of the Court below dismissed the purchaser's appeals and gave the prior mortgagee a decree against the property in lieu of that against the sale-proceeds:

Held, (1) that inasmuch as on hearing the puisne mortgagee's appeal the High Court had before it all the facts which showed all the circumstances relating to the sale, the Court had abundant power under sections 101 and 151, and Order XLI, rule 33, of the Code of Civil Procedure to vary, as it did, the decree in the prior mortgagee's suit;

(2) that the fact that the puisne mortgagee did not attack the sale in the prior mortgagee's suit did not operate as an estoppel against the puisne mortgagee so as to prevent him from attacking the sale in his own suits and obtaining consequential relief. P C TARINI CHARA SARKAR v. BISHUN CHAND, 23

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

M. L. T. 147; 7 L W. 315; 27 C L. J. 303; 34 M. L. J. 36; 4 P L W. 249; 16 A L. J 271; 22 C. W. N. 505; (1918) M. W. N. 295; 20 BOM L. R 553 304

—— ss. 109, 110, 111, 112, O. XLIV, r. 1—Appeal to His Majesty in Council—Leave to appeal in forma pauperis—Jurisdiction—High Court, power of, to grant leave.

The High Court has no jurisdiction to grant an application for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council in forma pauperis.

Order XLIV of the Civil Procedure Code does not apply to appeals to His Majesty in Council. Rule 1 of the Order contemplates an Appellate Court perusing the judgment of a subordinate Court, and not the Court whose judgment is appealed from perusing its own judgment; the very fact that Order XLIV requires an investigation into the merits of the appeal before allowing the application introduces an element inconsistent with the principle underlying sections 109 and 110 of the Code Pat RAMKISHEN LAL v. MANNA KUMRI, 3 P. L. J. 179 731

—— s. 110—Leave to appeal to Privy Council—Subject-matter of suit, value of—Property directly or indirectly involved—Interest on arrears, whether can be added.

Plaintiff brought a suit to recover arrears of pension from September 1911 to July 1912 together with interest thereon and valued his suit at Rs. 5,445. His suit was dismissed by the first Court but was decreed by the High Court. The defendant applied for leave to appeal to the Privy Council:

Held, (1) that the subject-matter of the suit was not above Rs. 10,000, nor did the decree involve a claim to or question respecting property of the value of Rs 10,000;

(2) that in determining the value of the subject-matter of the suit the interest payable until realisation of the decree could not be added to the amount claimed, nor could the arrears of pension accrued due since the decree be taken into consideration;

(3) that no question respecting future payment of the pension was involved in the decree;

(4) that the value of the properties to be attached in execution of the decree could not be said to have even an indirect connection with the decree. Pat KESHO PRASAD SINGH v SHIVA SARAN LAL, 4 P L W. 240; 3 P. L. J 317 475

—— s. 115, O. I, r. 10 (2), O. XXXI, r. 1—Government of India Act, s 5 (5 & 6 Geo. V, C. 61), s. 107—Addition of parties Suit by administrator—Beneficiary, whether can be added as a co-plaintiff—Revision—High Court, whether can interfere with order refusing to add co-plaintiff

P. as administratrix to the estate of her deceased husband instituted a suit against X J. claiming to be a son adopted by her to her deceased husband, on coming of age, applied to be made a co-plaintiff with P. on the ground that P. was not prosecuting the suit with due diligence In another suit pending between P. and J. P. admitted the factum of J.'s adoption by her but pleaded that she had no authority from her husband to adopt The Trial Court rejected J's application to be added as a party to the suit:

Held, that although J.'s title might not be finally adjudicated in the suit, J. having made out a prima facie case was entitled to be made a party;

(2) that in the matter of addition or substitution of parties the High Court had power to interfere under section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code or section 107 of the Government of India Act C JUGAL KRISHNA MULLICK v. PHUL KUMARI DASSI 564

— — — ss. 115, 151, O. XXI, r. 58 — Mortgage decree, execution of—Attachment, whether necessary—O. XXI, r. 58, objection under, whether can be taken—Court, inherent power of, when to be exercised—Revision—High Court, power of interference of.

An objection having been taken under Order XXI, rule 58, of the Civil Procedure Code to the, attachment of property sold in execution of a mortgage decree, the Court, holding that Order XXI, rule 58, was inapplicable entertained the application under section 151 of the Civil Procedure Code to save the objector the trouble of bringing a regular suit:

Held, that the Court had no jurisdiction to entertain an application or to pass an order upon it and that the Court having entertained the application the High Court had power to interfere under section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code. P RATAN LAL v. BALA PARSHAD, 23 P. W. R. 1918; 58 P. R. 1918 986

s. 115—Revision—High Court, power of interference of 363

— — s. 115 — Revision—High Court, whether can interfere with order allowing withdrawal.

The High Court has power to interfere in revision with an order of a lower Court allowing the plaintiff to withdraw his suit with permission to bring a fresh suit. Pat BISHESWAR AHIR v BRIJRA MISSER, 4 P L. W. 233 406

— s. 115 (c) — Revision—Power of superintendence of High Court when to be exercised—High Courts Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict., C. 104, s. 15.

Per Sanderson, C J., and Walmsley, J.—The High Court cannot, by exercising its powers of superintendence under section 15 of the High Courts Act, 1861, interfere with the decision of a subordinate Court from which no appeal or revision under section 115, Civil Procedure Code, lies to the High Court.

Where a District Judge reversed in appeal an order of a Munsif setting aside a sale under Order XXI, rule 92, Civil Procedure Code, on erroneously holding that the property sold was a ½rd share in a patni whereas it was the undisputed ⅔rd share that was sold, and that the auction-purchaser was a 'new comer' whereas in fact he was a co-sharer in the property, and without coming to any definite conclusion as to the publication of the sale proclamation:

Held, per Curiam (Teunon, J. dissenting).—That the decision of the District Judge was not subject to revision under section 115, clause (c), Civil Procedure Code, as the mistakes upon which he based his judgment, though grave mistakes of fact, were in regard to questions which he had jurisdiction to decide.

Per Teunon, J. (contra).—As the property sold was clearly specified in the sale proclamation as the judgment-debtor's ⅔rd share in the patni and as there was no dispute between the parties as to that share, the decision of the District Judge, based as it was on the imaginary finding that the property sold was a ½rd share, was open to revision by the High Court under section 115 (c), Civil Procedure Code, as it was the duty of the District Judge to decide secundum allegata et probata; although if the parties had been in dispute as to the judgment-debtor's interest in the patni, and if, however erroneously, the District Judge had decided that his interest was not ⅔rds but ½rd, that would have been merely an erroneous decision on a question of fact with which the High Court acting under section 115, Civil Procedure Code, could not interfere C KUMAR CHANDRA KISHORE ROY v. BASAT ALI, 27 C. L. J. 418; 22 C. W. N. 627 763 — — ss. 132, 133—Hindu lady of high family appearing in public, whether can be compelled to appear in witness-box.

An old Hindu lady belonging to a high family, who has abandoned entirely the protection of the purdah and who has no intention of resuming it, ought not to be compelled, having regard to her social position and the feelings of her class, to appear in the witness-box but should get the privilege of being examined on commission, the cost of such commission being costs in the cause.

Section 132, Civil Procedure Code is wide enough to cover the case of such a lady. C ELIAS JOSEPH SOLOMON v. JYOTSNA GHOSHAL, 22 C. W. N 147 157

— — s. 144 — Application for restitution, nature of—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 182.

An application for restitution under section 144 of the Civil Procedure Code, is an application for execution of a decree within the meaning of Article 182, Schedule I of the Limitation Act. P RAM SINGH v. SHAM PARSHAD, 36 P. W. R. 1918; 15 P. L. R. 1918 301

— — s. 149—Deficient Court-fee—Extension of time to make up deficiency—Discretion of Court.

Where insufficient Court-fee has been paid on a memorandum of appeal, the Court will not in its discretion under section 149 of the Civil Procedure Code allow the deficiency to be made up on the day of the hearing unless it is satisfied that some grounds exist for the exercise of its discretion. Of these grounds the principal one is that a bona fide mistake was made. C SAIDUNNESSA v. TEJENDRA CHANDRA DHAR 398

— s. 151 304, 986

— s. 152—Clerical mistakes and slips in decree or order, correction of, during pendency of appeal—Court, power of, to amend—Jurisdiction.

Clerical errors or slips in a decree or order can be corrected by the Court which passed it, although an appeal against the same is pending in a superior Court. The proper Court to correct them is the Court in which the errors were made. M MUTHU BHATTER v. MARITHUNJAYA BHATTAR, 7 L. W. 8 248

— O. I, r. 3—Misjoinder of parties—Suit for possession by heir against several alienees, whether competent—Separate trial of issues affecting different defendants.

A suit for possession on the ground of inheritance can proceed against a number of different alienees. The question is purely one of convenience.

B. the last male owner, died leaving a widow who gifted her late husband's property to her daughters N. and S. Both these made certain alienations and then gifted their properties to their respective husbands. S. was, on her death, succeeded by her daughter's daughter M. On the death of N. her sons sued for possession of the whole of the property alienated by N. and S. and that held by M, alleging that they were the heirs of B the last male owner and that all alienations were unauthorized. They impleaded all the various alienees—the mortgagees and vendees from S. and N. jointly and severally—as defendants:

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

Held, that there was no misjoinder of parties and that the suit could proceed against all the defendants jointly and that any varieties of defences which arose could easily be cured by the successive trial of the issues separately affecting different defendants. P LAL CHAND v. MANOHRI, 64 P. W. R. 1918; 59 P. R. 1918 549

——— O. I, r. 10 (2) 564

——— O. I, r. 10 (2)—Addition of parties—Heirs of original tenant, whether can be added as parties defendants in rent suit brought against one of them.

In a suit for recovery of arrears of rent instituted against one of the heirs of the original tenant whose name was recorded in the landlord's sherista, the remaining heirs of the tenant were on their application added as parties to the suit:

Held, that although the added defendants were not strictly necessary parties to the adjudication of the question arising between the plaintiff and the original defendant, yet they were not improperly added as parties to the suit. C GURU PROSANNA LAHIRI v. SAMIRUDDIN SARKAR 465

——— O. II, r. 2 88, 983

——— O. VI, r. 14—Plaint signed by prisoner in contravention of Jail Regulations, validity of.

A plaint signed or a suit authorised by a man in jail is just as good as any other suit or plaint, although the plaintiff in signing the plaint or authorising the suit contravenes some of the provisions of the Jail Manual. A BISHESHAR NATH v EMPEROR, 16 A. L. J. 64; 40 A. 147 28

——— O. VII, r. 7—Pleadings—Relief, lesser than that asked for, whether can be granted.

A plaintiff is always entitled to a lesser relief of the same kind as he has asked for. N GHOOTI v. SITKU 557

——— O. VII, rr. 14, 18—Document not filed with plaint nor within time fixed by Court, admissibility of.

The plaintiff brought a suit for enhancement of rent on the basis of a kabuliyat which was not filed with the plaint as required by Order VII, rule 14, Civil Procedure Code, but was filed in Court after the time within which parties were directed by the Court to file their documents, and was, therefore, not received in evidence at the hearing of the suit:

Held, that as there was no doubt that the document was in existence at the date of the institution of the suit, and also having regard to the proceedings which had taken place in the suit, the rejection of the document by the Courts below was not a proper or judicial exercise of the discretion conferred by Order VII, rule 18. C JOGENDRA KUMAR GHOSE v. ANANDA CHANDRA MOZUMDAR 21

——— O. VII, r. 18 21

——— O. VIII, r. 6 428

——— O. IX, r. 5 693

——— O. XII, r. 6 145

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

——— O. XII, r. 6—Portion of claim admitted, effect of Judgment on admission—Appeal—Discretion exercised by Court, when open to correction in appeal.

A Court has jurisdiction under Order XII, rule 6, Civil Procedure Code, to enter judgment for the plaintiff in respect of a portion of the claim admitted by the defendant, with liberty to the plaintiff, to proceed with the suit in the ordinary way as to remainder of the claim.

Per Mookerjee, J.—A judgment on admission by the defendant under Order XII, rule 6, Civil Procedure Code, is not a matter of right, it is in the discretion of the Court, so that if a case involves questions which cannot be conveniently disposed of on a motion under the rule, the Court may, in the exercise of its discretion, refuse the motion. The discretion is judicial and an erroneous exercise thereof may be open to correction by a Court of Appeal which, however, on well-established principles, will be slow to interfere, unless either of the parties has been manifestly and unfairly prejudiced.

Order XII, rule 6, Civil Procedure Code, cannot be restricted in its operation to cases where the plaintiff accepts the admission of the defendant in its entirety or where the claim is severable into distinct portions and the defendant admits his liability in respect of one such fragment of the claim. C PREMSUK DAS ASSARAM v. UDAIRAM-GUNGABUX, 22 C. W. N 204; 45 C. 138 233

——— O. XX, r. 11 24

——— O. XX, r. 12 88

——— O. XXI, r. 11 220

——— O. XXI, rr. 13, 17 (2)—Execution, application for—Supplementary list of properties, whether allowable after registration of application—Fresh application, whether can be treated as continuation of previous application.

An application for execution, which was on the face of it in accordance with law, was subsequently, on objection taken by the judgment-debtor, discovered to be defective, inasmuch as against the properties specified in the list furnished under Order XXI, rule 13, of the Civil Procedure Code proceedings could not be taken. The decree-holder then applied to the Court requesting it to accept a further and supplementary list of the properties and praying that execution should proceed by attachment and sale of those properties:

Held, that even after the admission and registration of the original application for execution it was open to the decree-holder to ask the Court to proceed against the properties specified in his supplementary list, which should be taken as part of the original application under the provisions of Order XXI, rule 17 (2), Civil Procedure Code, or if a fresh application were at all necessary that application should be treated as one made in continuation of the application first presented so that no question of limitation could arise in the case. C GNANENDRA KUMAR RAI CHOWDHURY v. SHAYAMA SUNDER JEN, 27 C. L. J. 398; 22 C. W. N. 540 553

——— O. XXI, rr. 15, 19 (b)—Execution in case of cross-claims under the same decree.

Plaintiff, a co-sharer landlord, brought a suit for rent impleading several persons as defendants to the suit, of whom defendants Nos. 1 to 14 held a dual position being tenants and co-sharer landlords, Nos. 15 to 21 were purely tenants and Nos. 22 to 41 were co-sharer landlords. All the co-sharer landlords were made pro forma defendants A decree was made for Rs. 76 and odd in favour of the plaintiff and for Rs. 380 and odd in favour of the co-sharer landlords, the pro forma defendants. The pro forma defendants Nos 34 to 38, who were also tenants defendants Nos 1 to 5, applied for execution of the decree against the defendants Nos. 7 to 21 for Rs. 285 and odd, which was the whole balance of the decree passed in favour of the pro forma defendants, Rs 95 and odd having been realized in a previous execution proceeding:

Held, that such an execution was maintainable, but the Court under the provisions of Order XXI, rule 19 (b), of the Civil Procedure Code, should first ascertain what amounts were due from each party to the other and thereafter allow execution to proceed for the difference, making such order as it deemed necessary for protecting the interests of the persons who had not joined in the application for execution. C RAM LAL MANDAL v. ASUTOSH MANDAL 445

——— O. XXI, r. 17 (2) 220, 553

——— O. XXI, r. 19 (b) 445

——— O. XXI, r. 32—Order to furnish accounts, whether injunction - Failure to obey order, consequences of.

A preliminary decree in a suit for accounts directing the defendant to furnish and render accounts is not an "injunction" within the meaning of rule 32 of Order XXI of the Code of Civil Procedure and the failure of the defendant to furnish accounts does not entitle the Court to take proceedings under that section. Pat ARJUN SUIE v. EMPEROR, 3 P. L. J. 106; 19 CR. L. J. 385 737

——— O. XXI, r. 38 Execution—Warrant of arrest, whether can be executed outside jurisdiction of execution Court—Jurisdiction

The jurisdiction to issue a warrant for the arrest of a judgment-debtor in execution of a decree is territorial, that is to say, a warrant of arrest issued by an executing Court must be executed, if at all, within the limits of the jurisdiction of that Court, but the fact that the judgment-debtor, at the time of the application, does not reside within the jurisdiction is not necessarily a sufficient reason for refusing to issue a warrant. In such a case, however, a time must be fixed for the return of the warrant. Pat KRISHNA PRASAD v. BIDYA NANDA, 3 P. L. J. 95 296

——— O. XXI, rr. 43, 54, 55—Attachment of propety, order for, after hearing judgment-debtor's objections - Application, subsequent, for raising attachment, maintainability of.

Where an order for attachment of the judgment-debtor's property is passed after hearing his objections, the order is conclusive and debars the judgment-debtor from raising other objections in the same proceedings. M MALLIDI DORAYYA v. SATTI VEERAYYA, (1918) M. W. N. 143 4

——— O. XXI, rr. 54, 55 4

——— O. XXI, rr. 54, 90—Execution—Attachment—Sale proclamation, irregular—Under-valuation, effect of—Application to set aside sale—Conspicuous part of property, what is.

Where an under-valuation of the property to be sold made in the sale-proclamation is obviously a gross misrepresentation, the sale will be set aside.

Where a right of fishing which extended over 138 villages and the annual income realised from which was over Rs. 1,000 was described in the sale proclamation merely by a tauzi number and a name, the value of the estate being given at Rs. 2,500, and it was sold for that sum:

Held, that the sale proclamation was materially irregular both in the description of the property and in the valuation put upon it and that for that reason alone the sale should be set aside.

Where the property to be sold consists of a right of fishing over a length of stream extending over several miles, it is not possible to say that any particular spot on the stream is a conspicuous part of the property within the meaning of rule 54 of Order XXI of the Code of Civil Procedure. In such circumstances the principle of the rule must be applied and a copy of the order must be conspicuously displayed at various portions of the estate In addition the sale should be advertised either in the local newspapers or in the Gazette Pat CHATTARPATT SINGH v. SURENDRA NATH SINGH, (1918) PAT. 23 412

——— O. XXI, rr. 56, 57.

Whether the dismissal of an execution petition has the effect of removing the attachment depends upon the facts of each case. M CHIVIKULA VENK TASUBIAH v. GOLLAPUDI VENKATESWARULU, (1917) M. W. N. 816 566

——— O. XXI, r. 57 249

——— O. XXI, r. 58 265

——— O. XXI, r. 58.

Where property is directed to be sold under a mortgage decree, no objection under Order XXI, rule 58, of the Civil Procedure Code, can be entertained to the attachment of such property, the reason being that the property directed to be sold under a decree of that kind does not require to be attached by way of execution and the mere fact that there has been an unnecessary attachment does not make the rule applicable

Order XXI, rule 58, Civil Procedure Code, applies only to attachments in execution of a decree and not to attachments made before decree. P RATAN LAL v. BALA PARSHAD, 23 P. W. R. 1918; 58 P. R. 1918 986

——— O. XXI, rr. 58, 59, 60—Claim proceedings—Order allowing claim conditionally, validity of—Revision.

A Court has no jurisdiction to make an order allowing a claim preferred under Order XXI, rule 58, Civil Procedure Code, to a property attached in execution of a decree, conditional on the claimant paying a certain sum to the decree-holder, on the ground that in the conveyance by which the claimant purchased the property there was an undertaking on his part to pay that sum to the decree-holder as part of the consideration. If such a claimant is in possession of the property on his own account under title of a conveyance executed in his favour by the judgment-debtor, his claim should be allowed and allowed unconditio-

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

ally. C KAMALA KANTA SEN v. DURGA KUMAR SEN 1007

—— O. XXI, r. 58—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch I, Art 11, scope of—Objection, dismissal of, without investigation—Suit to establish right, limitation for—Non-production of evidence, effect of—Inquiry into objection, materials for.

An objection under Order XXI, rule 58, of the Civil Procedure Code, if dismissed without investigation, takes the case of the objector out of the operation of the one year's rule of limitation prescribed by Article 11, Schedule I, of the Limitation Act for the establishment of his right by a suit

The only order under Order XXI, rule 58, upon which the character of finality is impressed, is an order made upon enquiry It does not follow, however, that merely because the claimant does not advance evidence or is absent, there are no materials before the Court to enable it to inquire into the matter.

Where, therefore, plaintiff made an objection under Order XXI, rule 58, the correctness of which was disputed by the opposite party, and no evidence having been produced to make out the truth of the claim, the Court dismissed the objection and the plaintiff brought a suit to establish his right more than a year after the date of the order:

Held, that though the plaintiff produced no evidence in support of his objection, it did not follow that there was no material on the record to enable the Judge to dispose of the objections, which could not, therefore, be said to have been decided without investigation and that as the plaintiff failed to bring a suit to establish his right within one year from the date of the order, his claim was barred under Article 11, Schedule I of the Limitation Act. A GOKUL v. MOHRI BIBI, 16 A. L. J. 716 1005

—— O. XXI, r. 63 265, 551, 864

—— O. XXI, r. 63—Objection dismissed without evidence being recorded, whether bars declaratory suit—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 11.

Plaintiff filed an objection to the attachment of a share in a village in respect of which he held two registered mortgages. On the date fixed for evidence the scribe of one of the mortgage-deeds was the only witness present for the objector, who, however, did not examine him. An adjournment was refused and the case was closed with the result that the objection was dismissed. Plaintiff instituted a suit for a declaration more than one year after the dismissal of the objection It was urged that the suit was barred under Article 11 of the Limitation Act:

Held, that as there was really no investigation under the objection the case did not fall within the one year period laid down by Article 11 of the Limitation Act and that the suit was, therefore, within time N NANHU v. MALLOO 528

— O. XXI, r. 66—Notice, provision for, whether mandatory Failure to give notice, effect of.

The provisions for notice under Order XXI, rule 66, of the Civil Procedure Code, are directory and not mandatory: they have not been enacted for the benefit of the judgment-debtor but with a view to ascertain the exact rights which should be set forth in the proclamation for sale. N KRISHNAJI v. BALIRAM 252

— — O. XXI, r. 90 412, 885

— — — O. XXI, rr. 91, 92, 93—Execution—Sale—Property sold twice over—Suit by second purchaser to recover purchase-money, maintainability of.

Where the property of a judgment-debtor has once been sold by Court-auction, he has no interest in the property subsequent to the sale and a purchaser at a second sale of the same property, therefore, acquires no interest by his purchase and is entitled to maintain a suit for the refund of the purchase-money paid by him against all the creditors of the judgment-debtor to whom payments have been made out of that money. A GIRDHAR DAS v SIDHESHWARI PRASAD NARAIN SINGH, 16 A. L. J. 236 697

—— O. XXI, r. 92 978

—— O. XXI, r. 95 169, 563

—— O. XXI, r. 96—Symbolical possession and paper delivery, distinction between.

Symbolical possession is given only in cases where the party in actual possession is entitled to remain in such possession as in cases of delivery under Order XXI, rule 95, Civil Procedure Code, and should not be confounded with cases where a party is entitled to actual possession but obtains only what is called a paper delivery i e., where he gets no possession at all M GOVINDASAMI PILLAI v. PETHAPERUMAL CHETTY 839

—— O. XXII, rr. 3, 5—Representatives of deceased party, conflicting claims by, decision on—Duty of Court.

When a question arises as to who are the representatives of a deceased party to a suit or proceeding, it is obligatory on the Court to decide it. M SUBRAMANIA IYER v. MUTHU VAITHILINGA, 1918) M. W. N. 198 987

— — O. XXII, r. 4—Death of respondent—Application for bringing legal representative on record not made within limitation—Appellant living at great distance from respondent—Sufficient cause.

One of the respondents in an appeal died on the 7th April 1915. An application to bring his legal representative on the record was not made till the 3rd December. It appeared from the affidavit of the appellant that the deceased lived in Multan City while the appellant himself lived in a village in Muzaffargarh District and that, therefore, he did not know of the death of the respondent till shortly before he made the application:

Held, that the appellant had sufficient cause for not making the application within the prescribed period of limitation. P ALLAH YAR v. THAKAR DAS, 46 P. W. R. 1918; 24 P. L R 1918 9

—— O. XXII. r, 5 987

— — O. XXII, r. 6, O. XXIII, r. 1—Death of defendant before judgment—Judgment, whether can be pronounced—Withdrawal of suit, whether can be allowed

The provisions of Order XXII, rule 6, of the Civil Procedure Code, though they cover the case where a judgment is delivered in ignorance of the fact that a party has died between the conclusion of the hearing and the delivery of judgment, also provide for the delivery of judgment where the Court is aware of such death, and they make it clear that the death of a party is not sufficient cause for refusing to deliver judgment or allowing the withdrawal of a suit which has been completed in every respect except for such delivery of judgment. U B MA KIN NYUN v. MA TIN, 3 U. B. R. (1917) 46 620

——— O. XXIII, r. 1.

The provisions of Order XXIII, rule 1, of the Civil Procedure Code should not be arbitrarily applied. U B MA KIN NYUN v. MA TIN, 3 U. B. R. (1917) 46 620

——— O. XXIII, r. 1—Withdrawal of suit with liberty to bring fresh suit—Formal defect.

Where the defendant sets up a plea that there is a formal defect in the plaint, the Court has jurisdiction to pass an order under Order XXIII, rule 1, of the Civil Procedure Code. Pat BISHESWAR AHIR v. BRIJRA MISSER, 4 P. L. W. 233 406

O. XXIII, r. 1—Withdrawal of suit with liberty to file fresh suit, petition for—Order, construction of—Leave granted by implication.

Where, on a petition praying for withdrawal of a suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit, the Court simply endorsed the word 'permitted':

Held, that the order should be construed as having impliedly granted leave to file a fresh suit. M KEELANGOTI NARAYANA TANTRI v. NAGAPPA, 34 M. L. J. 515 889

——— O. XXIII, r. 1—Withdrawal of suit with permission to bring fresh suit on payment of costs, effect of—Second suit, maintainability of, without payment of costs—Order of withdrawal, form of.

Where a plaintiff is allowed to withdraw a suit with permission to bring a fresh suit, the payment of the costs of the first suit being made a condition precedent to the institution of a fresh suit, and a second suit is instituted without payment of such costs, the suit is maintainable provided the costs are paid before the suit comes on for trial.

In such cases until the costs are paid the permission is not operative and, therefore, there is no withdrawal with liberty to bring a fresh suit, the result being that until there is such a withdrawal the former suit remains pending and is under section 10 of the Civil Procedure Code a bar to the trial of the second suit.

The order allowing withdrawal of the suit in such cases should limit the time within which costs should be paid and should go on to direct that on failure to pay costs within that time, the original suit shall stand dismissed with costs. Pat KULDIP SINGH v. KULDIP CHOUDHURI, 3 P. L. J. 63; 4 P L W 134 79

——— O. XXIII, r. 3 145

——— O. XXIII, r. 3, O. XXXII, rr. 6, 7—Adjustment of decree—Agreement to adjust by minor, enforceability of—Minor, suit against—Compromise by guardian without leave of Court, validity of.

Under Order XXXII, rule 7 (2), of the Civil Procedure Code an agreement or compromise entered into by the guardian of a minor without leave of the Court is voidable against all parties other than the minor.

Order XXIII, rule 3, of the Civil Procedure Code which relates to a compromise of a suit is inapplicable to execution proceedings.

Plaintiff obtained a decree for possession of a field and for mesne profits against a minor defendant. He subsequently agreed to sell the field to the minor judgment-debtor at a certain price, but the transfer was not completed:

Held, (1) that this did not amount to an adjustment of the decree but was only an agreement to adjust;

(2) that there being nothing to show that the decree-holder gave up his rights under the decree upon the mere execution of the agreement, the contract was an executory one and was not capable of being specifically enforced by the minor for want of mutuality N SAKHARAM v. BHIVRABAI 164

——— O. XXX, r. 1 Suit by firm—Name of firm—Misdescription

In India it is a common practice for a firm to be known by the name of father and son, even after both are dead and the business is carried on by the son's son.

Where a firm continues to be known by its old name, but the name of the actual head of the firm is sometimes added to the old name, the omission of such addition from the name of the firm in a suit by the firm does not amount to a misdescription. P CHELA RAM-SANT RAM v. KISHAN CHAND, 3 P. W. R. 1918; 155 P. L. R. 19 7 283

——— O. XXX, r. 4 911

——— O. XXX, r. 9—Party, whether can be both plaintiff and defendant.

The rule of procedure observed by the common law Courts in England that the same individual, even in different capacities, cannot be both a plaintiff and a defendant is not applicable to India as Order XXX, rule 9, really contemplates suits between the same individuals in different capacities. M VELLAYAPPA MOOTHAN v. KRISHNA MOOTHAN, 34 M. L. J. 32 4 .8

— O. XXXI, r. 1 564

——— O. XXXII, rr. 6, 7 164

——— O. XXXIII, rr. 1, 5 (b)—Application for permission to sue as pauper by married woman—Husband's means, whether can be taken into consideration.

Where a married woman applies for permission to sue as a pauper, the real point in issue is whether she herself is a pauper within the meaning of rule 1 of Order XXXIII of the Civil Procedure Code, and the fact that her husband has property is not sufficient proof that the applicant herself has property from which Court-fees in the case can be paid. Pat SHARFUNNESSA v. NAZMI KHANUM, 3 P. L. J 178 723

— O. XXXIII, r. 5 723

——— O. XXXIV, rr. 1, 2, 3, 10 251

——— O. XXXVIII, rr. 1 to 6—Attachment before judgment—Procedure—General allegation against defendant, whether sufficient

When a party seeks to obtain an order of attachment before judgment, he must by definite evidence satisfy the Court that there is reasonable cause for believing that the judgment-debtor is about to dispose of the whole or part of his property with a view to defeating his creditors It is not sufficient to make only general allegations. Pat KHOKA MARWARI v. RAMCHANDRA MARWARI 240

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

——— O. XXXVIII, rr. 9, 11—Attachment before judgment, whether ceases on dismissal of suit —Appeal, whether revives order of attachment.

An attachment before judgment comes to an end when the suit is dismissed.

In order to avoid all possible doubt and difficulty, the Court should when dismissing a suit make an order under Order XXXVIII, rule 9, Civil Procedure Code, withdrawing the attachment before judgment. But even if an order directing withdrawal of attachment is not made, on the dismissal of the suit, the attachment before judgment ceases to exist, and it does not revive when an appeal is lodged.

In a suit brought by the plaintiff the property of the defendant was attached before judgment. The Trial Court dismissed the suit without making any order as to the withdrawal of the attachment. On appeal, the suit was decreed In the interval the property attached was transferred by a private sale. The decree-holder then applied for the execution of his decree by the sale of the property without applying for its re-attachment:

Held, that as the property had ceased to be under attachment after the dismissal of the suit by the Trial Court, the Court had no jurisdiction to direct it to be sold without being first attached. C ABDUL RAHAMAN v. AMIR SHARIF 229

——— O. XXXVIII, r. 11 229

——— O. XXXIX, r. 2—Injunction—Person not party to suit, whether can be summoned

A Court has no jurisdiction to issue an injunction against a person not a party to the suit, or to summon before it any person not a party to the injunction. Pat MALHIUDDIN AHMAD v. ATHAR HOSSAIN 496

——— O. XXXIX, r. 2, scope of Injunction, disobedience of—Prohibitory orders, enforcement of.

Orders passed under rule 2 of Order XXXIX, Civil Procedure Code, are not orders enforcing the injunction, but are really orders punishing a party for past disobedience.

Clause 3 of rule 2 of Order XXXIX applies to injunctions prohibiting the doing of or restraining from doing certain acts.

Clause 3 is independent of and is not controlled by the provisions of rule 4 of the Order.

Order XXXIX must be read with section 94 and the provision for punishment for disobedience applies to cases falling under either. M VIDYAPURNA THIRTHASWAMI v. VICAR OF SURATKAL CHURCH, 7 L. W. 328 56

——— O. XLI, r. 1 418

——— O. XLI, rr. 4, 33—Appellate Court, power of, to vary decree in favour of persons who do not appeal.

Except under Order XLI, rule 4, Civil Procedure Code, an Appellate Court cannot vary a decree of a lower Court as regards its adjudication on the rights and liabilities of the parties who have not joined in the appeal and who are not parties to the litigation in the Appellate Court Order XLI, rule 33, Civil Procedure Code, does not apply to a person who is not a party to the appeal. C HARIDAS DEY v KAILASH CHANDRA BOSE 480

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

O. XLI, r. 4—Mortgage suit—Appeal by one of several defendants—Appellate decree, effect of.

In a case in which one only of several defendants appeals, the result of the appeal will enure to the benefit of the other defendants only if the interests of the other defendants are inseparable from the interests of the defendant-appellant.

A decree in a mortgage suit made several properties liable for the satisfaction of the mortgage debt. One of the defendants appealed and was released from liability under the mortgage, on the ground that by a revenue sale the property claimed by him had passed to him free of all incumbrances:

Held, that the result of the appeal was to free only the property in which the defendant-appellant had an interest, leaving untouched the decree of the original Court in so far as the interests of the other defendants were concerned. Pat MAHENDRA KOER v. SAT NARAIN LAL, 3 P. L. J. 166 762

——— O. XLI, r. 10—Application for security for costs, when to be made.

Applications for security for costs must be made promptly, not only on the ground that the respondent should apply for security for costs before he incurs them but also on the ground that it is unreasonable that security should not be applied for till the appellant has incurred costs of the appeal.

Where, therefore, an appeal was preferred on the 17th July 1913 and was admitted on 11th October 1913 and the application for security for costs was not made till the 29th March 1917, when the appellant had incurred all the costs of printing the paper-book and engaging Counsel and the appeal had even been fixed for hearing for no fewer than four times and had been actually heard on the 3rd January 1917, when the Court decided that the appeal in forma pauperis could not be entertained and directed the appellant to pay the Court-fee leviable on the memorandum of appeal, which order was also complied with on the 26th February 1917, more than a month before the application was made:

Held, that the application was a belated one and could not be entertained. P DALIP KOER v. JAGIR SINGH, 41 P. W. R. 1918; 20 P L R 1918 23

— O. XLI, rr. 23, 25, O. XLIII, r. 1 (u)—Appeal—Pleadings and proof, variance between—Appellate Court, whether can raise new point —Remand for taking evidence and decision on new point—Appeal, whether lies.

In a suit brought by the plaintiff to establish her right of way over certain lands belonging to the defendant, the claim was based either on prescription under section 26 of the Limitation Act or on necessity. The Trial Court dismissed the suit on the ground that the plaintiff had failed to prove her case. On appeal the Subordinate Judge, although he concurred with the Trial Court in holding that on the evidence on the record the plaintiff had failed to prove that she was entitled to a right of way either on the basis of prescription or on the basis of necessity, went on to discuss the question whether plaintiff had a right founded either on custom or grant or some right to use the way as a village road or as a public road, and remanded the case to the Court of first instance to be re-heard not only on the evidence already on the record but on such further evidence as the parties might desire to adduce:

Held, (1) that the order of remand must be set aside and the suit remitted to the Court of Appeal in order that the appeal to that Court might be finally disposed of with reference to the pleadings and the proof;

(2) that although this was not a case in which it was, strictly speaking, open to the Court of Appeal to make an order under rule 23 of Order XLI, Civil Procedure Code, yet as the order appeared to be in form and substance an order under that rule and not under rule 25, an appeal lay against it. C BASEEMATI DEBI v. TARIT BASANI DASSI 416

——— O. XLI, r. 25 416

——— O. XLI, r. 27 (b)—Appellate Court, power of, to admit additional evidence.

Order XLI, rule 27 (b), of the Civil Procedure Code does not mean that in order to enable the Appellate Court to pronounce judgment in favour of a particular party additional evidence should be admitted in appeal; it means only that where it is impossible to pronounce judgment at all on the evidence the Court may call for a document.

Where the plaintiff on whom the onus lay failed to discharge it owing to the non-production of a document which it was in his power to produce, but for the production of which he took no steps:

Held, that the provisions of Order XLI, rule 27 (b), of the Civil Procedure Code could not be used in his favour and that he could not be allowed to produce the document in appeal. Pat KALIKA DUTT MANDAR v. TULSI MANDAR, 3 P. L. W. 385 670

——— O. XLI, r. 33 304, 480

——— O. XLI, r. 33, scope of.

Order XLI, rule 33, of the Civil Procedure Code gives to an Appellate Court power to pass any decree and make any order which ought to have been passed or made, the object of the rule being manifestly to enable the Court to do complete justice between the parties to the appeal; but the provision is not intended to enable a defendant to obtain for a plaintiff, not a party to the appeal, a relief which the latter never asked for. N RAO VINAYAK v. LAXMAN, 14 N. L. R. 56 51

——— O. XLIII, r. 1 (m), O. XII, r. 6, O. XXIII, r. 3—Appeal from order rejecting petition asking for judgment and decree on defendants' admission, maintainability of.

Orders rejecting separate petitions filed by the plaintiff and the defendants, by which the plaintiff prays for judgment and decree against the defendants and the defendants state that they consent to a decree being made against them, are not appealable under the Civil Procedure Code, unless such petitions are presented and dealt with in the Court on the footing that they taken together amount to a lawful agreement or compromise within the meaning of rule 3 of Order XXIII, Civil Procedure Code. C PRASANNA DEB RAIKAT v. DARPA NARAIN SINGH 145

——— O. XLIII, r. 1 (u) 416

——— O. XLIV, r. 1 731

——— O. XLVII, r. 1—Review—Mistake of law, whether ground for review—Any other sufficient reason.

A mere mistake of law is not in itself a sufficient mistake or error apparent on the face of the record so as to form a ground for review of judgment.

Where the mistake arises from the conduct of the applicant for review, the mistake cannot even be pleaded as "any other sufficient reason" within the meaning of Order XLVII, rule 1, Civil Procedure Code.

The defendants in a partition suit preferred an appeal against the preliminary decree and the plaintiff preferred cross-objections to the same. The appeal was dismissed and the cross-objections were allowed. The defendants then applied for a review on the ground that their appeal was incompetent under section 97, so that the cross-objections of the plaintiff should not have been allowed:

Held, that the discretion of the Court to grant a review should not be exercised in this case inasmuch as owing to the applicants' own negligence, their appeal was argued and the cross-objections were allowed. C HAZRA SARDAR v. KUNJA BEHARI NAG CHOUDHURY 161

——— O. XLVII, r. 5—Review, jurisdiction of one of two Judges constituting Division Bench of High Court to hear application for.

Want of objection by or consent of the parties to the exercise of jurisdiction by a Court will not give a jurisdiction to the Court which it does not possess under the law.

During the absence on leave of one of two Judges of a High Court constituting a Division Bench, the other Judge has no jurisdiction to hear an application for review of its decree, unless the former Judge has ceased to be a member of the Court or is precluded by absence or other cause, for a period of six months next after the application, from considering the decree to which the application refers. C JAGAT CHANDRA ACHARJI v. SYAMA CHARAN BHATTACHARJEE, 22 C. W. N. 550 999

——— Sch. II, para. 1—Arbitration—Court acting as arbitrator—Award, finality of—Appeal, whether lies.

The general principle is that an award is final and cannot be questioned except upon such grounds, as corruption or an illegality apparent upon the face of the award, as are set out in the Second Schedule to the Code of Civil Procedure, and there is no reason for departing from the principle where the Court itself has been appointed and has accepted the office of arbitrator.

Where the Court itself is appointed to act as an arbitrator, no separate award need be passed inviting the parties to put in objections before passing a decree: such an award in itself is a decree.

Where the parties to a suit agreed that after the Judge had examined the documentary evidence and inspected the ground he should give his decision without any witnesses being called, and that they would abide by his decision:

Held, that the decision was in the nature of an award and that no appeal lay against it. U B MAUNG KALA v. MAUNG MEIK, 3 U. B R. (1917) 36 622

——— ——— para. 17—Application to file agreement for reference—Death of some arbitrators before application—Agreement, whether can be filed.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—concld.

An agreement to refer to arbitration becomes ipso facto inoperative by the death of an arbitrator before the agreement is made a rule of the Court.

Where, therefore, five arbitrators were named in an agreement to refer to arbitration and two of them had died before an application was made for the filing of the agreement in Court:

Held, that the agreement became incapable of performance and could not be filed in Court. P MOHAN LAL v. DAMODAR DAS 866

Commissioner for local investigation, remuneration of, whether can be disallowed by District Judge.

The District Judge has no power to disallow a portion of the remuneration claimed by a Commissioner for local investigation in connection with a suit pending in the Court of the Subordinate Judge. The matter is one which must be dealt with by the Subordinate Judge in whose Court the suit is pending. C PANCHANAN SEN v. MADHU SUDAN MALLIK 496

Commitment to Sessions, considerations governing—Government resolution, whether binding on Magistrate.

When a Magistrate comes to consider whether he shall or shall not commit a case to the Court of Session, he has to consider the gravity of the offence, the punishment with which in his opinion it ought to be met and the section under which he charges the accused person. He may consider any special difficulties in the case, or that it is a matter of some peculiar public importance, and other matters, such as the wishes of the parties. But a Magistrate must not determine this important matter, whether he is to commit the case or to try it himself, solely by the wish of the parties and the terms of a Government resolution. No resolution whatever that the Executive Government has issued can properly control or determine the discretion of a Magistrate in such a matter; for the Government have no authority whatever to interfere with this discretion, which is imposed on the Magistrate by the law and must be exercised by him. B EMPEROR v. BHIMAJI VENKAJI NADGIR, 20 BOM. L. R. 89; 19 CR. L. J. 342; 42 B. 172 454

Common land—Shamilat abadi—Co-sharers, rights of—Co-sharer building on shamilat —Injunction, suit for—Damage.

The mere circumstance of a building being erected on common land without the consent of the co-sharers, and even despite their protest, is not sufficient in itself to entitle the aggrieved co-sharers to claim the demolition of the building so erected, unless it can be shown that the erection of the building has caused such material and substantial injury as cannot be remedied on a partition of the joint land. P MAJJU v. TEJA SINGH, 29 P. R. 1918 844

Companies Act (VII of 1913), s. 246, r. 53, forms Nos. 34, 35—Liquidation—Call, order for—Procedure—Notice, form of.

Every application by the liquidators of a Company to the Court to make a call upon the contributories must be made by a petition, and notice in form No. 34 must be served four clear days before the date of the hearing on each contributory, unless the Judge directs that personal service be dispensed with and advertisement in form No. 35 be substituted therefor. Where the latter course is adopted, the contributories must be given sufficient time to appear and show cause against the order being made. P GIRJA NANDAN SINGH v. NATIONAL INSURANCE AND BANKING CO, LTD, 1 P. R. 1918 139

Company—Liquidation—Deposit receipt in name of several joint holders—Liquidator, whether bound to pay dividend to some holders.

Where a fixed deposit receipt issued by a Bank which has since gone into liquidation is in the name of several persons and is not payable to "either or survivor", the liquidator is not bound to pay the dividend on the receipt to any one or more of the joint holders of the receipt without obtaining a discharge from all the holders. P GOKAL CHAND v. OFFICIAL LIQUIDATORS, DOABA BANK, LIMITED, 28 P. R. 1918; 47 P. W. R. 1918 848

Compensation, assessment of, mode of 923

Confession of co-accused, whether corroboration —Material corroboration, what amounts to.

The confession of a co-accused does not rank as corroboration of the statement of the approver. P GURDIT SINGH v. EMPEROR, 9 P. W. R. 1918 CR.; 19 CR. L. J. 439 967

———, retracted, use of, against person making it and against co-accused—Corroboration.

Where it is a question of using a confession against a co-accused and the Court is not prepared to accept the confession per se as sufficient, the corroboration ought to be of the kind that not only confirms the general story of the crime but also unmistakably connects the co-accused with the crime. P EMPEROR v. JAWAI, 19 W. R. 1918 CR.; 19 CR. L. J. 275 179

Construction of document 227, 523

Construction of document.

Where the language in which a deed is written is not the language of a trained draftsman or a skilled conveyancer but the draft is prepared by an amateur or a layman, all that is necessary to interpret such a deed is to give the plain meaning to the words used, neglecting grammatical errors and remembering the limitations and deficiencies of the draftsman. O GANGA BAKHSH SINGH v. GOKUL PRASAD, 4 O. L. J. 744 645

———, principles of.

In determining the nature of a transaction the document evidencing it should be considered as a whole and the intention of the parties should be gathered not from isolated sentences but from the whole of the instrument. P GOPI RAM v. RAM DHAN, 10 P. W. R. 1918; 157 P. L. R. 1917 228

Contempt of Court—High Court, power of, to punish summarily for contempt—Unjust criticism of Court's act while Court is not sitting, whether contempt—Printer and publisher of newspaper, liability of, for contempt—Punishment for contempt, mitigation of—Apology.

If the printer of a newspaper publishes a letter with the name of an author attached to it, he must bear the responsibility if he is unable, when required, to prove that it was published with the authority of the person by whom it purports to have been signed.

When letters amounting to contempt of Court are published in a newspaper, the Court has its election to punish both the author and publisher of the newspaper or either of them.

Contempt of Court—concld.

If a printer prints anything that is libellous, it is no excuse to say that he had no knowledge of the contents of the paper and was entirely ignorant of its being libellous.

When contempt of a Court of Record is committed, there are two modes of proceeding open to it, one by a Rule calling upon the person charged with contempt to show cause why he should not be adjudged guilty of contempt of Court, the other by attachment under which that person might be arrested and brought into Court for a similar purpose.

The charge of contempt may be made by the Court itself upon its own knowledge of facts which, if sworn to by any one to the best of his belief, would have made a prima facie case of contempt of Court.

To charge a Judge with presumptuous tyranny for the mode in which he is proceeding in a matter pending before him or to publish anything respecting that matter, whilst it is under consideration, with a view to induce the Judge to alter his course is a grave contempt of Court.

It is a high and serious offence to cast unjust and defamatory imputations on a Judge. Judges are subject to be criticised but they must be protected from unfounded defamation.

In cases of contempt of Court by means of misrepresentation or wilful concealment of the true state of facts, a proper apology may mitigate but it cannot wholly excuse or justify the contempt or form a ground for a total exemption from punishment. C In the matter of WILLIAM TAYLER, 26 C. L. J. 345: 19 Cr L. J. 402 930

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 2 (d)—'Consideration,' what is.

The consideration required to support a promise may consist of any damage or any suspension or forbearance of his right or any possibility of a loss occasioned to the plaintiff by the promise of another, though no actual benefit accrues to the promisee. M PERUMAL MUDALIAR v. SENDANATHA MUDALIAR, (1918) M. W. N. 173 479

——— s. 16—Undue influence, tests of—Gift, deed of, cancellation of, before registration, effect of—Non-delivery of document to donee, effect of.

A deed of gift which is repudiated by the donor before registration, though presented by him to be registered, is inoperative and confers no rights on the donee.

Non-delivery of the document to the donee renders it unenforceable.

Presentation of a document for registration is not equivalent to its registration.

Per Abdur Rahim, J.—A deed cannot be treated as void for undue influence merely because it is unreasonable or its terms are prejudicial to the donor or his kinsmen. If the deed is true and a well-understood and voluntary act of the donor, no legal objection can be taken to it merely on the ground that it is such as would not be expected from a man of ordinary prudence.

Undue influence is not a matter always capable of direct proof, and must depend, in its very nature, on the conclusions to be drawn from the entire circumstances in which the transaction had its origin.

Per Oldfield, J.—The proof of undue influence may be either direct, though that cannot be insisted on, or indirect with reference to the opportunities for and disposition to the exercise of influence on the one side and the result of its exercise, as indicated by the merits of the transaction, the acceptance of false representations and the entertainment of false beliefs on the other. M AMBA v. SHRINIVASA KAMATHI, 7 L. W. 339 483

Contract Act—contd.

——— s. 23—Public policy—Promise not to bid at excise auction, validity of.

An agreement to abstain from bidding at an excise auction is not void under section 23 of the Contract Act as being against public policy. N MAHADEO v. KEWALRAM 223

—— — s. 25.

The provisions of section 25 of the Contract Act do not apply to such a case, for though the mortgage might be treated as having consideration, it is not enough to charge the tarwad with liability, which must be shown to have been benefited by the transaction. M MANKOOTTIL CHATHUKUTTI NAIR v. KOMAPPAN NAIR, (1918) M. W. N. 144 572

——— ss. 30, 65—Wagering contract—Suit for recovery of deposit made as security for performance of contract, maintainability of—Void contracts, money paid under, when recoverable.

A suit lies for recovery of money deposited by a party to a wagering contract as security for the performance of his part of the contract. The direct prohibition contained in section 30 of the Contract Act does not cover such a claim.

The words 'entrusted to any person to abide the result of a game, etc.,' in section 30 refer only to moneys deposited with stakeholders.

The general principle is that a plaintiff whose hands have not been tainted by corruption and who has not committed any act which fixes him with having been a party to a fraud is entitled to get back the money which he left with another. M SRIKAKOLAPUR VENKATARAJU v. GUDIVADA RAMANUJAM, 23 M L. T. 84; (1918) M. W. N. 230; 7 L. W. 518; 34 M. L. J. 561 319

——— s. 30—Wagering contract, what is—Common intention to wager, necessity of—Speculation, whether amounts to wagering—Pakka adatias, position of.

Speculation does not necessarily involve a contract by way of wager: to constitute such a contract a common intention to wager is essential. The mere fact that one party to a contract for sale of goods does not intend to deliver, even if known to the other party, does not vitiate the contract, unless there is a bargain or understanding between the parties that delivery is not to be called for.

Pakki adat dealings are well established as a legitimate mode of conducting commercial business in the Bombay market, and the acts of a pakka adatia as such are not unlawful.

Defendant instructed plaintiffs, a firm of pakka adatias, to sell for him three several lots of linseed amounting in all to 4,000 tons for September delivery. The market went against the defendant, and the plaintiffs discharged their obligations to their buyers by delivering 300 tons of linseed, and by making cross-contracts and paying differences as to the balance. They then sued the defendant for indemnity:

Contract Act—contd.

Held, that the fact that the defendant was a speculator who never intended to give delivery and that the plaintiffs did not expect him to deliver did not convert the contract into a wager. P C BHAGWANDAS PARASRAM v. BURJORJI RUTTONJI BOMANJI, 23 M. L. T. 203; 34 M. L. J. 305; 4 P. L. W. 229; 16 A. L. J. 241; 27 C. L. J. 358; (1918) M. W. N. 315; 22 C. W. N. 625; 20 BOM. L. R. 561; 7 L. W. 577 284

——— s. 38 627

——— s. 43 466

——— s. 43—Joint promisors, liability of—'Joint liability' and 'joint and several liability,' distinction between.

Section 43 of the Contract Act enables a promisee to sue one or more of several joint promisors to enforce the joint liability.

When a contract is made with several persons as tenants, they are jointly and severally liable for rent. But when the contract is made with a single person, after his death the liability of his heirs is a joint liability. C KRISHNA DAS ROY v. KALI TARA CHOWDURANI, 22 C. W. N. 289 80

——— s. 65 319

——— ss. 69, 70—Calcutta Municipal Act (III B. C. of 1899, ss. 171, 228—Consolidated rate, payment of, by owner of premises—Owner, whether can recover half share from occupier.

In view of the provisions of section 228 of the Calcutta Municipal Act, which make the consolidated rate a first charge upon the building or land in respect of which it is payable, the owner of such building or land is a person interested in the payment of the rate within the meaning of section 69 of the Contract Act, and having paid the share of the occupier he is entitled to recover it from the latter under section 69 or 70 of the Contract Act. C BHUDAR MAL-RAM CHANDRA MARWARI v. SEW NARAYAN 669

——— s. 74—Penalty—Time granted to mortgagor on condition of paying higher rate of interest.

Where a mortgage-decree provided for the payment of interest at a certain rate, but in execution the Court granted the judgment-debtor time to pay off the decretal amount on condition that he paid interest at a higher rate:

Held (semble), that the increase in the rate of interest was in the nature of a penalty. Pat BENODE BEHARI BOSE v. HIRA SINGH, (1918) PAT. 76 726

——— ss. 134, 137—Principal and surety—Suit dismissed as against principal—Surety, whether discharged.

Plaintiff sued a principal debtor and the surety for the price of goods sold. Service of summons could not be effected upon the principal debtor and the plaintiff applied that he should be dismissed from the suit. The suit proceeded against the surety alone and the plaintiff obtained a decree:

Held, that the legal consequence of the act of the plaintiff was to discharge the principal debtor within the meaning of section 134 of the Contract Act, so that he had no further right of suit against the surety. U B MAUNG PO U v. MAUNG KYAW, 3 U. B. R. (1917) 62 693

——— s. 137 693

Contract Act—concld.

——— s. 172—Chattels, whether can be hypothecated without transfer of possession.

The method provided by section 172 of the Contract Act for the hypothecation of loose chattels is not the only method for creating security thereon. They may be hypothecated without transferring their possession. In such cases the only question that arises is whether there was an intention to create a security and if there was an intention to create a security, equity gives effect to it. C HARIPADA SADHUKHAN v ANATH NATH DEY, 22 C. W. N. 758 211

——— s. 226.

The ordinary law of agency stated in section 226 of the Contract Act is applicable to negotiable instruments. M CHELLA BALAYYA v. KANUPARTHI SUBBAYYA, 40 M. 1171 813

——— ss. 239, 242—Partnership—Agent sharing profits and losses, whether partner.

A gomashta sharing in the profits as well as in the losses of a business is a partner in the business. P CHELA RAM-SANT RAM v. KISHAN CHAND, 3 P. W. R. 1918; 155 P. L. R. 1917 283

——— s. 242 283

——— s. 253 (10) 849

——— s. 263 466

Contract by guardian, whether binding on minor—Specific performance—Mutuality.

It is not within the competence of the guardian of a minor to bind the minor or his estate by a contract for purchase of immoveable property and specific performance of such a contract cannot be decreed even at the instance of the minor for want of mutuality. N SAKHARAM v. BHIVRABAI 164

Co-operative Societies Act (II of 1912), s. 42—Liquidator, order of payment made by—Declaration, suit for, whether maintainable—Jurisdiction.

A Civil Court cannot, in view of section 42 (6) of the Co-operative Societies Act, entertain a suit for a declaration that an order of the liquidator passed under section 42 (2) of the Act is ultra vires and without jurisdiction and cannot be executed O BENI MADHO SINGH v. LIQUIDATOR, DEWARA BANK, 4 O. L. J. 583 353

Co-owners, rights of—Adverse possession by co-owner, requisites of—Partition, suit for, by co-owner out of possession, form of—Court-fee payable.

The possession of one co-owner is prima facie the possession of the other co-owners and in order to make the possession of one co-owner adverse to the other co-owners there must be an actual ouster of the latter. Where one co-owner has been in uninterrupted possession for a large number of years, the Court may presume that there has been an ouster of the other co-owners without any express evidence of the fact of such ouster.

In a partition suit ordinarily it is not very material as to whether the plaintiff is or is not actually in possession of his share. But in this country in the Mofussil Courts it is important, because a person who sues for partition and is out of possession must ask, first of all, to be restored to possession of his share and pay additional ad valorem fee upon his plaint, whereas in a case where the plaintiff is in possession

Co-owners—concld.

he simply sues for partition and separation of his share on a plaint bearing a stamp of Rs. 10 only. C AHAMUDDIN TAMIJUDDIN v. AMIRUDDIN 216

Co-sharers, rights of—Co-sharer in exclusive possession—Suit for possession by other co-sharer, maintainability of.

A co-sharer in joint lands can maintain a suit in ejectment against his other co-sharer, claiming joint possession with him where the latter is not only in exclusive possession of the lands but asserts in his written statement exclusive possession in denial of the title of the plaintiff. C SASHISHEKKARESWAR REY v. HEMANGINI DEBI 689

Costs 690, 870

———, award of.

Where the pleadings of both parties leave the Court in the dark as to the nature of the real contest between them, the proper course to follow is not to allow costs to any of them. P MUHAMMAD ABDUL KADIR v. HUSSAIN BIBI, 11 P. W. R. 1918 879

Councils Act, 1861 (24 and 25 Vict. C. 67), s. 22 - High Courts Act, 1861 (24 and 25 Vict. C. 104), s. 9—Defence of India (Criminal Law Amendment) Act (IV of 1915), s. 4—Governor-General, power of, to create Courts—Jurisdiction—High Court, power of, to declare an Act ultra vires.

Section 22 of the Indian Councils Act, 1861, read with section 9 of the Indian High Courts Act, 1861, is in terms amply wide to give the Governor-General of India in Council power to create new tribunals such as those contemplated in section 4 of the Defence of India (Criminal Law Amendment) Act, 1915.

If an enactment of the Indian Legislature is outside the scope of the powers conferred upon the Governor-General in Council by Act of Parliament, the High Court has power in a proper proceeding to declare such an enactment ultra vires and of no force and effect, with all the consequences that may result therefrom.

Per Chapman, J.—A Court cannot be constituted otherwise than in the name of the Sovereign, and before it can be held that the Indian Legislature can create a Court it must be clear beyond doubt that the power to create a Court has been properly delegated.

The power conferred on the Governor-General in Council by section 22 of the Councils Act of 1861 included the power to make laws and regulations for all persons and all Courts of justice whatever and for all places and things whatever. This delegation of plenary power was designed for the benefit of public interests of the greatest magnitude and whatever may fairly be regarded as incidental to or consequential to the main purpose ought not, unless judicially prohibited, to be held by judicial construction to be ultra vires. Pat PARMESHWAR AHIR v. EMPEROR, 4 P. L. W. 157; (1918) PAT. 97; 19 CR. L. J. 281 185

Court, duty of, to correct error in decree where no question of doubt.

It is the Court's duty to see that all errors in the decree are amended when there is no question of doubt. A BASANTI v. KUNJ BIHARI LAL, 16 A. L. J, 262 998

Court-fee 890

———Suit to set aside decree—Plaintiff entitled only to portion of property affected by decree—Court-fee payable.

Plaintiff brought a suit to set aside a compromise decree obtained on the basis of a mortgage. He was entitled to a portion only of the property affected by the compromise decree:

Held, that Court-fee was payable on the value of the share of the plaintiff, and not on the value of the whole of the property affected by the decree. Pat BANKEY BEHARI v. RAM BAHADUR, 4 P. L. W. 281; (1918) PAT. 223 891

Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), s. 7 (i) (vi)—Pre-emption suit—Suit decreed in respect of part of property and dismissed as to remainder—Appeal—Court-fee payable.

Plaintiff sought to pre-empt five villages on payment of Rs. 2,500, alleging that the sum of Rs. 41,000 entered in the sale-deed was the ostensible amount of consideration. The suit was dismissed in respect of three villages and decreed in respect of the remaining two on payment of Rs. 21,000. The plaintiff appealed:

Held, (1) that the appeal being divisible into two parts and the sole question which arose in the part relating to the two villages being a question of consideration, the appellant must pay an ad valorem Court-fee on the amount by which he was seeking to reduce the amount made payable by the lower Court;

(2) that as regards the rest of the claim as the right to pre-empt was in dispute, the Court-fee in respect thereto must be calculated according to section 7 (vi) of the Court Fees Act. A ABINASH CHANDRA v. SHEKHAR CHAND, 16 A. L. J. 174 666

——— s. 7 (iv) (c)—Suit for declaratory decree and injunction—Court-fee payable.

The plaint in a case in which the plaintiff not only asks for a declaration of rights but also prays for perpetual injunction restraining the defendant from putting in execution a particular decree is chargeable with ad valorem Court-fee under section 7 (iv) (c) of the Court Fees Act. C SAIDUNNESSA v. TEJENDRA CHANDRA DHAR. 398

——— ss. 12, 17, Sch. I, Art. 1—Mortgage suit—Appeal or cross-objection—Costs, appeal in respect of—Court-fee payable—Taxing Judge, power of—Procedure.

In the case of appeals or cross-objections in suits for redemption or foreclosure in all cases whether a decree for interest has been made in them or not, in which the Court-fee declared by the Court to be due at the date of the decree can be ascertained by reference to the judgment and the decree, it is that amount at which the appeal or cross-objection should be valued and future interest should not be taken into account—i.e., in all original appeals the Court-fee should be levied on the sum due at the date of the original decree and in all second appeals it should be levied on the sum due at the date of the decree of the lower Appellate Court.

When an appeal against costs is distinct and separate from the other parts of the appeal, Court-fee must be paid ad valorem on the costs decreed

When it is the appellant who failed to pay sufficient Court-fees in the Court below, his appeal will not be heard till the deficiency has been made good,

Court Fees Act—concld.

Where it was the respondent who was in default, no decree shall be executed in his favour until the deficiency has been made good.

The decision of the Taxing Officer in the matter of Court-fees is final. The Court-fee fixed by him must be paid. Pat ROWLINS v. LACHMI NARAIN JHA, 3 P. L. J. 443 50

——— s. 17 50

——— s. 17, applicability of—Alternative reliefs—Court-fees payable.

Section 17 of the Court Fees Act applies to cases in which two different reliefs may be applied simultaneously to the wrong done to the plaintiff; it does not apply to cases where alternative reliefs are asked for. Where alternative reliefs are sought Court-fee must be paid on the relief which appears to be of the higher value. Pat MUKHLAL GIR v. RAMDHEYAN RAI 143

——— Sch. I, Art. I 50

——— Sch. II, Arts. 5, 17 (iii)—Agra Tenancy Act (II of 1901), s. 95—Suit for declaration of occupancy rights—Court-fee payable.

A suit for a declaration of occupancy rights under section 95 of the U. P. Tenancy Act falls under Article 5, Schedule II, of the Court Fees Act and the plaint in such a suit should bear a Court fee of eight annas.

Article 17 (iii) of Schedule II of the Act has no applicability to such a suit. A RATAN SINGH v. KHEM KARAN, 16 A. L. J. 167 608

——— Art. 17 (iii) 608

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 14—"Any local area", meaning of—Special Magistrate, powers of—Punjab Government Notification No. 99, dated 23rd February 1883.

The words "any local area" in section 14 of the Code of Criminal Procedure can be extended to cover, if necessary, all the territories administered by the Local Government issuing the notification, and are not restricted in their meaning to a local area within a specified District or Sessions Division.

The Punjab Government Notification No. 99, dated 23rd February 1883, applies equally to a Special Magistrate of the first class appointed under section 14 of the Criminal Procedure Code. P HIRA LAL v. EMPEROR, 4 P. W. R. 1918 CR.; 19 CR. L. J. 310 326

——— ss. 16, 350—Difference of opinion between even number of Magistrates—Procedure—Rules framed by Bengal Government under s. 16, Criminal Procedure Code, r. 6—Trial, de novo—Jurisdiction.

Rule 6 of the Rules framed by the Bengal Government under section 16, Criminal Procedure Code, provides that in case of a difference of opinion between an even number of Honorary Magistrates the case shall be referred back to the District Magistrate or Sub-Divisional Officer, as the case may be.

Where a case is thus referred back under this rule to the Sub-Divisional Officer, the provisions of sections 350, Criminal Procedure Code, apply to the case, so that the Magistrate does not act without jurisdiction if in the absence of any demand for a de novo trial on the part of the accused he hears arguments and passes judgment without holding a de novo trial. C CHAND TARAFDAR v. SHAMSHER FAKIR, 19 CR. L. J. 312 328

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

——— ss. 90, 514—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 498—Warrant issued for woman enticed away—Reasons not recorded, effect of—Bond executed by surety, whether can be forfeited on woman's failure to appear.

In a case under section 498 of the Penal Code the trying Magistrate is competent to issue a warrant instead of issuing a summons for the attendance of the woman alleged to have been enticed away, but in order to comply with the provisions of section 90 of the Criminal Procedure Code it is necessary to record reasons for issuing the warrant in the first instance and if the Magistrate fails to do so, the warrant must be regarded as wholly illegal and the bond given by the surety for the woman's attendance has no legal force and cannot be forfeited if the woman does not appear. P BELA SINGH v. EMPEROR, 7 P. W. R. 1918 CR.; 19 CR. L. J. 443 971

——— s. 106—Security on conviction—Appellate Court, when can order security—Conviction by Second or Third Class Magistrate.

One of the essentials for justifying an Appellate Court in requiring security under section 106 of the Code of Criminal Procedure is that the accused must have been tried and convicted by a Court of the description mentioned in the first paragraph of the section, i.e., a Magistrate not inferior to a Magistrate of the First Class, and an appellate Court is, therefore, not competent to require security while hearing an appeal from a conviction by a Second or Third Class Magistrate. P LAL KHAN v. EMPEROR, 5 P. R. 1918 CR.; 19 CR. L. J. 326 352

——— s. 107—Breach of peace apprehended in sub-division—Accused living in Sudder Division—Procedure—Irregularity—Overt acts—Apprehension of breach of peace.

In a case under section 107, Criminal Procedure Code, the breach of the peace apprehended being in a sub-division and the accused residing in the Sudder Division, the District Magistrate was moved for the commencement of the proceedings, but he, instead of drawing up the proceedings and sending them to the Sub-Divisional Magistrate for trial, merely said that he "sanctioned the proceedings" and sent the case to the Sub-Divisional Magistrate:

Held, that although the District Magistrate did not express his intention strictly in accordance with law, the irregularity in expression did not deprive the trying Magistrate of jurisdiction in the case and could not affect the merits of the trial in any way.

Held, also, that though there were no actual overt acts on the part of the accused during the six months preceding the commencement of the proceedings, still the proceedings were not bad as there was a likelihood that the accused might commit a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquillity or do some wrongful act which might occasion a breach of the peace. C OHIDUDDIN CHOUDHURY v. EMPEROR, 19 CR. L. J. 266 122

——— s. 107—Conviction for rioting—District Magistrate, power of, in appeal, to order security for good behaviour—Surety, whether particular person can be ordered to be—Jurisdiction.

A District Magistrate has no jurisdiction, in an appeal from a conviction under section 147 of the Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

Penal Code, to order an accused person to give security to be of good behaviour although he may order security to keep the peace, nor is his order directing a particular individual to be one of the sureties a valid order. A MAHABIR v. EMPEROR, 16 A. L. J. 280; 19 CR. L. J. 439 967

——— ss. 107, 145, distinction between—Security to keep public peace—Possession of immoveable property, dispute as to—Procedure.

Proceedings under section 107 of the Criminal Procedure Code are only intended for the security of the public peace, not for the purpose of enabling one of the two contending parties to help themselves in recovering possession of immoveable property after having their adversaries' hands tied down by an order under this section. Where the dispute relates to the possession of immoveable property the proper course is to institute proceedings under section 145, and not under section 107. P JALAL v EMPEROR, 144 P. L. R. 1917; 19 CR. L J. 446 974

——— ss. 107, 144—Order under s. 144 restraining party from entering upon land, renewal of, validity of—Breach of peace, apprehension of—Procedure, proper.

Where a party who has once been restrained under section 144 of the Code of Criminal Procedure from entering upon certain land insists upon such entry and there is an apprehension of a breach of the peace, the proper course is to take proceedings under section 107 of the Code and not to issue a fresh order under section 144. Pat RASHBEHARI SINGH v JAGNARAIN RAI, 3 P. L J. 130; 19 CR. L. J. 365 589

——— ss. 107, 125—Petition under s. 125—Right of petitioner to be heard—Applicability of s. 107—Breach of peace, apprehension of.

A District Magistrate dealing with an application under section 125 of the Code of Criminal Procedure is exercising neither appellate nor revisional jurisdiction and it is not incumbent upon him to hear the Mukhtear of the petitioner before disposing of the application.

Where acts committed by an accused person are of such a nature that the continuity of these acts or the commission of similar acts by the accused is apprehended to be tending to a breach of the peace, section 107 of the Code of Criminal Procedure is applicable notwithstanding that the acts already committed by the accused constitute specific offences under the Penal Code. Pat KHETRABASI SAHU v. EMPEROR, 19 CR. L. J. 246 38

——— ss. 107, 144, 145—Proceedings, simultaneous, whether proper—Dispute as to possession of land—Proceedings, proper.

It is inconvenient that proceedings under section 107, Criminal Procedure Code, and also under section 144 or 145 should be going on at the same time.

Where on the application of the petitioners for the assistance of the Magistrate in the matter of possession of a piece of land, an injunction was issued under section 144, Criminal Procedure Code, and the petitioners were called on under section 107:

Held, (1) that the procedure was bad, as in effect it debarred the petitioners from giving evidence of possession;

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

(2) that if on the expiry of the injunction under section 144 there was any apprehension of a breach of the peace, the more appropriate procedure would be to take proceedings under section 145, Criminal Procedure Code, rather than under section 107. C ABINASH CHANDRA MANDAL v. LOKENATH GANI, 19 CR. L. J. 367 591

——— ss. 107, 145—Proceeding under s. 107 converted into one under s. 145—Procedure—Evidence, recording of.

Where a proceeding is started under section 107 of the Criminal Procedure Code and evidence is taken under that section, but the Magistrate subsequently converts the proceeding into one under section 145 of the Code, he must call for the written statements of the parties and record evidence under the latter section. If he omits to do so, any order passed by him under section 145 of the Code would be illegal. Pat SAHDEB v. JUMON JOLAHA, 4 P. L. W. 195; 19 CR L. J. 320 336

——— s. 107—Security, when to be demanded—Wrongful act—Breach of peace—Proof.

Accused, owners of a certain piece of land, intended to open a market upon it for the sale of cattle near a place where there already was an old cattle market. The Magistrate, apprehending that that circumstance would very likely cause a breach of the peace, made an order against the accused under section 107, Criminal Procedure Code:

Held, that as the Magistrate was only informed that the accused intended to hold a market on their land without being at the same time informed that they intended to commit a breach of the peace by doing any wrongful act, the order of the Magistrate was illegal. A MAHU v. EMPEROR, 16 A. L. J. 279; 19 CR. L. J. 437 965

——— s. 110 125

——— s. 110—Security for good behaviour, order for—Approved sureties—Sureties residing in another Police district and helping accused in defence, whether ground for refusing to accept.

Where an order to furnish security under section 110, Criminal Procedure Code, simply requires the sureties to be 'approved sureties', the mere fact that the sureties do not reside in the same Police district and have evidenced their friendship by helping the accused in his defence will not suffice in law to justify a refusal to accept the sureties. A GOBARDHAN v. EMPEROR, 16 A. L. J. 263; 19 CR. L. J. 441 969

——— ss. 110 (f), 117—Security for good behaviour—Proof—General repute—Evidence.

Where it is alleged against a person, even in a proceeding under section 110 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, that he on a certain occasion committed a particular offence, that fact must be proved by relevant evidence. It is not at all the same thing as proving by evidence of general repute that a man is a habitual offender.

The fact that a person is so desperate and dangerous as to render his being at large without security hazardous to the community is not one which can, under section 117 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, be proved by evidence of general repute. A INDAR v. EMPEROR, 16 A. L. J. 205; 19 CR. L. J. 351 463

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

——— s. 112 345
——— s. 117 463
——— s. 118 345
——— s. 125 38
——— s. 144 591

——— s. 144.

Section 144 of the Criminal Procedure Code should not be used as a permanent expedient. The Legislature did not intend that a man may be restrained once under section 144, and that then if he states his intention of again doing the same thing a further order under the same section may be made against him. Pat RASHBEHARI SINGH v. JAGNARAIN RAI, 3 P. L. J. 130; 19 CR L. J. 365 589

——— Ch. XII, s. 435 (3)—Proceedings under s. 145—Revision—High Court, power of interference of.

Orders passed under Chapter XII of the Code of Criminal Procedure are not subject to revision, being expressly excluded from the operation of section 435 of the Code by clause (3) of that section. But in order to make the provisions of section 435, clause (3), applicable, that is to say, to deprive the High Court of the power of interference in revision, the proceedings must be proceedings under Chapter XII of that Code in fact, and not only in name. U B NGA HPAY v. NGA AUNG BAW, 3 U. B R. (1917) 35; 19 CR L. J. 381 685

——— s. 145 336, 591 673, 974

——— 145, 146—Attachment of land—Decree of Civil Court, effect of—Punjab Land Revenue Act (XVII of 1887), s. 36, applicability of—Revision—Chief Court, interference by.

In proceedings under Chapter XII of the Criminal Procedure Code where the Magistrate attaches property, the attachment should continue only until a competent Court has determined the rights of the parties thereto, and the mere fact that an appeal from such determination is pending before a higher Court is no reason for the Magistrate continuing to keep the property in attachment.

Obiter dictum.—Section 36 of the Punjab Land Revenue Act is not properly applicable to cases in which property has been attached by a Magistrate under section 146 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

Where after the attachment of certain property by a Magistrate under section 146 of the Criminal Procedure Code, one of the parties is put in possession of it by a Revenue Officer acting under section 36 of the Punjab Land Revenue Act, the Chief Court, as a Criminal Court, cannot interfere with the Revenue Officer's order. P EMPEROR v. ABDUL AZIZ, 46 P. W. R. 1917 CR.; 19 CR. L. J. 261 117

——— ss. 145, 146—Possession, enquiry into—Attachment of property under s. 146—Cancellation of order before adjudication by Civil Court, legality of.

An order for attachment passed under section 146 (1), Criminal Procedure Code, must be kept in force till the adjudication of the rights of the parties by a competent Civil Court.

A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to cancel the attachment as a result of further enquiry and adjudication by him as to the right to possession. M GURVANNA GOWD v. GOVINDAPPA, 19 CR. L. J. 443 971

——— s. 145, proceedings under—Arbitration—Award accepted by both parties—Revision—Objection to award, validity of.

Where after drawing up proceedings under section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code the matter is, with the consent of the parties, referred to arbitration and the award is filed and accepted by both parties, it is not open to either of them to object to the award in revision. Pat HALDHAR SINGH v. BULAKI SINGH, 4 P. L W. 104; 3 P. L. J. 249; 19 CR. L. J. 266 122

——— s. 145, proceedings under—Receiver, appointment of, validity of.

Under section 145 of the Code of Criminal Procedure a Magistrate has in cases of emergency the power to attach the subject in dispute, but he has no power at that stage to appoint a Receiver.

Where a Magistrate takes proceedings under section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code the object of the law is that he shall confirm the party in actual possession He is not competent to dispossess such a party by appointing a Receiver and the order of attachment which the law empowers him to make has no greater force than any Civil Court attachment the effect of which is generally to restrain alienations.

A Receiver can be appointed only where the Magistrate is unable to decide which of the parties is in possession and has a right to remain in possession, and considers it necessary that the property should vest in some person appointed by the Court under section 146 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Pat MEWA LAL v. EMPEROR, (1917) PAT. 363; 3 P. L. J. 147; 19 CR. L. J. 249; 4 P. L. W. 359 41

——— ss. 145, 435 (3)—Proceedings under s. 145—Revision—High Court, power of interference of—Previous trial, whether bar to proceedings.

An order passed under the provisions of section 145 and proceedings under Chapter XII of the Code of Criminal Procedure is not subject to revision in view of the terms of section 435 (3) of the Code. But that section does not deprive the High Court of jurisdiction unless the proceedings are in fact, and not merely in name, proceedings under Chapter XII of the Code.

Proceedings under section 145 do not constitute a trial and are not in the nature of a trial. They are in the nature of Police proceedings in order to prevent the commission of offences, and the fact that there have been criminal charges brought by one or other of the parties against each other, so far from being a bar to action under Chapter XII, constitutes evidence which may possibly prove the danger of disputes which it is desired to prevent.

Where it was found that one of the parties to a proceeding under section 145 of the Code of Criminal Procedure had already been prosecuted and acquitted under section 447 of the Penal Code:

Held, that this was no bar to the proceedings. U B NGA CHIT v. NGA YA, 3 U. B. R. (1917) 33; 19 CR. L. J. 389 741

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

—— - s. 145 (1)—Preliminary order, condition precedent of—Jurisdiction.

The condition precedent authorizing a Magistrate to issue an order under section 145 (1), Criminal Procedure Code, is that he should be satisfied that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists.

The fact that the complaint shows that the complainant was out of possession of the property in dispute for over two months does not vitiate the proceedings under section 145, Criminal Procedure Code N SHESHAROO NAGORAO PATIL v. EMPEROR, 19 CR. L. J. 414 972

—— —— ss. 143 (3), 143 (3)—Proceedings under s. 145 started in presence of parties—Notice, whether necessary—Costs, order as to - Delay in making order, effect of.

During the course of proceedings under section 144 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, the Magistrate intimated to the parties his intention to draw up proceedings under section 145 of the Code. On the following day he drew up proceedings under the latter section in the presence of the parties, who thereafter filed their written statements and adduced evidence in support of their respective cases:

Held, that the Magistrate was not guilty of any irregularity in proceeding with the case as he did and that the proceedings were not vitiated by want of formal notice to the parties.

An order for costs under section 148 (3) of the Criminal Procedure Code, made ten days after an order under section 145 (6) of the Code, is not illegal by reason of the delay in passing it. Pat CHADHARI AHIR v. RAJA RAM SINGH, 4 P. L. W. 274; 19 CR. L. J. 393 743

——— s. 143 (3) 743

——— s. 164 321

—— — s. 181 (4)—Enticing away married woman—Detention for purpose of illicit intercourse—Detention, offence of, where to be enquired into—Jurisdiction.

A complaint under section 498 of the Penal Code for detaining a woman for the purpose of illicit intercourse can be enquired into only in the District where such detention occurs, as section 181 (4) of the Code of Criminal Procedure refers only to cases of kidnapping and abduction, offences dealt with in sections 359 to 369 of the Penal Code, but does not apply to offences under Chapter XX of the Code. P JASWANT SINGH v. EMPEROR, 8 P. W. R. 1918 CR; 19 CR. L. J 438 965

——— s. 195—"Court," meaning of—Tribunal constituted under Calcutta Improvement Act, 1911, whether Court Sanction to prosecute.

The word "Court" in section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, has a wider meaning than a Court of Justice as defined in the Penal Code. It may include a Tribunal empowered to deal with a particular matter and authorised to receive evidence bearing on that matter in order to enable it to arrive at a determination.

The Tribunal constituted under the Calcutta Improvement Act of 1911 is a "Court" within the meaning of section 195, Criminal Procedure Code. Therefore, a person who has given false evidence before the Tribunal cannot be prosecuted for perjury without its sanction C NANDO LAL GANGULI v. KHETRA MOHAN GHOSE, 27 C. L. J. 463; 19 CR. L. J. 315 331

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

——— s. 195 Sanction to prosecute—Appeal, temporary dismissal of, legality of—Procedure.

Accused preferred a charge under section 406 of the Penal Code against one B which was dismissed. B then applied for sanction to prosecute accused for perjury, but that application was rejected. In the meantime accused brought a civil suit to recover the sum of money in respect of which he had preferred the charge in the Criminal Court. That suit was pending, when B appealed to the District Magistrate against the order refusing sanction to prosecute. The latter dismissed the appeal till the decision of the civil suit, but after its determination granted the sanction:

Held, (1) that the order of the District Magistrate granting sanction was illegal, inasmuch as the Magistrate became functus officio when he passed his order dismissing the appeal, there being no such thing known to law as a temporary dismissal of an appeal;

(2) that the proper procedure for the District Magistrate would have been to have postponed the decision of the appeal till the decision of the civil suit. A LACHHMI NARAIN v. BINDRABAN, 16 A. L. J. 210 9 CR. L. J 358 582

——— s. 195 Sanction to prosecute—Trying Magistrate, whether can question legality of sanction.

A Magistrate trying an accused person for an offence for which sanction is required under section 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code, has no right to go behind the order of sanction and to question its propriety or legality. If he thinks that the sanction is bad for any reason he cannot refuse to recognise it all that he can do is to stay proceedings in order to allow the accused to get the sanction revoked by some Court to which the Court granting the sanction is subordinate. P EMPEROR v THAMMAN, 8 P. R. 1918 CR.; 17 P. W. R. 1918 CR.; 19 CR L. J. 399 751

——— s. 195—Sanction, when can be said to be "given"—Duration of sanction—Period of six months, commencement of.

A sanction granted under section 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code is "given" by the Court which first grants it, and not by the Court which subsequently refuses to revoke it. Hence the period of six months mentioned in section 195, clause (6), for which the sanction is to remain in force, must be computed from the day on which it is "given" by the Court which first grants it, and not from the date of the refusal of a superior Court to revoke it A TILAK RAM v. DALIP SINGH, 16 A. L. J. 223; 19 CR. L. J. 387 739

—— — s. 195 (1) (b)—Offence committed before First Class Magistrate—Sanction to prosecute, application for - Magistrate transferred—Court, proper.

An offence of abetment of perjury was committed during an enquiry into a murder case before a First Class Magistrate. An application for the grant of sanction to prosecute the accused was made to the Magistrate, but before the application could be disposed of the Magistrate was transferred and was succeeded by a Second Class Magistrate who had not the power to commit to the Court of Session. Before giving over charge the First Class Magistrate sent the papers to the District Magistrate, who granted the sanction required:

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

Held, that the District Magistrate had jurisdiction to dispose of the application, inasmuch as he was the successor of the First Class Magistrate to the extent that he had power to commit to the Court of Session, and was "such Court" referred to in section 195 (1) (b) of the Criminal Procedure Code. B RAMRAO N. BELLARY, In re, 20 BOM L. R. 117; 19 CR. L. J. 332; 42 B. 190 348

——— s. 195 (6)—Sanction to prosecute confirmed on appeal—Revision summarily rejected by High Court—Period of six months, commencement of.

The period of six months, during which a sanction to prosecute remains in force under clause (6) of section 195 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, begins to run either from the time the original sanction was given or from the date of some subsequent order made by a competent Court which confirms the giving of the sanction or itself specifically gives a sanction. An order of the High Court summarily rejecting an application in revision does not approve or confirm the order of the Court below and therefore does not furnish a starting point for the period of six months to run from. B PARVATRAO MAHASKOJIRAO, In re, 20 BOM. L. R. 108; 19 CR. L. J. 353 577

——— s. 195 (6), (7)—Sanction for prosecution—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), ss. 69, 70, Collector acting under, whether Court subordinate to District Court.

A Collector acting under sections 69 and 70 of the Bengal Tenancy Act is a Court within the meaning of section 195, Criminal Procedure Code.

Proceedings under sections 69 and 70 of the Bengal Tenancy Act are of a civil nature and the Collector's Court trying such proceedings must be deemed to be subordinate for the purpose of section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, to the principal Court of original civil jurisdiction in the District, i. e., the Court of the District Judge.

Per Chitty, J. (Richardson, J, hesitating).—The principal Court of original jurisdiction within the meaning of section 195, clause 7, does not necessarily refer to a Court of any particular class. It is a Civil or Criminal or Revenue Court as the case may be.

Per Richardson, J.—The words "where no appeal lies" in clause 7, section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, are wide enough to include both a particular case or class of cases in which no appeal lies as well a Court from which no appeal lies in any case, e. g., a Small Cause Court.

Per Chitty, J—Although these words in clause 7, section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, are capable of such a wide meaning, yet the Legislature referred to Courts whose decisions are made final by law, e. g., Small Cause Courts C CHANDI CHARAN GIRI v. GADADHAR PRODHAN, 22 C. W. N. 165; 27 C. L. J. 816; 45 C. 336; 19 CR. L. J. 273 177

——— s. 195 (6), (7)—Sanction to prosecute granted by Subordinate Judge—Appeal, forum of.

A District Court is the authority to which the Court of a Subordinate Judge is subordinate within the meaning of sub-section (6) of section 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

That section only refers to Courts and makes no distinction between appellate and original jurisdiction.

An appeal lies, therefore, from orders passed by Subordinate Judges under section 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code, whether in the exercise of original or appellate jurisdiction, to the District Court and not to the High Court. M RAPAKA VIYYANNA v. PARAKALA BAJAMMA, 19 CR. L. J. 264 120

——— s. 197—Offence committed by vatandar patil—Sanction to prosecute, necessity of—Proceedings started before sanction, validity of.

Where a Magistrate took cognizance of an offence committed by a vatandar patil, without the previous sanction required by section 197 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and proceeded to record the whole of the evidence without being aware that any such sanction existed:

Held, that the whole of the proceedings were without jurisdiction and must be regarded as totally invalid. B EMPEROR v. BHIMAJI VENKAJI NADGIR, 20 BOM. L. R. 89; 19 CR. L. J. 34; 42 B 172 454

——— s. 199—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s 498—Accused charged with theft, whether can be convicted under s. 498.

The provision in section 199 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, that no Court shall take cognizance of an offence under section 498 of the Indian Penal Code except upon a complaint made by the husband of the woman, refers to a complaint by the husband of an offence under section 498, not to any complaint made by the husband.

Where the complainant charged the accused with theft and neither in the complaint nor in his statement did he allege facts that constituted an offence under section 498 of the Penal Code, nor did he ever ask that the accused should be dealt with under that section:

Held, that having regard to the provisions of section 199 of the Code of Criminal Procedure the accused could not be convicted of an offence under section 498 of the Penal Code, there being no complaint against him by the husband that he had committed such an offence. P RODA SINGH v. EMPEROR, 2 P. R. 1918 CR. 19 CR. L. J 300 204

——— ss. 202, 203—Postponement of process—Procedure.

If a Magistrate takes it upon himself to postpone the issue of process for compelling the attendance of the person complained against for any purpose at all, he is required either to enquire into the case himself or to direct a local investigation. The fact that a local investigation has already been made does not affect the proceedings necessary under section 202 of the Criminal Procedure Code when once process has been postponed.

If an irregularity in procedure has not resulted in a miscarriage of justice, the High Court will not make an order which can result only in harassment to the parties and waste of public time. In a case in which a perfunctory enquiry has been made by the Police and the report considered in a perfunctory fashion by the Magistrate, the High Court will interfere and insist upon the provisions of section 202 being strictly enforced. But where the enquiry has been carefully made and carefully considered, the Court will exercise its discretion and refuse to re-open the matter. Pat SHEONANDAN MAHTON v. EMPEROR, 4 P. L. W. 114; 19 CR. L. J. 263 119

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

——— s. 203—Complaint, dismissal of.

A Sessions Judge ordered further inquiry in a case dismissed by a Magistrate under section 203 of the Criminal Procedure Code, pointing out that the complainant had other evidence to produce to show that the cattle in the possession of the accused were his and suggested that a Police Officer should be deputed to search for the missing cattle. The Magistrate again dismissed the case under section 203, Criminal Procedure Code, upon the investigation and report of the Police:

Held, (1) that the Sessions Judge did not direct an investigation by the Police but simply pointed out that a Police Officer might be deputed to search for the cattle;

(2) that the complainant was entitled to produce evidence, oral and documentary, before the Magistrate, and the latter had no right to dismiss the complaint under section 203 when the order of the Sessions Judge clearly contemplated a trial of the case. P THAKAR SINGH v. KIRPAL SINGH, 10 P. W. R. 1918 CR.; 19 CR. L. J. 436 964

——— 207—Commitment to Court of Session—"Ought to be tried by such Court," scope of.

The Criminal Procedure Code does not require that all cases of assault ending in death should be committed to the Court of Session. The expression "ought to be tried by such Court" in section 207 of the Code is limited to cases which the Magistrate is not competent to try or cases in which he is unable to inflict an adequate punishment. S IMPERATOR v. ISMAIL, 11 S. L. R. 79; 19 CR. L. J. 319 335

——— s. 208 (2)—Cross-examination, whether can be postponed till all witnesses have been examined—Procedure.

The proper time for cross-examination of a witness is immediately after the examination-in-chief, and an order by a Magistrate allowing an accused, without any special reason, to postpone cross-examining the prosecution witnesses until they have been all examined-in-chief is a proceeding not contemplated by the Code of Criminal Procedure.

An accused has no right under section 208 (2) of the Criminal Procedure Code to postpone his cross-examination of the witnesses for the prosecution until they have been all examined-in-chief, but the Magistrate has power to recall witnesses for further cross-examination if the circumstances of the case call for it. L B TAMRI v. EMPEROR, 9 L. B. R 109; 19 CR. L. J 327 343

——— ss. 209, 210 454

——— s. 233 973

——— ss. 234, 235—Distinct offences committed within 12 months—Joint trial, how far permissible.

Where an accused person commits more than three offences of the same kind within 12 months by distinct, separate and wholly unconnected acts, he may be tried in batches of three at each trial under separate charges.

Where the motive or object which actuates an accused in the commission of several distinct offences of the same kind is the same, the offences do not necessarily constitute one and the same transaction within the meaning of section 235 of the Criminal Procedure Code. Pat SITAL PRASAD v EMPEROR, 4 P. L. W. 105; 19 CR. L. J. 255 47

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

——— s. 235—General Clauses Act (X of 1897), s. 26—Opium Act (I of 1878), s. 9 (c), (f)—Bihar and Orissa Excise Act (II B. & O. of 1915), s. 47 (a)—Illegal possession and sale of opium—Joint trial under two Acts, validity of—Separate sentences, validity of.

Separate sentences were passed on the accused under section 47 (a) of the Bihar and Orissa Excise Act and sections 9 (c) and 9 (f) of the Opium Act in the same trial in respect of two sales of opium to the same person and for possession of the residue of the opium left after the sales:

Held, (1) that the whole series of acts for which the accused was punished made one transaction within the meaning of section 235 of the Code of Criminal Procedure and the joint trial of the offences, therefore, was not illegal;

(2) that the conviction for possession was not in respect of the same article as that sold but for the residue, and that, therefore, separate sentences for the possession and the sale did not contravene the provisions of section 26 of the General Clauses Act. Pat BALI SAHU v. EMPEROR, 19 CR. L. J. 446; 3 P. L. J. 433 974

——— s. 250—Compensation, order for, when to be made.

A Magistrate in acquitting the accused called upon the complainant to show cause why an order for compensation should not be made against him. On the same day and on the next page he recorded the statement of the complainant and then made an order against him to pay compensation:

Held, that this was sufficient copmliancewith the provisions of section 250 of the Criminal Procedure Code. P EMPEROR v. SAUDAGAR RAM, 31 P. R. 1917 CR.; 19 CR. L. J. 444 972

——— ss. 284, 285—Trial with aid of only one official assessor, legality of.

The trial of an accused person was fixed for a certain date when only one duly qualified assessor was present in Court and capable of acting as such, whereupon the Judge ordered another person who happened to be present in Court but who was not on the official list of assessors, to act as an assessor:

Held, (1) that having regard to the provisions of section 284 of the Code of Criminal Procedure the trial was illegal;

(2) that section 285 of the Code was inapplicable to the case, inasmuch as the trial started with only one duly qualified assessor and was altogether abortive and contrary to law. Pat BALAK SINGH v. EMPEROR, 3 P. L. J. 141; 19 CR. L. J. 363; 5 P. L. W. 16 587

——— ss. 298, 299, 164—Trial by Jury—Functions of Judge and Jury—Misdirection—Expressions assuming guilt of accused, propriety of.

In a trial by Jury the Sessions Judge admitted as evidence confessional statements of the accused made to the Police which were not strictly within the limits laid down by section 27 of the Evidence Act, and also allowed the Committing Magistrate to depose to statements made by the accused in the course of a proceeding undertaken by him for verifying the confession—statements which were at no time recorded by the Magistrate in accordance with the provisions of section 164, Criminal Procedure Code:

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

Held, that the trial was vitiated by misdirections so that the conviction of the accused and the sentence passed upon him must be set aside and the case re tried by the Sessions Court.

Per Teunon, J.—In a trial by Jury the Judge's treatment of a confession, though onesided to some extent, may not by itself be a sufficient misdirection to the Jury to necessitate a re-trial.

The Judge's instruction to the Jury to take into consideration against an accused statements of co-accused as their "confessions or confessional statements or confessions of a sort", when as a matter of fact those statements were not self-incriminating, amounts to a misdirection.

It is a misdirection for a Judge to leave it to the Jury to decide whether certain statements or confessions made by the accused and how much thereof are admissible in evidence. It is for the Judge to admit or exclude evidence in accordance with the law on the subject and for the Jury to weigh and value the evidence admitted.

A Judge in his charge to the Jury should avoid, as far as may be, the use of expressions which assume the guilt of the accused and must not indulge in the use of slang or colloquial phrases.

Verification proceedings undertaken by a Magistrate in the presence of the accused, with a view to testing the truth of his confession and to obtain evidence either corroborating the confession or indicating its falsity, are not wholly illegal: but the verifying Magistrate cannot be permitted to depose to statements said to have been made to him by the accused in the course of the verification proceedings, where such statements are not recorded by him in the manner provided by section 164, Criminal Procedure Code. C AMIRUDDIN v. EMPEROR, 22 C. W. N. 213, 27 C. L. J. 148; 19 CR. L. J. 505 321

——— s. 299 321

——— s. 342 —Accused, duty of Court to question, after examination of prosecution witnesses

The term "shall" in section 342 of the Code of Criminal Procedure makes the duty imposed on the Court to question the accused generally on the case, after the witnesses for the prosecution have been examined and before he is called for the defence, mandatory and not discretionary and having regard to the object of the examination specified in the section, namely, that it is intended to enable the accused to explain any circumstances in the evidence against him, the omission by a Court to perform this duty must be presumed to seriously prejudice the accused P GHULLA v. EMPEROR, 1 P. R. 9 8 CR; 19 CR L. J. 280 184

——— s. 344—Adjournment of case—Costs, order for, validity of.

The Criminal Procedure Code does not make special provision for costs in the course of a criminal trial and if section 344 of the Code is to be regarded as justifying an order as to costs, it can only be where the circumstances are exceptional and where for some reason or another the ordinary every day method of conducting criminal cases must be departed from. S ABDUL RAHMAN, In re, 20 BOM. L. R. 24; 19 CR L. J. 3 6 342

——— s. 345—Composition of offence, effect of—Complainant, whether can retract—Composition before complaint, enforceability of—'Accused' in s. 345 (6), meaning of—Incomplete agreement, effect of.

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

Section 345 of the Criminal Procedure Code deals only with the lawful compounding of offences. The principles which apply to the offence also apply to the exception.

The section is not limited to acts done in Court or to cases in which the parties continue to be of the same mind until the case comes on for further hearing before the Court. Once a composition has been effected, the matter is at an end and the person injured cannot effectively resile from the agreement. If he chooses to do so, it is for the Court to enquire into the accused's allegation that the offence was compounded out of Court and to direct an acquittal under the section if it so finds.

A composition made before the filing of a complaint in Court is covered by the provisions of section 345, the offence being complete when the acts constituting it have been committed apart from whether any complaint or charge has been laid before the Court or not

The word 'accused' in paragraph 6 of the section only describes the character of the person accused of the offence at the time of the trial when the question of the effect of the composition is under consideration.

To operate as an acquittal the compounding must have been completed and any incomplete agreement would not amount to an acquittal within the meaning of the law. M KUMARASAMI CHETTY v KUPPUSAMI CHETTY, 34 M. L. J. 217; 7 L. W. 274; 23 M L. T 240; 19 CR. L. J 359 583

——— s. 350 328

——— ss. 350, 537—Applicability of s. 350—Transfer of case—Transfer of Magistrate—Judgment pronounced on evidence recorded by another Magistrate—Irregularity—Revision.

Section 350 of the Criminal Procedure Code applies as much to cases in which a Magistrate ceases to exercise jurisdiction by reason of the transfer of the case to another Court, as to cases in which the Magistrate ceases to exercise jurisdiction by reason of his own death or transfer to another post In other words, the section covers cases of transfer as well as those cases in which the Court remains the same but the person of the presiding officer is changed

A complaint filed against the accused was referred for trial to a Second Class Magistrate, who recorded the whole of the prosecution evidence and a portion of the evidence for defence The accused then applied to the District Magistrate for transfer on the express undertaking that in the event of transfer he would be satisfied if the Court, to which the transfer was made, pronounced judgment after recording the evidence of the remaining defence witnesses The District Magistrate transferred the case to a First Class Magistrate, with the direction to proceed with the trial from the stage which it had reached in the Court of the Second Class Magistrate The accused did not claim that the evidence should be recorded de novo and the First Class Magistrate passed sentence upon him after recording the rest of the defence evidence:

Held, (1) that inasmuch as the accused did not demand that any of the witnesses should be re-summoned and re-heard, proviso a to clause (1) of section 350 of the Criminal Procedure Code did not apply and could not be relied upon in support of an application for revision:

(2) per Walsh, J.) that even if the Magistrate commited an irregularity it was curable by section 537 in the absence of circumstances showing a failure of justice. A RAM DAS v. EMPEROR, 16 A. L J. 217; 19 CR. L J 378 682

——— s. 350—Transfer of Magistrate—Trial de novo—Procedure.

The right of claiming a trial de novo on the transfer of a Magistrate is given to an accused person in order that he may have the very great benefit of the Trying Magistrate having the witnesses examined and cross-examined in his presence, so that he may see and note their demeanour and manner of giving evidence. When the right is claimed the Magistrate must re-commence the trial.

In a criminal trial the Magistrate was transferred after the prosecution evidence was heard and a charge framed. The accused claimed a trial de novo before the succeeding Magistrate. Thereupon the witnesses were re-summoned, their statements were read over to them and they were further cross-examined. No fresh charge was framed nor was the accused examined by the Magistrate:

Held, that the provisions of section 350 of the Criminal Procedure Code were not complied with and that a new trial must be ordered L B HNIN YIN v THAN PE, 9 L. B. R. 92; 19 CR. L. J. 321; 11 BUR L. T. 58 337

——— s. 369—Trial for theft—Conviction and sentence—Subsequent sentence on account of previous conviction, validity of.

Accused was tried, convicted and sentenced under section 379 of the Penal Code. There was also a charge against the accused under section 75 of the Code read with section 379, which was not proceeded with until after the sentence in respect of the offence under section 379 had been passed:

Held, that the trial came to an end when sentence was pronounced in respect of the offence under section 379 and that having regard to the provisions of section 369 of the Criminal Procedure Code the Judge had no power to proceed with the trial of the charge under section 75 of the Penal Code and sentence the accused to enhanced punishment. B MAKI PARSU v. EMPEROR, 20 BOM L. R 87; 19 CR. L. J. 279; 42 B 202 183

——— s. 403—Acquittal on charge under s. 465 of the Penal Code, whether prevents subsequent trial for offence under s 467.

A person tried and acquitted on a charge under section 465, Indian Penal Code, may on the same facts be committed to the Court of Session for trial for an offence under section 467 on the allegation of the prosecution that the document said to have been forged is a valuable security. Such a case clearly falls within the purview of section 403, clause 4, Criminal Procedure Code C ABDUL HAKIM KHAN v. EMPEROR, 19 CR. L. J. 388 740

——— s. 408—Appeal from sentence passed by Assistant Sessions Judge—Forum of appeal—Trial Judge officiating as Sessions Judge—Procedure.

An appeal from a conviction and sentence by an Assistant Sessions Judge, where the sentence is less than four years' rigorous imprisonment, lies to the Sessions Court, and the fact that by the time the appeal is ready the Assistant Sessions Judge who tried the case has been promoted to officiate as Sessions Judge does not give the High Court any jurisdiction to try the appeal. In such a case it is open to the Officiating Sessions Judge, on receipt of the appeal, to either send the case to the High Court for disposal or to admit the appeal and postpone it till the return of the Sessions Judge. Pat GARIB LALL v. EMPEROR, 3 P. L J. 192; 19 CR. L. J. 442; 5 P. L. W. 24 970

——— s. 417—Appeal against acquittal—Appellate Court, interference by, when justified.

Where the findings of fact of a Trial Court are in favour of the accused's innocence, a Court of Appeal will not in an appeal against the order of acquittal interfere with the verdict unless the indications of mistake in the judgment of the lower Court are obvious or the evidence as to the accused's guilt is too strong to be rejected. It is immaterial that the Appellate Court might have arrived at a different conclusion had it been trying the accused as a Court of original jurisdiction.

A confessing prisoner should not be condemned upon a retracted confession unless it is corroborated in material particulars. P EMPEROR v. JAWAI, 19 P. W. R. 918 CR; 19 CR. L. J. 275 179

——— s. 421—Appeal, summary dismissal of—Judgment, writing of, necessity of—Revision.

Section 421 of the Criminal Procedure Code empowers an Appellate Court to dismiss an appeal summarily without writing a judgment or giving reasons, but it is within the power of the High Court in revision to say after having regard to the facts of each particular case whether or not the Appellate Court has exercised a proper discretion in acting under that section If the High Court finds that the case is one which should not have been dealt with summarily, the High Court will send the case back ordering the Appellate Court to hear it on its merits and pass a judgment L B NGA BA MYIT v. EMPEROR, 19 L R L J. 316 332

——— s. 421—Appeal, summary dismissal of, without giving reason, legality of—Procedure.

In dismissing appeals under section 421 of the Code of Criminal Procedure some reason should be given and without such reason the summary dismissal would involve either a remand of the appeal to be admitted and heard or an examination of the evidence by the High Court. Pat RAM KANT PANDIT v. EMPEROR, 4 P. L. W. 212; 19 CR. L. J. 304 208

——— ss. 435, 439—Revision against acquittal—Appellate Court, duty of—Evidence, discussion of—Criminal trespass Civil dispute.

It is not a good reason for an Appellate Court to set aside a conviction for criminal trespass and acquit the accused without discussing the evidence or coming to any conclusion thereon, on the mere ground that the case is of a civil nature especially where the first Court has tried out the matter and has come to the conclusion that the accused is guilty of the offence charged. C HARAI CHANDRA NAMA v. OSMANALI, 27 C L. J. 224; 19 CR. L. J. 321 337

——— s. 435 (3) 673, 685, 741

——— s. 437 Discharge of accused Further inquiry, order for, without notice—Discretion—Practice,

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

Nothing in section 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code requires previous notice to any accused person who has been discharged before further inquiry into his case is ordered by a competent authority, that is to say, by the High Court, the Sessions Judge or the District Magistrate. Nevertheless as a matter of judicial discretion it is advisable that previous notice should issue when the matter for consideration is the setting aside of an order of discharge passed in favour of an accused person who has actually been before a Court to answer the facts alleged against him.

The fact of a person's being in the position of an accused with another during an inquiry which resulted in the order of discharge, should not at all prevent his being summoned as a witness in the further inquiry ordered. A ABDUL LATIF KHAN v. EMPEROR, 16 A. L. J. 298; 19 CR. L. J. 401 929

——— s. 437—Further enquiry—Notice to accused, whether necessary—Procedure.

A District Magistrate is not bound in law to issue any notice on the accused before ordering a further enquiry under section 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code, but the exercise of discretion in favour of issuing a notice is considered to be the right and proper action to take. Pat RAMBAHAL RAI v. EMPEROR, 4 P. L. W. 220; 19 CR. L. J. 399 751

——— s. 439 337

——— ss. 496, 498, 112, 118—Security for good behaviour, proceedings for—Bail, excessive—Fair trial.

When a man is arrested who is not accused of a non-bailable offence, no needless impediments should be placed in the way of his being admitted to bail. The intention of the law is that in such cases the man is ordinarily to be at liberty and it is only if he is unable to furnish such moderate security, if any is required of him, as is suitable for the purpose of securing his appearance before a Court pending enquiry, that he should remain in detention.

An order was made against the accused under section 112 of the Code of Criminal Procedure and he was then told that he would be admitted to bail only if he furnished his own recognisance for Rs. 10,000 and a surety for the same amount, these being the particular sums which were also stated in the order under section 112. The result was that owing to his inability to furnish such heavy security the accused remained in custody during the greater part of the enquiry. Finally an order was made against him under section 118 of the Code of Criminal Procedure:

Held, that the order requiring security for bail in such large sums was oppressive and that the accused had not, therefore, had a fair trial and that the order under section 118 must consequently be set aside. B MIR HASHAMALI MIR KASAMALI v. EMPEROR, 20 BOM. L. R. 121; 19 CR. L. J. 329 345

——— s. 498 345

——— s. 503 741

——— s. 514 971

——— s. 517—Gambling, conviction for—Money tied in gamblers' cloth, whether used for 'commission of offence'—Confiscation, legality of—'Used for gaming', meaning of—Discretion of Court—Jurisdiction—'Make such order as it thinks fit' in s. 517 of Act V of 1898, meaning of.

Criminal Procedure Code—concld.

Section 517, clause 1, Criminal Procedure Code, authorises the confiscation only of property which has been used for the commission of an offence.

The words 'may make such order as it thinks fit' in the section do not confer on a Court absolute power of disposition over property which is produced before it but regarding which no offence has been committed and which has not been used for the commission of an offence.

Per Phillips, J—The powers under section 517, Criminal Procedure Code, are very large and the Magistrate's discretion under it is wide, but such discretion must be exercised judicially and, if so exercised, the High Court should not interfere with it in revision.

If there are circumstances from which an inference can be drawn that money has been used for gaming, a Magistrate can order its forfeiture and it is not necessary that he should hold an enquiry for that purpose. M APPAJI IYER v. EMPEROR, 34 M. L. J. 253; 7 L. W. 528; 19 CR. L. J. 501 205

——— s. 537 682

Criminal trial—Alternative defences.

There is nothing in law to prevent a man on his trial on a charge of culpable homicide from setting up an alternative defence, e.g., first, that he was not present at the occurrence referred to by the prosecution witnesses and that they were giving false evidence against him; secondly, that even if he had failed to persuade the Court of this fact, he could show from the statements of the prosecution witnesses themselves that if he had caused the death of any person in the manner and under the precise circumstances deposed to by them, he was acting in the lawful exercise of a right of private defence. A YUSUF HUSAIN v. EMPEROR, 16 A. L. J. 169; 19 CR. L. J. 371 675 ——— Procedure—Accused, right of, to make defence—Irregularity.

A Magistrate exercises his jurisdiction with material irregularity if he holds a trial at a place where the accused is totally incapable of making a proper defence. Pat MEWA LAL v. EMPEROR, (1917) PAT. 363; 3 P. L. J. 147; 19 CR. L. J. 249; 4 P. L. W. 359 41

——— Prosecution, duty of.

It is not sufficient in the case of the trial of an accused in a criminal cause for the Crown merely to establish a prima facie case of guilt. They must establish, so far as they can, by every reasonable means in their power, evidence to support the facts proving conclusively the guilt of the accused. Pat LUCHMI SINGH v. EMPEROR, (1918) PAT. 36; 19 CR. L. J. 344 456

Custom—Burden of proof, whether question of law or of custom 162 ——— Daughter, whether agnate-Execution-Father's estate, whether liable in hands of daughter.

A daughter is not an agnate of her father and she derives her title not from the common ancestor but from her father. She has no right, superior to that of her father; she represents him; and his estate in her hands is liable for his debts. P KISHEN SINGH v. RAHMAT BIBI, 12 P. R. 1918 561 ———, evidence of, how to be dealt with by Courts.

Custom—contd.

In dealing with evidence of custom, Courts should examine the evidence covering the whole period of the custom. It may be that the earlier evidence is not sufficient to establish the custom: it may be that it is sufficient but that later evidence establishes a discontinuance—all these aspects must be considered.

Where abandonment of a customary due is pleaded it is for the tenant to prove it and mere non-receipt of the due will afford very weak evidence of such abandonment. M KUMARAPPA REDDI v. MANAVALA GOUNDAN, 23 M. L. T. 44; 34 M. L. J. 104; 7 L. W. 243; 41 M. 574; (1918) M. W. N. 350 699

———, reasonable—Burden of proof 663

———Alienation — Male proprietor, powers of—Exchange, whether transfer.

An exchange is a transfer of property and its validity must be determined in the same way as that of any other transfer.

A male proprietor cannot be reduced to the level of a widow, and the canon by which a transaction effected by him should be judged is whether it is a fair and bona fide one, such as may be regarded as an act of good management.

An exchange effected by a male proprietor would be binding upon his reversioners, if it is beneficial to the persons interested in the estate. P NAZIR v. AMAR CHAND, 9 P. W. R. 1918; 156 P. L. R. 1917 224

——— ——— ———Necessity—Expenses of defence of head of family, whether legal necessity.

Money raised on ancestral land for the purposes of the defence of the head of the family on a criminal charge must be considered as having been raised for a valid legal necessity. P NARAIN SINGH v. KHAZAN SINGH, 22 P. R. 1918 814

——— ———Proprietary rights acquired by occupancy tenants, effect of.

Where the sons of a Government tenant who acquired occupancy rights in the lands granted to him acquire the full proprietary rights therein, the occupancy rights merge in the proprietary rights and determine absolutely, and the persons who have acquired the proprietary rights are entitled to alienate the lands with or without necessity. P LAL v. GAUHAR, 5 P. R. 1918 129

———Marriage—Evidence—Long cohabitation—Man and wife, treatment as—Presumption.

When a man and a woman have long cohabited and have been treated by their acquaintances, and have treated each other, as man and wife, such long co-habitation plus such treatment is sufficient among Jats to establish a marriage and the legitimacy of the offspring.

Where, however, the parties have not treated each other as man and wife but as master and concubine, the same legal results do not flow from cohabitation even of long date. P PARTAP SINGH v. PARTAPI, 146 P. L. R. 1917 893

———Succession — Ancestral property—Daughter, whether excludes another daughter's daughter—Onus—Sayads of Jullundur District.

Among Sayads of the Jullundur District a daughter's daughter succeeds to her mother's share of ancestral property in preference to another daughter.

The onus of proving that a sister excludes her sister's daughter in succession to ancestral property held by the latter's mother is on the person alleging it. P AZIM BIBI v. UMTAN BIBI, 21 P. W. R. 1918 979

Custom—concld.

———Succession—Self-acquired property—Daughters versus collaterals—Gariwal Jats of Ludhiana District.

Among Gariwal Jats of the Ludhiana District there is a special custom, contrary to general custom, whereby daughters are excluded from succession to self-acquired property by collaterals. P HAZARA SINGH v. BISHEN SINGH, 72 P. W. R. 1918 853

Defence of India (Criminal Law Amendment) Act (IV of 1915), s. 4 185

District Magistrate, direction by, to Magistrate to pass particular order in case pending before him, validity of.

A District Magistrate acts wrongly in giving a direction to a Magistrate subordinate to him that he should pass a particular order with respect to a case which is pending before him in his judicial capacity. P THAKAR SINGH v. KIRPAL SINGH, 10 P. W. R. 1918 CR; 19 CR. L. J. 436 964

Easements Act (V of 1882), s. 17—Water discharged over surplus weir of tank—Easement, right of, acquisition of.

Section 17 of the Easements Act implies that a right of easement in connection with the use of water of artificial channels or of water derived from artificial tanks or pools can be acquired by prescription.

A person can acquire a right of easement with respect to water which is discharged over the surplus weir of a tank and which flows therefrom in a defined channel, if he has been using and enjoying the water for a sufficient length of time and as a matter of right as laid down in section 17 of the Easements Act. M BODDULURU NAGAYYA v. BACHU CHENCHURAMAYYA, 33 M. L. J. 674; (1917) M. W. N. 863 625

——— s. 22—Dominant and servient tenements—Upper owner draining rain or other water on to adjoining land—Easement—Natural, customary and prescriptive right—Injunction not to obstruct exercise of easement, form of.

An owner of land may have a customary or prescriptive right to drain water coming to his land by the falling of rain or drained from upper fields or brought by himself for purposes of irrigation on to adjoining land.

Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J.—An owner of land may have a natural right not only to drain rain water falling on his land on to neighbouring land where it is lower in level than his land, but also to drain water brought on his land by the custom and usages of the country along irrigation channels.

An injunction as to easements which have been broken should be confined to a direction to the party breaking not to obstruct the exercise of the easement and should not descend into details, so as to prevent the servient owner from taking advantage of the privilege given to him by section 22 of the Easements Act.

Per Phillips, J. (Obiter.)—An owner of land can have no natural right to pass water, which has come on his land artificially, on to adjoining land.

Easements Act—concld.

M DORAISWAMI MUTTIRIYAN v. MUTTACHI, (1918) M. W. N. 167; 23 M. L. T. 210 500

——— s. 24, III. (d)—Public paths—Dedication, nature of—Easement, indeterminate body of persons, whether can claim—Public path closed—Right of deviation, extent of.

Public rights of way are not easements. Public, differing from private rights of way originate from a dedication to the public by the owner of the soil over which they pass. Dedication means a gift not necessarily by a deed or any written document, and it is more often implied from custom and user than from any definite act of the owner of the land. Even when no such overt act can be shown, if the public use a way for some time to the knowledge of a land-owner and without resistance, dedication will be inferred and a right gained.

There can be no right of easement in favour of an indeterminate body of persons.

If a person encloses a public path over his land and allows a new one to be opened in its place, he must be presumed to have made a fresh grant to the public of the new path.

When the owner of the land renders a way impassable, the persons entitled to use the way may deviate from it and pass over the adjoining land of the owner provided that the deviation is reasonable

A cultivator, prima facie, has a right to the exclusive use of his own field and very strong evidence is necessary before it can be held that other people have a right of way, public or private, over his land. N LAXMAN v. TUKIA, 14 N. L. R. 78 868

Endowment, deed of, validity of—Pardanashin lady, deed executed by—Evidence, nature of—Burden of proof.

Where the execution of a deed of endowment by a pardanashin lady was questioned, and the evidence showed affirmatively and conclusively that the deed was explained to her, and she thoroughly understood it and signed it after execution not under duress or undue influence but from her free and independent will, that the disposition of the property was a most natural disposition and that besides her strength of will and business capacity, she had independent outside advice coming from members of her own family, who were interested in the promotion of the objects she had at heart:

Held, that the deed of endowment was a valid and legal disposition. O GANGA BAKHSH SINGH v. GOKUL PRASAD, 4 O. L. J. 744 645

Estoppel 304, 547, 570

——— and prescription, acquisition of permanent occupancy rights by—Burden of proof.

The mere fact of the tenants alienating the lands without protest or demur by the temple trustees will not confer on the tenants a right of permanent occupancy by estoppel or prescription M MUNA MUHAMMAD v. MUTHU ALAGAPPA CHETTIAR, 23 M. L. T. 161; 34 M. L. J. 254; 7 L. W. 330 894

——— by representation, plea of.

Estoppel by representation only arises where the representation is as to a matter of fact.

It is absolutely necessary to plead estoppel if it is intended to rely upon it. C CHANDI CHARAN NATH v. SOMLA BIBI, 22 C. W. N. 179; 28 C. L. J. 91 254

Estoppel—concld.

——— , title by.

There is no such thing in law as title by estoppel. N DEOBA v. LAXMAN 978

Evidence—Inadmissible evidence admitted at request of parties, whether can be objected to in appeal.

Where the parties themselves request either that certain evidence which is not in itself admissible as evidence, if objections are taken, should be considered by the Court or where they request that the Judge should himself put questions to witnesses, it does not lie in the mouth of either party, who asks that that course should be taken, afterwards to question it in appeal Pat NARAIN SINGH v. BABA, 4 P. L. W. 89; 1 P. 181) PAT 131 262

Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 21 699

——— ss. 24, 25, 26, 27—S. 27, whether controls s. 24—Confession of co-accused, admissibility of—Supplementary statements by accused during verification proceedings, admissibility of.

Section 27 of the Evidence Act qualifies not only sections 26 and 25 but also section 24. Therefore, when a confession as a whole is excluded, whether by reason of the provisions of section 26 or of section 25 or of section 24, so much of the information given by the person making the confession when he was an accused and in custody as distinctly relates to a relevant fact thereby discovered becomes admissible.

Under section 27 of the Evidence Act so much of the information as set the Police in motion and led to the "discovery" is admissible It does not matter whether the accused himself produced the articles said to be discovered by his statement or confession.

Per Shamsul Huda, J.—Section 24 of the Evidence Act does not control section 27 If a single statement made by the accused contains more information than what is contemplated in section 24, the statement is not to go in as a whole nor is it to go in as a statement at all, but what is admissible is the particular information given by the statement which has led to the discovery.

The verification of a confession by taking the accused to various places referred to in the confession lends itself to great abuses and should be avoided. There is perhaps nothing objectionable if a verification is made independently of the confessing accused and unaided by him.

It would be difficult to hold that the supplemental statements made by the confessing accused in the course of the verification proceedings were voluntary even where they are recorded by the Magistrate in the manner provided in section 164, Criminal Procedure Code. C AMIRUDDIN v. EMPEROR, 22 C. W. N. 213; 27 C. L. J. 145; 19 CR. L. J. 305 321

——— s. 25—Excise officer, whether Police Officer—Confession to Excise Officer, admissibility of.

An Excise Inspector is not a Police Officer, and, therefore, a confession made to him is admissible in evidence against the accused. P EMPEROR v. WAZIR SINGH, 3 P. R. 1918 CR; 19 CR. L. J. 364 588

——— s. 27—Statement of accused leading to discovery, nature of, admissibility of.

It is quite legitimate for a Magistrate to record evidence under section 27 of the Evidence Act that an accused person said "I will point out certain property," if that statement of the accused leads to a discovery, but it is not legitimate to record as evidence that an accused person said, "I will point out certain property which I obtained as my share of the booty in the dacoity." P GURDIT SINGH v. EMPEROR, 9 P. W. R. 1918 CR.; 19 CR. L. J. 439 967

——— ss. 32, 34.

A jamabandi which cannot be admitted as corroborative evidence without independent evidence of the fact of collection of rent at a certain rate under section 34 of the Evidence Act, can be used as independent evidence if it is relevant under section 32 of the Act. But although it would not, as a matter of law, require corroboration, yet the Court is not bound to act upon it without corroboration. Pat CHARITTER RAI v. KAILASH BEHARI, 4 P. L. W. 213; (1918) PAT. 145; 3 P. L. J. 306 422

——— s. 34 422

——— ss. 68, 69, 70, 71—Attestation of document—Admission by executant, effect of.

An admission of execution of a document by the executant thereof dispenses with the necessity of complying with the provisions of section 68 of the Evidence Act as against the party making the admission. Those provisions, however, must be complied with in order to prove the execution of a document as against the other parties to the suit who do not admit such execution. The document must be proved as against them in accordance with the provisions of sections 68, 69, 70 and 71 of the Act. C NIBARAN CHANDRA SEN v. NAGENDRA CHANDRA SEN, 22 C. W. N. 444 984

——— s. 68—Mortgage-deed—Attestation, proof of—Witness summoned, but not examined—"Called," meaning of—Document incorporated in subsequent deed, effect of.

Defendants executed a mortgage in favour of plaintiffs, but it was discovered that the scribe had erroneously entered a lower rate of interest in the deed than was agreed upon between the parties. A fresh deed was thereupon drawn up and executed, which described the correct rate of interest and incorporated some clauses of the previous deed. In a suit on the mortgage it was found that one of the attesting witnesses of the first deed was dead. The second attesting witness was summoned but not examined:

Held, (1) that the first deed could not be used in evidence as an independent document either requiring attestation or in fact attested, inasmuch as the provisions of section 68 of the Evidence Act had not been complied with;

(2) that the second deed having been duly attested and executed and having incorporated the prior deed, the prior deed was admissible in evidence as part of the second deed.

The word "called" in section 68 of the Evidence act means tendered for the purpose of giving evidence. A MOTI CHAND v. LALTA PRASAD, 16 A. L. J. 121 596

——— s. 69—Proof of document where all attesting witnesses are dead.

Where all the attesting witnesses of a mortgage-bond including the scribe were dead and a witness was called who proved the handwriting of the attesting witnesses and who said that he was present at the execution of the document, but did not say that he saw the mortgagor signing his name nor did he say that the signature on the document was the signature of the mortgagor:

Held, that there was a defect in the proof of the mortgage-bond under section 69 of the Evidence Act. C RAJESWARI DASI v. BENODA SUNDARI DASI, 22 C. W. N. 278 533

——— ss. 70, 71 984

——— ss. 74, 83—Survey maps, evidentiary value of.

Survey maps are official documents prepared by competent persons and with such publicity and notice to persons interested as to be admissible and valuable evidence of the state of things at the time they were prepared. They are not conclusive and may be shown to be wrong: but in the absence of evidence to the contrary they may be judicially received in evidence as correct when made. L B MAUNG THIN v MA ZI ZAN 247

——— s. 83 247

——— s. 90—Document more than 30 years old—Presumption—Genuineness—Admissibility of document—Objection not taken in trial Court, whether can be taken in appeal.

Where a party producing a document is unable to say who prepared or signed it or where the document itself does not purport to show who prepared or signed it, the mere fact of the document being more than 30 years old does not make it admissible without proof under section 90 of the Evidence Act.

Where a document is admitted in evidence without objection in the trial Court, no objection as to its formal proof can be taken in appeal. Pat CHARITTER RAI v. KAILASH BEHARI, 4 P. L. W. 213; (1918) PAT. 145; 3 P. L. J. 306 422

——— s. 90—Presumption as to genuineness of ancient documents—Discretion of Court—Appellate Court, interference by.

The question of making a presumption with regard to the genuineness of a document under section 90 of the Evidence Act is one in which the Court has to exercise its discretion and when that discretion has been exercised with due care and the presumption allowed by law has been made an Appellate Court should be slow to interfere with such discretion. P MUHAMMAD USMAN v. RAHIM BAKHSH, 57 P. W. R. 1918 559

——— s. 105 675

——— s. 114—Presumption as to correctness of official acts—Burden of proof—Procedure.

There is a presumption under section 114 of the Evidence Act that an official act has been regularly performed but when an applicant before the Court is attempting to rebut that presumption, it is not for the Court itself to give assistance to the other side or to deal with the matter otherwise than impartially. Pat SOHAGBATI v. SOURENDRA MOHAN SINGH, 4 P. L. W. 296 661

——— s. 114, Ill. (b) 967

——— s. 115—Estoppel—Mortgage—Co-mortgagees, agreement between, to pay off prior mortgage—Failure by one mortgagee to inform co-mortgagee of his charge, effect of.

One S. executed a mortgage in favour of A and B. Some payments were made by S. towards the satisfaction of the mortgage debt which were admittedly taken by B. alone. Subsequently S. executed another mortgage in favour of B and C in order to pay off the prior mortgage. B and C foreclosed the property. B sold his half share in the foreclosed property to the plaintiff and he also sold his right under the prior mortgage, alleging that it had not been fully satisfied. Plaintiff sued to foreclose C's share of the property on the basis of the first mortgage, alleging that it had not been completely satisfied:

Evidence Act—concld.

Held, that in view of the implied terms of the contract between B and C, that contract being that they embarked upon a joint adventure for the purpose of extinguishing the prior mortgage and taking a first charge on the property, it was the legal duty of B to inform his co-mortgagee within a reasonable time that he had still an outstanding claim under the prior mortgage and that B's omission to give the information amounted to such an omission as is contemplated by section 115 of the Evidence Act and operated as an estoppel against A under that section. N PANDURANG SHAMJI v. NARAYAN RAO 547

——— s. 116 368

——— s. 138 343

——— s. 154 33

Execution—Decree, assignment of—Question whether assignee real or ostensible transferee, whether can be decided in execution proceedings.

N. took an assignment of a mortgage-decree and applied to the execution Court to have her name substituted in the place of the decree-holder. The judgment-debtors lodged an objection to the effect that N. was not the real assignee of the decree, but that her husband, who was the Pleader for the judgment-debtors in the execution case, was the real purchaser of the decree, and that the effect of the purchase of the decree by the Pleader for the judgment-debtors was to satisfy the decree and to discharge the judgment-debtors:

Held, that the Pleader was not and could not be a party to the execution case and no question could consequently be decided as between him and his wife as to who was the beneficial owner of the decree. C NAGENDRAE BALA DASSI v. DEBENDRA NATH, 22 C. W. N. 491; 27 C. L. J. 388 13

———Decree, assignment of, pending appeal—Assignee, right of, to execute decree in appeal.

When a decree is assigned, what is transferred is not the decree itself but the interest of the decree-holder in the decree as may be finally determined.

An assignment of a decree, therefore, during the pendency of an appeal against it carries with it the right to execute the decree passed in appeal. M PONNUSAMI PILLAI v. CHIDAMBARAM CHETTIAR, (1918) M. W. N. 194; 23 M. L. T. 213; 7 L. W. 566 849

———Duty of executing Court—Decree to be executed literally—Subject-matter of decree altered materially—Decree, whether capable of execution.

An executing Court cannot tamper with decrees which must be executed literally.

When a decree cannot be executed literally it cannot be executed at all.

Plaintiff obtained a decree that he was entitled to share the water flowing through a certain rajbaha equally with the defendant. Subsequently the canal authorities made certain alterations, as a result of which the volume of water flowing through the rajbaha was increased and many other persons besides the plaintiff and the defendant became entitled to share in the water:

Held, that the decree in favour of the plaintiff was no longer capable of execution. P KHAWAJA MAHMUD v. GHULAM RASUL, 59 P. W. R. 1918 530

———Father's estate, whether liable in hands of daughter 561

———Mortgage debt, whether can be sold apart from security 528

———Sale, suit to set aside—Court, duty of.

When a Court-sale is challenged, it is not the business of the Court to collect materials upon which the sale may be supported for the sake of the reputation of the Court. Pat SOHAGBATI v. SOURENDRA MOHAN SINGH, 4 P. L. W. 296 661

———Small Cause Court, whether can attach and sell preliminary decree for foreclosure of immoveable property.

A Small Cause Court can attach and sell a preliminary decree for foreclosure of immoveable property. N KRISHNAJI v. BALIRAM 252

Fishery, right of—Ownership of tank, whether carries with it right to fish—Prescriptive right, claim of, by villagers—Burden of proof—Lost grant, doctrine of, applicability of—Presumption—Unreasonableness of right claimed—Pleadings—Finding on point not covered by issue—Evidence taken—Remand.

Plaintiff, the lessee of a Zemindari village, claimed the exclusive right of fishing in a tank situated therein and sued defendants, the ryots, for an injunction restraining them from obstructing him in the enjoyment of such right. Defendants pleaded that they had acquired a prescriptive right to fish in the tank on payment of 'pasivari' cess to the Zemindar. The plea was upheld by the Court, though no specific issue was framed on the point:

Held, (1) that the plaintiff must prove both his title and possession within 12 years before suit;

(2) that proof of plaintiff's ownership of the tank did not relieve plaintiff from establishing that the ownership of the tank carried with it the exclusive right of fishing therein, especially after evidence had been let in by defendants to prove the prescriptive right which they claimed;

(3) that on proof of a prescriptive title by defendants, it was competent to the Court to presume a legal origin for it on the principle of a lost grant;

(4) 'that defendants' right by prescription could not be negatived on the ground of its being unlimited, unreasonable or without stint;

(5) that as evidence was let in by the lower Courts on the question of prescription, it was not necessary to remit the case back for raising an issue and recording a fresh finding. M SUBRAMANIAN CHETTY v. VIJIA BAGHUNATHA PILLAI, 6 L. W. 769; 22 M. L. T. 523 419

Fraud, decree obtained by, suit to set aside—Burden of proof—Suspicious circumstances—"Ei qui affirmat non ei qui negat incumbit probatio."

Where a plaintiff seeks to set aside a decree as having been obtained by fraud, and fraud is not proved, the plaintiff fails, and if in the absence of Fraud—concld.

direct proof the circumstances which are established are equally consistent with the allegation of the plaintiff as with the denial of the defendant, the plaintiff fails for the very simple reason that he is bound to establish the affirmative of the proposition; ei qui affirmat non ei qui negat incumbit probatio. C AMJAD ALI HAZI v. ISMAIL, 27 C. L. J. 137 504

———, decree obtained by, suit to set aside—Evidence—Process suppressed, effect of.

In a suit for a declaration that a certain decree was obtained by fraud and is of no effect, a solid foundation is furnished, if the plaintiff establishes that the usual processes were suppressed by the defendant. C GENDU NASYA v. SADI BANIA 983

Full Bench, reference to, of whole case, legality of 699

Further Inquiry, order for—Dismissal of complaint under section 203, Criminal Procedure Code, after enquiry by police, validity of—Report of Police Officer, whether can be sent to Magistrate other than one directing investigation.

Where a Magistrate sends a case to the Police under section 202, Criminal Procedure Code, for investigation and report, the Police Officer to whom the case is sent acts wrongly in sending the papers after the investigation to another Magistrate and applying to him for a kharij-ul-waqua order, when the case is pending in the Court of the Magistrate who referred it to the Police. P THAKAR SINGH v. KIRPAL SINGH, 10 P. W. R. 1918 CR; 19 CR. L. J. 436 964

General Clauses Act (X of 1897), s. 26 974

Gift of occupancy holding by widow, validity of.

In the absence of legal necessity a Hindu widow cannot alienate more than her life-interest merely because to do so would be to give effect to some wish, indicated but not carried into effect, by her husband during his lifetime. N KALWA v. BHAWAR SINGH 1001

Government of India Act, (5 & 6 Geo. V, C. 61), s. 107 564

——— s. 107—Revision—High Court, whether can interfere with proceedings under Ch. XII of Code of Criminal Procedure.

Section 107 of the Government of India Act cannot be invoked so as to question proceedings which purport to be proceedings lawfully taken by a Magistrate under Chapter XII of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

If proceedings totally without legal foundation or legislative authority are taken by a Magistrate in the name of proceedings under Chapter XII but not seriously purporting to be taken under or to comply with the provisions of that Chapter and the High Court is satisfied of that fact by reliable evidence, there is clearly a case for interference. It is always open to a party in such a case to satisfy the High Court that the property of which he is entitled to possession has been dealt with by an order which has no legal authority at all, and he may do so by an affidavit or in any other reliable manner, and thereby invoke the superintending power of the Court, but he cannot ask the High Court to interfere in revision or to send for the record merely by showing that on the face of the judgment the Magistrate has neglected or misinterpreted some of the provisions of the chapter. A SUNDAR NATH v. EMPEROR, 16 A. L. J. 189; 19 CR. L. J. 369 673

Ground rent and house rent, distinction between.

The distinction between a house rent and a ground rent lies in the contract between the lessor and the lessee. If a lessee takes a parcel of land and then builds a house upon it, the rent that he pays to his lessor is a ground rent. If the lessor builds the house and then lets house and land together, the rent is a house rent. Pat ERNEST MYLNE v. NATHU SUNDI, 4 P. L. W. 218 887

Guardians & Wards Act (VIII of 1890), ss. 12, 25—Suit by father for custody of child, maintainability of.

A suit by a father for the custody of his child is maintainable where no remedy under the Guardians and Wards Act exists that he can apply for. L B MATHURABAN v. TEWARY, 10 BUR. L. T. 186 753

——— s. 25 753

——— s. 29, applicability of—Transfer by guardian ad litem*—Sanction of Court, whether necessary.*

Section 29 of the Guardians and Wards Act does not apply to transfers of property made on behalf of minors by their guardians ad litem. No sanction of the Court is, therefore, necessary in the case of such transfers. P BARKAT v. JAMILA, 61 P. W. R. 1918 554

High Courts Act (24 & 25 Vic. C. 104), s. 9 185

——— s. 15 763

Hindu Law, applicability of—Apostacy, effect of—Gonds, whether Hindus—'Sudra,' who is—Burden of proof.

Apostates from the Hindu religion cease to be Hindus and where such apostacy takes the form of conversion to a religion which in itself regulates the devolution of property, e. g., the Muhammadan religion, then, except on proof of a well-established custom to the contrary and that only in regard to inheritance and succession, the convert becomes subject to the law of his adopted religion.

The Gonds in the Central Provinces are not Hindus and they are not governed by the Hindu Law except when it is adopted by any family, sect or branch among them.

Every Hindu, properly so called, who does not belong to one or other of the three regenerate classes is a Sudra, and to him the Hindu Law relating to Sudras applies of its own force, but no non-Hindu can be a Sudra, any more than he can be a member of any of the regenerate classes. Since a Gond is not a Hindu at all he cannot be brought within the category of Sudras.

Although the Hindu Law is primarily a personal law, it has also become attached to localities, and, therefore, a Hindu must be presumed to be governed by the law of the locality where he resides.

A man does not become a Hindu by calling himself one, nor is the adoption by a non-Hindu of usages resembling some parts of the Hindu Law a sufficient ground for applying the whole of that law to him en bloc, in the same way and to the same extent as if he were a Hindu.

In the case of a family which is not originally Hindu but which has adopted Hinduism, the burden of proving that the family is governed in a particular matter by the Hindu Law is upon the person who asserts that it is so governed. N UJWARA v. TILOCHAN 435

Hindu Law—contd.

———Promissory note, executed for promise made by executant's father—Repudiation of promise by father, effect of.

A promissory note given by a Hindu on a promise made by his father cannot be enforced against him as a pious obligation if the promise was repudiated by the father or is otherwise not enforceable. M PERUMAL MUDALIAR v. SENDANATHA MUDALIAR, (1918) M. W. N. 173 479

———, whether overridden by Statute Law—Inheritance, rules of, under Hindu Law and Statute Law, conflict between.

A special Statute like the Agra Tenancy Act can and does modify the operation of the ordinary Hindu Law in certain matters. The scheme of inheritance, therefore, laid down by section 22 of the Act, being other than that prescribed by the ordinary rules of Hindu Law does, within the scope of its operation, override and prevail against the ordinary Hindu Law of inheritance. A KALLU v. SITAL, 16 A. L. J. 225 717

———Adoption—Adoptee, whether bound by anti-adoption contract made by natural father restricting adoptee's rights.

An anti-adoption agreement by the adoptive mother with the natural father of the adopted son, if it amounts only to a fair and reasonable arrangement for the enjoyment of her husband's property by the widow during her lifetime, is valid and binding on the adopted son, especially where there is authority from the husband in that connection.

Neither the adoptive mother nor the natural father of the adopted son has, however, any legal authority to impose a personal contract upon the minor adoptee. Such an agreement between the adoptive mother and the natural father is void unless ratified by the minor.

A Hindu widow before making an adoption made an agreement with the natural father of her prospective adopted son that a certain monthly allowance was to be paid to her brother's son during his lifetime:

Held, that the agreement being in restriction of the adopted son's rights was not binding upon him. C PANCHANON MAJUMDAR v. BINOY KRISHNA BANERJI, 27 C. L. J. 274 538

———of married Sudra, validity of.

The adoption of a married Sudra is invalid according to the Mitakshara as interpreted according to the Benares School of Hindu Law. N KRISHNA MALI v. DEOLIA 928

———Mitakshara—Adoption by widow of separated brother—Consent of husband's relatives, whether necessary—Maintenance, deed of, agreement as to, whether family arrangement.

After the death of A., a Maheswari Hindu governed by the Mitakshara School, his business was carried on by the defendant, who was the son of a deceased separated brother of A. Disputes having arisen between the defendant and A.'s widow regarding the latter's maintenance, agreements were entered into between the parties on the footing that on the death of the widow the defendant would be entitled to the estate of A., and the defendant in pursuance of the agreements deposited a sum with a Bank providing for the maintenance of the widow with interest thereof. Subsequently the plaintiff was adopted by the widow without the consent of her husband's relatives,

Held, (1) that the deeds of agreement entered into by the widow only with reference to her maintenance could not be set up as deeds of family arrangement between the members of the family then in existence as barring the rights of the adopted son;

(2) that as A. was separated from his brothers, his widow was entitled to adopt of her own motion without the consent of her husband's kinsmen, although she had no authority from her husband to do so. C MATHURA DASS KARNANI v. SRIKISSEN KARNANI, 27 C. L. J. 517 5

———Adoption—Presumption — Dvyamushyayana form.

In the absence of any express agreement to the effect that an adoption is to be in the dvyamushyayana form, it must be presumed to be an ordinary adoption. B HUCHRAO TIMMAJI v. BHIMRAO GURURAO DESHPANDE, 20 BOM. L. R. 161 851 ———Alienation by father—'Antecedent debt,' what is—Son, whether bound—Illegal and immoral debts—Burden of proof.

A cash advance does not constitute an "antecedent" debt if its payment and the transfer securing its repayment are in reality parts of the same transaction.

A mortgage of joint ancestral property will not be binding on the mortgagor's son after his death unless the debt secured thereby was either an antecedent debt or was justified by legal necessity.

A Hindu father can make a mortgage of the joint family estate in order to discharge an antecedent debt and such a mortgage can be enforced during his lifetime against his son. This is an exception to the general rule that the ancestral property cannot be alienated except with the consent of all the coparceners or for legal necessity.

It is, however, open to the son to prove that the original debts were incurred for immoral purposes.

A son who seeks to avoid debts contracted by his father on the ground of their having been borrowed for an immoral or illegal purpose is not bound to show that the creditor had knowledge of the immoral or illegal purpose when the loans were advanced. N DILLI SINGH v. BINA, 14 N. L. R. 41 506

———by Hindu female—Reversioners, consent of—Presumption as to legal necessity, strength of—Consent—Attestation, mere, whether proof of consent.

Where it is clearly proved that the nearest reversioners for the time being gave their real consent to an alienation made by a Hindu female, i. e., they did so with a full knowledge of the effect of their consent upon their interests and with an intelligent intention to consent to the production of that effect, there is a strong presumption that there was legal necessity in fact, or that the alienee acted with circumspection and made inquiries which induced the honest belief that such legal necessity did in fact exist, and the alienation is valid and binding on the actual reversioners if the said presumption is not rebutted by very cogent proof.

Mere attestation of the deed of transfer is not sufficient proof of consent to the alienation, there must be clear proof of real consent. O BALWANT v. RAM DAT, 4 O L. J. 711 611

———Alienation by manager of joint family—Prospective trade, whether justifies alienation—Necessity—Purchase, intended, of fresh property—Adult co-parceners joining in sale, effect of, on minor members—Partition, suit for, by co-parceners after setting aside alienation—Vendor describing himself as guardian of co-parcener, effect of—Limitation—Mesne profits, claim for nature and extent of.

The starting of a prospective trade is not a justifiable ground for alienation of family properties by the manager, whether the family is a trading or non-trading one.

The sale or mortgage of ancestral lands for the purpose of purchasing other lands can only be justified if there is clear benefit to the family.

When evidence as to the necessity for a sale is clear, the fact that all the adult members of the family joined in it would have an important bearing on its validity, but when there is no justifying necessity, the mere fact that all the adult co-parceners joined would not give any additional weight to the transaction.

In cases of unwarranted alienations by the manager the other co-parceners are not, as of right, entitled to mesne profits from the date of the alienation. Mesne profits being in the nature of damages, each case must be dealt with on its own merits. M GANESA AIYAR v. AMIRTHASAMI ODAYAR, 23 M L. T. 245 605

———Joint family—Mortgage of joint property by manager who is not father—Necessity—Burden of proof—Mortgage without necessity, whether binds mortgagor's own share.

A mortgage of joint family property made by the manager of the family, who is not the father of the other members of the family, can only be justified so far as it is necessary for joint family purposes. If the necessity cannot be established by direct evidence, it may be assumed if it can be shown that reasonable care was taken to ascertain if such circumstances existed and the transferee acted in good faith. In either case the burden of proof lies on the person who claims the benefit of the mortgage.

If the mortgage debt was not incurred for necessity, not even the mortgagor's own interest can be sold in enforcement of the mortgage,

When the mortgage is for a larger amount than the necessity warrants, it will only be upheld to the extent to which necessity is proved.

A zemindar, manager of a joint family, mortgaged three joint villages for Rs. 3,000 to pay the Government revenue. The lender sued on the mortgage and the other members of the joint family contested the validity of the mortgage. It was proved that Rs. 1,698 odd were actually paid as revenue of two of the villages out of the money lent, but no evidence was given as to the disposal of the balance:

Held, that the mortgage was enforceable to the extent of Rs. 1,698 only against the joint villages and that as regards the balance, not even the mortgagor's own share in those villages was bound. P C ANANT RAM v. COLLECTOR OF ETAH, 34 M. L. J. 291; 7 L. W. 323; 4 P. L. W. 226; 16 A. L. J. 245; 23 M. L. T. 228; 22 C. W. N. 484; 27 C. L. J. 363; 20 BOM. L. R. 524; 40 A. 171 290

———Joint family—Relinquishment by one co-parcener of his share in favour of some of other members of co parcenary body, effect of—Alienation by co-parcener of joint family property without consent of other co-parceners, validity of.

A relinquishment of his share by one member of the co-parcenary body in a joint Hindu family in favour of some members of the body does not enure to the benefit of those members only but enures to that of the entire co-parcenary body.

Under the Law of the Mitakshara joint family property owned by all the members of the family as co-parceners cannot be the subject of a gift, sale or mortgage by one co-parcener except with the consent, express or implied, of all other co-parceners. Any deed of gift, sale or mortgage granted by one co-parcener on his own account of or over the joint family property is invalid and the estate is wholly unaffected by it and in its entirety stands free of it.

Obiter.—A share taken by a mother on a partition of the family property between her sons will not be her stridhan. It will devolve after her death upon all the heirs of her husband. N RAO VINAYAK v. LAXMAN, 14 N. L. R. 56 51

——— ———Self-acquired property—Gains obtained from education received at expense of joint family, whether partible—"Science" acquired at the expense of ancestral wealth"—Special and general education—Question of fact.

The rule laid down by the Mitakshara that "what is earned by science acquired at the expense of ancestral wealth must be shared with the whole of the brethren and with the father" does not apply to gains which are the result, not of the education received at the expense of the joint family but of the peculiar skill, mental abilities and individual effort in applying and improving such education exercised by the person educated at the expense of the joint family. There is no authority in the Mitakshara for the contention that gains made personally and without the aid of joint funds by a member of a joint family, who received an ordinary education suitable to his position as a member of the family to which he belonged, should in law be regarded as partible and not as his self-acquired property.

The question whether a member of a joint family who carries on a personal business without detriment to the joint funds carries it on for his own benefit or for the benefit of the family is a question of fact to be determined on the evidence. P C METHARAM RAMRAKHIOMAL v. REWACHAND RAMRAKHIOMAL, 22 C. W. N. 377; 4 P. L. W. 197; 34 M. L. J. 327; 7 L. W. 361; 23 M. L. T. 218; 16 A. L. J. 281; 27 C. L J. 345; 20 BOM. L. R. 566 269 ——— ———Separation in mess and residence—Separate property—Burden of proof.

In a suit for partition between brothers who were members of a joint Hindu family, it was admitted that the wife of the plaintiff during his absence from home which lasted for a considerable time, was on account of her quarrelsome disposition sent to live in a portion of the family house and to have her meals separately:

Held, that this did not constitute such an admission of separation in estate among the members as would relieve the defendant from proving that the property

Hindu Law—contd.

in dispute was his separate property. O GOBINDEY v. RAM ADHIN, 20 O. C. 398 78 ——— Joint family, trading — Power-of-attorney granted by two members, whether terminates on death of one.

A power-of-attorney granted to a person by two or more members of a Hindu trading family is not terminated by the death of one of them where the interest of the deceased member passes to the surviving member. The analogy of section 253 (10) of the Contract Act does not apply to such cases. M PONNUSAMI PILLAI v. CHIDAMBARAM CHETTIAR, (1918) M. W. N. 194; 23 M. L. T. 213; 7 L. W. 566 849

——— Partition—Mithila School—Grandmother, whether entitled to share—Stridhan—Devolution of property assigned to grandmother on partition—Minor member, whether can express intention to separate—Institution of suit, whether sufficient indication of intention to separate.

According to the Mithila School of Hindu Law a paternal grandmother is entitled to a share on partition of the joint property between her son and grandson. Such share, however, is not her stridhan and on her death goes back to the estate from which it came.

The mother or grandmother's share on partition is taken in lieu of maintenance and on her death reverts to the general estate and does not cease to be ancestral property.

The institution of a suit for partition of joint family property is a sufficient indication to separate, so that the birth of a member subsequent to the institution of the suit does not affect the share which the plaintiff is entitled to receive.

A minor can either himself or through his guardian express an intention to do that which is clearly not against his own interest. The institution of a suit by a minor member of a joint Hindu family for partition of the family property may, therefore, amount to the indication of an intention to separate. Pat KRISHNA LAL JHA v. NANDESHWAR JHA 146

——— Succession—Apostacy by Hindu widow and subsequent re-marriage, effect of—Caste Disabilities Removal Act (XXI of 1850)—Hindu Widows' Remarriage Act (XV of 1856), s 2.

Section 2 of Act XV of 1856 does not apply to the case of a widow who has been converted to another religion and while in the second religion marries a husband.

The word 'widow' in the section applies only to such widows who continue to be Hindus at the time of re-marriage.

Therefore, where the property of her deceased husband has once vested in a Hindu widow, her subsequent conversion to another religion and re-marriage thereafter will not divest it. M KARNAM CHOWDAPPA v. KARNAM NARASAMMA, 23 M. L. T. 81; 7 L. W. 411; (1918) M. W. N. 274 299 ——— Succession—Reversioner, right of, nature of—Guardian of minor reversioner, whether can bind his interest.

A Hindu reversioner has no right or interest in præsenti in the property which a female owner holds for her life, until it vests in him on her death, should he survive her. Till that time he has nothing to assign or to relinquish or even to transmit to his heirs. His right becomes concrete only on her demise; until then it is a mere spes successionis. His guardian, if he happens to be a minor, cannot bargain with it on his behalf or bind him by any contractual engagement in respect thereto.

A Hindu died leaving a widow R., a daughter K. and a daughter's son A. Mutation of his estate was effected in the name of his widow and on the latter's death in the name of his daughter K. His collaterals disputed K.'s right to succeed to his estate and the matter was referred to arbitration. K.'s husband represented K. and her son A., who was a minor, in the arbitration proceedings. Finally a compromise was arrived at and the arbitrators gave an award in the terms of the compromise. On K's death A. sued for the possession of the estate:

Held, that he was not bound by the award, inasmuch as his right at the time of the arbitration was a mere spes successionis which could not be dealt with on his behalf by his father. P C AMRIT NARAYAN SINGH v. GAYA SINGH, 23 M. L. T. 142; 22 C. W. N. 409; 27 C. L. J. 296; 34 M. L. T. 298; 4 P. L. W. 221; 16 A. L. J. 265; (1918) M. W. N. 306; 7 L. W. 581 408

——— Trust—Religious and charitable trusts—Temple manager, power of, to pledge credit of temple—Fireworks, purchase of, for festival—Liability of temple assets—Trustee, power of, to act without concurrence of co-trustees.

As a general rule of Hindu Law, property given for the maintenance of religious worship and of the charities connected with it is inalienable.

The manager of a temple has no authority to pledge the credit of the temple except for necessity, which necessity must relate to the preservation of the temple or the maintenance of the religious service. He should ordinarily only apply the income in the administration of the charity.

The purchase of fireworks for use at festivals cannot be charged on the assets of the temple, as it is not necessary for the preservation of the temple or the maintenance of religious service.

Per Bakewell, J., obiter.—Even if under the scheme of management of a temple one of several managers has authority to collect and disburse its income, it does not follow that he can exercise the abnormal power of alienating or charging the temple property or otherwise dealing with its capital without the concurrence of his co-trustees. M ADIRAJA ARSU v. BUDAN SAHIB, 34 M. L. J 358; 23 M. L T. 278; (1918) M. W. N. 331 815

——— Will, construction of—Life-estate to daughter-in-law, with reversion to her male issue—Son, whether can alienate property during lifetime of devisee.

The single rule of construction in a Hindu as in an English Will is to try to find out the meaning of the testator taking the whole of the document together and to give effect to this meaning.

Plaintiff sued for a declaration that the alienation of certain property effected by her son was null and void, on the ground that under the Will of her late father-in-law she was the sole owner of the property during her lifetime and that the defendant had no interest in it. The Will gave a life-estate to the plaintiff and provided that her husband "should receive one-half of the income accruing from the property during his lifetime", that after his death "the right to income accruing from immoveable property shall devolve upon his male issue, if any," and that after the plaintiff's death the property shall devolve upon the male issue, if any, of the plaintiff and her husband:

Hindu Law - concld.

Held, (1) that the testator intended that his estate should vest in his daughter-in-law for her lifetime and that his son (plaintiff's husband) and, after his death, his male issue should receive a moiety of the income accruing therefrom;

(2) that during the lifetime of the plaintiff her son had no right whatsoever in the estate and was not consequently entitled to dispose of it either temporarily or permanently. P JASODHAN v. BISHAN SINGH 209

——— — Will, necessary elements of.

A document sent by a person, containing the relevant particulars relating to the history of his estate and a declaration as to who is to be his successor, in pursuance of an advertisement appearing in a paper announcing the intention of the advertiser to prepare a compilation showing the family history of the taluqdars of Oudh, can for the purposes of Hindu Law be treated as a testamentary declaration by the writer of his intention with respect to his property, which he desires to be carried into effect after his death. O BALRAJ KUAR v. MAHADEO PAL SINGH, 20 O. C. 360; 4 O. L. J. 589 59

Hindu Widows' Re-marriage Act (XV of 1856), s. 2 299

Hostile witness—Prosecution witness making admission in favour of defence, whether hostile.

A witness is not necessarily hostile because in an absent-minded moment he lets out the truth. It must be shown before a witness can be declared hostile that there is good ground for believing that the statement he has made in favour of the defence is due to enmity to the prosecution. It may be an unfriendly act to let out the truth, but it is not necessarily a hostile act. Pat FOUZDAR RAI v. EMPEROR, 4 P. L. W. 111; 19 CR. L. J. 24'; 3 P. L. J. 419; (1918) PAT. 254 33

Injunction 500

———, meaning of.

An injunction is in its essence the grant of a mode of relief consequential upon an infringement of a legal right. It forms part of a decree made at a hearing upon the merits, whereby the defendant is perpetually inhibited from the assertion of a right, or perpetually restrained from the commission of an act contrary to equity and good conscience. Pat ARJUN SUIE v. EMPEROR, 3 P. L. J. 106; 19 CR. L. J. 285 737

———, suit for 844

Insolvency proceedings—Court, power of, to hold summary proceedings for discovering properties of insolvent—Creditor, remedy of, where insolvent conceals property.

The Provincial Insolvency Act contains no section corresponding to section 27 of the Bankruptcy Act. An Insolvency Court has, therefore, no jurisdiction to hold summary proceedings for the purpose of summoning before it and examining persons in order to discover whether any portion of the insolvent's property has been concealed by him by having vested it in a benamdar and thereupon directing the benamdar to transfer to the Official Receiver the property so vested in him.

Insolvency proceedings—concld.

When a scheduled creditor in an insolvency proceeding has a prima facie case that a portion of the insolvent's property has been concealed by the insolvent by having vested it in a benamdar, his remedy is to apply to the Court to direct the Official Receiver to institute a suit against the benamdar to recover the property in question on condition that the creditor so applying shall put the Official Receiver in funds and properly indemnify him against the costs in the suit. C JOY CHANDRA DAS v. MAHAMAD AMIR, 22 C. W. N. 702 143

Intention, what is.

Intention is a question of fact which must be decided upon the circumstances of each particular case. It may be a legal fiction as, for instance, where knowledge is presumed in the case of a person who is intoxicated and intention is the inference drawn from such knowledge, or it may be proved by evidence of the particular circumstances in each case. U B NGA PO THA v. EMPEROR, 3 U. B. R (1917) 54 19 CR. L. J. 375 679

Interpretation of Statutes—Headings, whether can be referred to.

The headings prefixed to sections or sets of sections may be used for the purpose of interpreting the meaning, scope and intention of Statutes.

The recital or preamble of an Act is a key for opening the meaning and intent of the Act

Per Roe, J.—It is only when words are of doubtful meaning that the Courts should look to probable intention.

Per Mullick, J.—The words of the heading should not be allowed to affect the construction of a section. Pat JANKI SINGH v. JAGANNATH DAS, 3 P. L. J. 1 94

——— — Indian Act based on English Act, construction of—English decisions, whether binding.

In considering the construction of a section in an Indian Act which is professedly based on and in fact reproduces the language of an English enactment the Courts in India are, in practice if not in theory, bound by the decisions of the English Court of Appeal C PREMSUK DAS ASSARAM v. UDAIRAM-GUNGABUX, 22 C. W. N. 204; 45 C. 138 233

——— — Preamble, whether governs express provisions.

The preamble cannot restrict the enacting part of an Act though it may be referred to for the purpose of solving an ambiguity. C MANI LALL SING v. TRUSTEES FOR THE IMPROVEMENT OF CALCUTTA, 27 C. L. J. 104 770 ——— Retention of old provision, effect of.

In construing a Statute the Court is entitled to look at the course of legislation up to the date of the Statute, and if the words of a previous Statute are re-enacted it may be assumed that it was intended that the law should be continued as it previously existed. Pat NARAIN SINGH v. BABA, 4 P. L. W. 189; (1918) PAT. 131 262

Irregularity not amounting to miscarriage of justice—Revision—High Court, power of 119

Joint trial—Evidence, discussion of, as against each accused—Court, duty of.

Where several persons are charged with an offence, the judgment of the Court should contain a discussion of the evidence as against each accused. M PENUMESA THIRUMALRAJU v. EMPEROR, 19 CR. L. J. 248 40

Jurisdiction 296, 328, 353, 609, 671, 689, 816, 863, 881, 885, 966, 967

——— of Civil and Revenue Courts 817

——— of Civil and Revenue Courts—Landlord and tenant—Under-proprietary right, claim for—Evidence—Proof—Suit, maintainability of—Oudh Rent Act (XXII of 1886), s. 108 (10).

At the time of the first regular settlement in 1877 a suit was brought by certain persons claiming to be under-proprietors of an entire village. The Settlement Court dismissed the suit on the ground that each under-proprietor should bring a separate suit for the sir plots in his possession. One of those persons then brought a separate suit for a declaration of his rights to certain sir plots, impleading the superior proprietors as defendants in his suit. His allegation was that he was one of the old proprietors of the village and had been in possession of the plots in dispute in proprietary right on payment of a certain amount of annual rent to the superior proprietors. Some of the superior proprietors admitted the claim. The suit was, however, dismissed otherwise than on merits, and it was left open to the said person to sue for his rights after the bar to the trial of the suit was removed. No such suit was thereafter filed by that person or his successors-in-interest. But, in 1882, the then superior proprietor issued a notice of ejectment against that person, who contested it and succeeded in getting it cancelled on the ground that he was a zemindar and that his right as such had been admitted by the persons from whom the then superior proprietor derived his title. In 1902 the superior proprietors sought to eject the successors-in-interest of the said person, i. e., the present plaintiffs, from the said plots, by notice through the Revenue Court. The plaintiffs contested the notice on the ground that they were under-proprietors, but the finding of the Revenue Court was against them and they were ejected in 1903. Then they brought a suit for possession of the plots in the Civil Court, alleging that they were under-proprietors and had been wrongfully ejected by the Revenue Court, but their suit was dismissed on the ground that they should first seek their remedy under section 108 (10) of the Oudh Rent Act. They accordingly went to the Revenue Court, but that Court dismissed their suit on the point of limitation. Then followed the present suit for possession and damages, filed in the Civil Court in 1915, similar to the previous suit dismissed by that Court:

Held, (1) that under the above circumstances the plaintiffs' under-proprietary title was satisfactorily established;

(2) that the present suit in the Civil Court was not barred by reason of the fact that the plaintiffs' remedy under section 108 (10) of the Oudh Rent Act had been found by the Revenue Court to be barred by time. O KHADIM HUSAIN v. JAMIL BIBI, 4 O. L. J 577 357

Jurisdiction—concld.

——— of Civil Courts to determine legality of tax—Suit for recovery of amount paid as tax, whether cognisable by Small Cause Court.

The power conferred by a special Act on a local authority to impose a particular tax for particular purposes in a specified manner does not oust the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts to give relief against an illegality committed by that body under cover of statutory powers.

A Civil Court has jurisdiction to determine the question whether the imposition of a tax is illegal and ultra vires and to give relief if a tax has been levied from a person who is not liable to pay the same. P COMMITTEE OF NOTIFIED AREA, UNA v. CHATAR BEHARI NARAIN, 74 P. W. R 1918 910

——— •—, question of, consideration of 887

Kachin Hill Tribes Regulation (I of 1895), ss. I (3), I I—Civil Procedure Code (Act V. of 1908), ss. 9, 20—Jurisdiction—Regulation, whether applies to Kachins outside hill-tracts.

The Kachin Hill Tribes Regulation applies to Kachins in the defined hill-tracts and does not apply outside those hill-tracts.

Section 11 of the Kachin Hill Tribes Regulation applies to suits triable within a hill-tract by an officer exercising jurisdiction therein. It is permissive and gives the Special Court power to try any suit of the nature described, but it does not lay down, and it cannot be inferred, that where a suit is triable outside a hill-tract, the jurisdiction of the ordinary Civil Courts is superseded. U B PAUKSI HOW v. SINWA NAUNG, 3 U. B. R. (1917) 49 659

Khoti Lands—Survey and revised settlements— Kabuliyats passed by khots—Khots, right of, to trees on varkas land.

Certain villages to which Dunlop's Proclamation of 1824 applied were originally surveyed about 1855 and the survey settlement was introduced into them in 1865-66. In the settlement register the land in dispute was described as Varkas and particular Survey and Falni Numbers were given to it. A revision survey settlement was introduced in 1902. After 1870 the Khots passed annual kabuliyats to the Government. The Khots had to pay a certain fixed amount in respect of the Varkas lands of these villages every year to the Government and they used to recover the customary dues from those who used or were in occupation of the Varkas lands prior to the settlement of 1865-66. After the settlement the dues payable to the Khots by the occupants in respect of the Varkas land were the fixed assessment and the Fayda. Under one of the clauses of these kabuliyats the Khots were entitled to one-third of the value of teak trees standing on the Varkas lands. The Government sold certain teak trees to the Khatedars and the Khots sued to establish their right to the entire value of the trees under Dunlop's Proclamation or alternatively to one-third of the value under their kabuliyats:

Held (per Heaton, J.), that as between the Khots and the Government the matter in dispute was concluded by the kabuliyats and that the Khots could not, therefore, obtain more than one-third of the proceeds of the sale of the trees.

Khoti Lands - concld.

Per Shah, J.—(1) That Dunlop's Proclamation may apply even to Varkas lands, provided the person who claims the benefit of the Proclamation can prove that the land, on which the trees stand, is his in a popular sense, i. e., it is sufficiently marked out as being in his permanent occupation in his own right so as to make it properly describable as his land;

(2) that the Khots in this case were not in permanent occupation of the lands in question nor did they have such interest in the lands as would enable them to obtain the benefit of Dunlop's Proclamation;

(3) that if the Proclamation applied to the lands in question, the Khot's rights to the trees were not affected by the kabuliyats, inasmuch as the kabuliyats regulated only such rights to trees as a Khot enjoyed only as a Khot and which would come to an end if he ceased to be a Khot;

(4) that the Khots had no claim to the teak trees under section 40 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code B SADASHIV PARSHARAM v. SECRETARY OF STATE, 20 BOM. L. R. 1411 872

Land Acquisition Act (I of 1894), ss. 9, 25 (2)—Notice to persons interested —Failure to make claim on date fixed, effect of—Collector, jurisdiction of, to consider claim before award—Cost of construction, whether can be taken into account.

In a suit for compensation for a house acquired by the Government it appeared that the notice issued by the Collector under section 9 of the Land Acquisition Act directed the persons interested to appear and state their objections on the 20th July 1912. The plaintiff failed to appear on that date inspite of the fact that the notice was duly served upon him. Eventually he appeared on the 21st August and filed written objections, which were considered by the Collector who made his award. The plaintiff objected and a reference was made to the Court in accordance with law:

Held, (1) that the plaintiff could not be said to have omitted to make a claim pursuant to the notice given under section 9 merely because he did not make it by the date originally fixed in the notice;

(2) that at any time before giving his award the Collector had jurisdiction to deal with any claim made to him under section 9 2) of the Act;

(3) that the cost of construction of the house could be taken into account in fixing its market value. P SECRETARY OF STATE v. SOHAN LAL, 76 P. W. R. 1918; 60 P. R. 1918 883

——— ss. 23, 49—Compound appurtenant to house under cultivation of occupancy tenants, whether can be treated as 'building site' - Compensation, assessment of, mode of—Annual profits, whether can form basis of award—Market value.

A compound appurtenant to a house but in cultivating possession of occupancy tenants was acquired under the Land Acquisition Act and compensation was assessed on the basis of 16 years' purchase of the annual profits then derived by the owner from the land. The owner objected that compensation should have been assessed according to the market value of the land considered as a building site:

Land Acquisition Act—concld.

Held, that the method of assessment was correct as the land in suit was not at the disposal of the owner for sale as building site, inasmuch as any one desiring to acquire it for that purpose would have to deal not only with the owner but also with the occupancy tenants having vested rights not transferable except under stringent limitations laid down by the Tenancy Act. A ORDE v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA, 16 A. L. J. 301 923

——— s. 23—Quarry, compensation for, mode of calculation of.

Per Fletcher and Greaves, JJ. (Huda, J, dissenting—The basis of the compensation to be paid for acquiring a quarry is the amount of workable stone likely to be gotten therefrom taken at a rate to be determined from the evidence.

Per Huda, J.—In cases of this kind it is generally necessary to take two or all the methods of valuation available in order to arrive at a fairly correct valuation, as exact valuation is practically impossible and approximate market value is all that can be aimed at. C MAZAFFAR ALI KHAN v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA . I

——— s. 23 (2) 363
——— s. 25 (2) 883
——— s. 49 923

Landlord and tenant—Acquiescence—Tenant cultivating waste land without objection—Presumption of contract of tenancy.

Where a plea of acquiescence or of standing by has been raised by a tenant in order to resist the claim of the landlord to eject him and it is proved that the tenant has been encouraged to spend money, he can claim the protection given by a Court of Equity. In the absence of such a plea of "standing by" or acquiescence a Court of fact may, if the circumstances of the case justify, come to the conclusion that the landlord had expressly or impliedly contracted to lease the land to a tenant whose reclamation of waste land has not been objected to for some years. This, however, is not a presumption of law but a presumption of fact which may or may not arise in a case. N SAWAI SINGHAI NATHURAM v. KALLOO 517

——— —Agreement to pay rent—Tenant, whether can question right of landlord to sue for rent—Estoppel—Agra Tenancy Act (II of 1901), s. 10—U. P. Land Revenue Act (III of 190), s. 36—Mortgage of sir and khudkasht land—Ex-proprietary rights - Agreement of rent between mortgagor and mortgagee, whether can be accepted by Revenue Authorities.

Defendant, a proprietor in a mahal, mortgaged his entire share, including his sir and khudkasht lands, to the plaintiff, and then entered into a contract of lease with the latter by which he undertook to hold the sir and khudkasht lands as tenant of the plaintiff and agreed to pay a certain rent therefor. The rent agreed upon between the parties was accepted by the Assistant Collector as a fair rent under section 36 of the U. P. Land Revenue Act. The plaintiff sued for rent on the basis of that agreement and the defendant resisted the claim on the grounds, (1) that the right to sue vested in the entire body of co-sharers in the mahal to which the lands in suit appertained, (2) that the agreement to pay a certain rent contravened the provisions of section 10 of the Agra Tenancy Act:

Landlord and tenant—contd.

Held, (1) that the defendant having admitted the plaintiff to have held the demised lands in severalty and having covenanted to occupy them as his tenant and to pay him rent therefor, it was not open to him to object that the other co-sharers should have joined in the suit;

(2) that it was competent to the Assistant Collector acting under section 36 of the U. P. Land Revenue Act to accept the agreement of rent come to between the parties. A JAHANGIRA v. KARRAR HUSAIN, 16 A. L. J. 212 513

———Ante-Jagir tenant, position of—Fruit trees planted by tenant—Tenant, right of, to share in fruit.

An ante-Jagir tenant is the owner of his land subject to the payment of the rent to the Jagirdar. As long as this is paid the Jagirdar cannot evict him.

Any trees planted in his ante-Jagir holding by such tenant or planted with his permission by any one else do not affect the Jagirdar who, so long as the rent is regularly paid, cannot claim either the land or the trees.

In the absence of an express agreement to the contrary the proprietorship of the land carries with it the ownership of the trees thereon.

There is no custom in Berar that a lessee planting fruit trees on his holding is entitled to half the fruit of the trees even after the termination of his lease. N SHAM RAO KUNBI v. SITARAM 865 ———Charge on crops—Liability of person removing crops.

Where the landlord has a charge for rent on the crops, a person removing the crops with notice of the charge is liable for the difference between the amount of the rent due and the quantity of the crops not removed, and not for the whole of the crops removed. L B MAUNG HTAT v. MAUNG SAN DUN 109

———Consent decree limiting remedy of landlord to eject tenant in case of refusal to cultivate—Landlord, right of, to sue for rent when land left uncultivated.

Where according to the terms of a consent decree, in the event of the defendant-tenant refusing to cultivate the land and to render the plaintiff landlord his share of the produce, the only remedy which the plaintiff would have was to eject the defendant:

Held, that the clause relating to ejectment was in the nature of a clause for re-entry and had not the effect of depriving the landlord of his ordinary right to sue for the arrears of rent due by the tenant. C PROBODH CHANDRA v INDRA CHANDRA 925

———Decree against heirs of original tenant, whether binds unregistered transferee.

A mourasi mokurari jote was held by P., who bequeathed it to the plaintiff. The plaintiff's name not having been registered in the landlord's books, the landlord, though aware of the bequest in plaintiff's favour, sued the heirs of P. for rent got a collusive decree and in execution thereof sold away the jote:

Landlord and tenant—contd.

Held, that the plaintiff's right to the jote was not extinguished by the sale in execution of the landlord's decree for rent against the heirs of P. C JAGADISH CHANDRA v. SRIDAM MAHATA 26

———Mirasi tenure—Thunduvaram, levy of—Customary right—Agreement by tenant to pay cess, admissibility of—Admission against interest—Thunduvaram, whether rent or 'dues'—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 131.

By the Full Bench—The liability to pay thunduvaram is a well-known incident of mirasi tenure in the Chingleput District but as it is not universally applicable, it is for the mirasidar to show that he is entitled to enforce it by the custom of the estate or the neighbourhood.

The recognition of a mirasidar's right to swantantram or thunduvaram in the Settlement Register is of great evidentiary value as a strong instance of the assertion of the right on the estate and is, therefore, entitled to great weight while, on the other hand, the refusal of the Settlement Officer to register the swantantram, is not conclusive as he has no authority to determine the question and does not detract from the weight of other evidence relating to the mirasidar's right by custom to collect such dues.

A written agreement by a tenant to pay the swantantram or thunduvaram is admissible as an admission of the evidence of custom unless the tenant explains away the admission and its effect cannot be discounted or neutralised on the ground that the admission is recent.

By the Division Bench, (Sadasiva Aiyar and Napier, JJ.)—The thunduvaram cess claimed by a mirasidar is not of the nature of rent but comes under the general expression 'dues' in Article 13 of the Provincial Small Causes Courts Act.

The refusal of Government to recognise the thunduvaram does not amount to a 'refusal' by the tenant to pay the due. to the mirasidar within the meaning of Article 131 of the Limitation Act. M KUMARAPPA REDDI v. MANAVALA GOUNDAN, (1918) M. W. N. 350; 23 M. L. T. 44; 34 M. L. J. 104; 7 L. W. 243; 41 M. 374 699

———Mokurrari tenure—Dispossession of tenure-holder from portion of holding—Tenure-holder, whether can withhold rent.

Where a lessor is directly or indirectly concerned in the dispossession of a tenure-holder from a mokurrari, the tenure-holder is entitled to withhold payment of the entire rent to the superior landlord. Pat MOSUDAN POTDAR v. SATIS CHANDRA ROY, 3 P. L. W. 364 658

———Occupancy holding, mortgage of—Death of tenant, without heirs, effect of.

Where a non-transferable occupancy holding is usufructuarily mortgaged by the tenant without the consent of the landlord, the latter is entitled to eject the mortgagee from the holding on the death of the tenant without heirs. C HARAPALI SARKAR v. RAJAB-ALI MIA 721

———Suit for rent against some out of several joint tenants, maintainability of—Co-tenant's liability for rent, whether joint and several.

The plaintiff brought a suit for arrears of rent against six persons, three of whom were dead, and obtained a decree. In execution the representatives of the deceased defendants were brought on the record, but they objected to the execution of the decree on the ground that the decree was a nullity having been obtained against persons some of whom were dead:

Held, that the decree was not a nullity and could be executed as a money decree as against those judgment-debtors who were living at the date of the suit and the decree passed therein, although it could not be executed as against the representatives of the judgment-debtors who were dead when the suit was instituted.

Per Richardson, J.—The liability of co-tenants is presumably joint and several, unless it is shown to be merely joint.

In England it is the right of persons jointly liable to pay a debt to insist on being sued together. But in India, apart from express agreement, this right has been abrogated by section 43 of the Contract Act.

Difference between 'joint liability' and 'joint and several liability' explained.

Per Chatterjea, J.—Where a landlord creates a tenancy in favour of two persons jointly, whether each is liable for the entire rent depends upon the intention of the parties and where there is a written contract, the intention would depend largely on the contract.

The liability of joint tenants for rent is, like the liability of joint promisors, a joint and several liability. C KRISHNA DAS ROY v. KALI TARA CHOWDURANI, 22 C. W. N. 289 80 ———Tenant holding over—Suit for damages for use and occupation—Damages, measure of.

In the case of a tenant holding over wilfully and contumaciously damages for use and occupation are assessed at double the ordinary rent. P MADAN MOHAN LAL v. FIRM OF MESSRS. B. BOROOAH & COMPANY, 11 P. L. R. 1918; 71 P. W. R. 1918 859

————Tenant, right of, to cut trees—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII B. C. of 1885), s. 23—Tenure-holder, whether entitled to cut trees.

A permanent tenure-holder is entitled to cut down trees situate within his tenure He can only be prevented from doing so by the landlord showing a custom contrary to the right of the tenure-holder.

Whatever the tenant, whether he be a tenure-holder or a lessee, has grown upon the land that belongs to him. Pat SARDAR SINGH v. EMPEROR. 4 P. L. W. 291; 19 CR. L. J. 339 451

————Tharam Faisal Muchilikas, execution of, before passing of Madras Estates Land Act (Mad. I of 1908), effect of—Tenants described Ulavadai Kudikani Mirasidars, effect of—Occupancy rights, claim of—Lease by trustees of temple-lands—Alienation by tenants without protest by trustees, effect of.

In certain Tharam Faisal Muchilikas executed by the lessees in favour of their landlords, the trustees of a temple in a village in the Tanjore District, long before the passing of Madras Act I of 1908, it was recited that the tenants agreed, (1) to accept the lands from the temple for purposes of cultivation from the current Fasli, (2) that they would pay the Melvaram Tirva due to Government in cash instead of in grain, though the said Tirva was directly due by the lessor (temple) to Government, (3) that they would pay the equivalent price of the paddy grain besides the Punja cash rent due to the temple as Swamibogam (soil proprietor's dues) and that such rent would be paid as long as the occupants were in possession, (4) that they would pay additional revenue to Government for raising garden crops, (5) that when waste lands were newly cultivated, they would pay additional tirva or Swamibogam to Government, and (6) that they would supply Kudimaramath labour for repairs and men for carrying the temple paraphernalia in times of fairs and festivals. The tenants described themselves as Ulavadai Kudikani tenants:

Held, (1) that the executants of such Tharam Faisal Muchilikas could not be said to possess permanent rights of occupancy;

(2) that the mere assertion by the tenants that they were Ulavadai Kudikani Mirasidars in the village could not invest them with such rights;

(3) that the onus of proving the existence of occupancy rights lay on the lessees. M MUNA MUHAMMAD v. MUTHU ALAGAPPA CHETTIAR, 23 M. L. T. 161; 34 M. L. J. 234; 7 L. W. 380 894

Legal Practitioners Act (XVIII of 1879), s. 13 (f)—Pleader asking Judicial Officer to decide case in favour of one of the parties—Grossly improper conduct.

A Legal Practitioner, who writes a letter to a Judicial Officer recommending that a case pending before that officer should be decided in favour of one of the parties, is guilty of grossly improper conduct within the meaning of section 13 (f) of the Legal Practitioners Act, and it is immaterial whether the party for whom the recommendation is made is on the right or wrong side, and whether the letter is written by the Pleader at the instigation of another or of his own accord. P In the matter of NARINDRA SINGH, 3 P. W. R. 1918 CR.; 161 P. L. R. 1917; 19 CR. L. J. 267 123

———s. 36—Tout, person proclaimed as—Evidence of general repute, admissibility of—'General repute or otherwise,' meaning of—S. 36 (3), interpretation of—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 110.

The evidence which may legitimately be tendered in a case under section 36 of the Legal Practitioners Act, is of general repute. The phrase 'general repute' in the section clearly includes hearsay evidence, which may be tested when admissible by cross-examination just as any other evidence may be tested and challenged. The words 'or otherwise' are clearly intended to include all the ordinary modes of proof known to the law which might otherwise be said to have been impliedly excluded, such as personal observation, evidence of conduct, admissions in conversation and the like, proved by first hand testimony.

The recognised principles applicable in cases under section 110 of the Criminal Procedure Code apply to cases under section 36 of the Legal Practitioners Act.

Legal Practitioners Act—concld.

Sub-section (3), section 36, of the Legal Practitioners Act means that the exhibition of the copy-list there referred to is necessary to constitute a man a proclaimed tout. A mere removal or failure, however, to keep the list exhibited in the Court of a District Judge has not the effect of cancelling the list altogether, inasmuch as it is to be exhibited in all Courts subordinate to the District Court and its mere removal in one Court out of many does not per se cancel the original order. A KALKA PRASAD v. EMPEROR, 16 A. L. J. 76; 19 CR. L. J. 269; 40 A. 153 125

Legal Practitioner and Court, differences between—Professional etiquette, breach of—Matter calling for disciplinary powers—Court, duty of.

Where a Court has reason to think that there has been any breach of professional etiquette or any matter calling for the exercise of disciplinary powers in the conduct of a Pleader or Advocate in a case, the proper course is to decide the merits and reserve any such question for further consideration after the disposal of the suit. A BISHESHAR NATH v. EMPEROR, 16 A. L. J. 64; 40 A. 147 28

Legitimacy, proof of 57

Letters Patent (Bom.), cl. 15—Judgment—Order of single Judge refusing to excuse delay in presentation of appeal, whether judgment.

An order of a single Judge refusing to excuse the delay in presenting an appeal has the effect of dismissing or rejecting the appeal, and being thus an order of a final character, is a judgment within the meaning of clause 15 of the Letters Patent and an appeal lies against it under that clause. B RAMCHANDRA GANGADHAR v. MAHADEV MORESHVAR, 20 BOM. L. R. 172; 42 B. 260 913

Letters Patent (Cal.), cl. 15 999

——— Cl. 15—'Judgment,' meaning of—Decision of single Judge setting aside order of District Judge and remanding case, whether judgment.

A decision of a single Judge of the High Court, by which an order of a District Judge reversing in appeal an order of a Munsif cancelling a sale is set aside and the case is remanded to the District Judge for re-hearing, is a 'judgment' within the meaning of Article 15 of the Letters Patent. C KUMAR CHANDRA KISHORE ROY v. BASAT ALI, 27 C. L. J. 418; 22 C. W. N. 627 763 Limitation—Declaration, suit for—Right to take fallen wood, nature of—Invasion of right—Cause of action.

The right to take wood falling from certain trees is one which can only be exercised on occasion, that is, when any wood may fall or be cut from the trees. It does not occur every year or at stated times. Each invasion of the right gives rise to a fresh cause of action, and a suit for a declaration can be brought within six years of each invasion. A DEBI PRASAD v. BADRI PARSHAD, 16 A. L. J. 345 980 ———Suit for declaration of title and confirmation of possession, whether can be treated as suit for recovery of possession for purpose of limitation.

Where a plaintiff in a suit for declaration of title and confirmation of possession alleges facts which show that he was out of possession, his suit, even though framed for confirmation of possession, may be treated as one for recovery of possession if his title to recover possession has not been barred by limitation; but where the plaintiff in such a suit makes a case that he is in possession, but fails to prove his possession, the Court will not give him recovery of possession, even though he proves his title and the suit has been instituted within the limitation period prescribed for suits for recovery of possession. C MAHAMAD JALIS v. SECRETARY OF STATE 996

Limitation—concld.

Limitation Act (XIV of 1859) 630
Limitation Act (IX of 1871) 630
Limitation Act (IX of 1908) 630

——— ss. 3, 6—Minor, assignee of, whether can take advantage of s. 6—Limitation, plea of, not taken in lower Court—Appellate Court, duty of—Appeal on particular point—Suit, whether can be dismissed in toto—Court-fee payable.

An assignee of a minor cannot avail himself of the benefit conferred upon the minor by section 6 of the Limitation Act.

The abandonment of a point of limitation in a lower Court does not relieve an Appellate Court of the duty of taking notice of the Statute. But the plea of limitation in order to be effective must be properly before the Court.

Where the plea of limitation involves the dismissal of a suit in toto, the defendant must appeal on the whole case and not merely on a particular point, and must pay Court-fee on the whole claim. If he fails to pay full Court-fee within the time limited by the law, the appeal must be dismissed. P HUKAM SINGH v. SHAHAB DIN, 14 P. W. R. 1918 890

——— ss. 4, 5, 12, 29—Applicability of ss. 4, 5, 12 to proceedings under Act. III of 1907—'Alter' and 'affect' in s. 29, meaning of.

Per Ayling, J.—The application of the general provisions of the Limitation Act extending in certain circumstances the period fixed by a special law must be deemed to 'affect' that period within the meaning of section 29 of the Limitation Act.

Per Seshagiri Aiyar, J.—Wherever an attempt is made to construe a special period fixed by an enactment with reference to the general provisions of the Limitation Act contained in sections 5 to 18, the effect of such a process would be to affect the period of limitation fixed by the local Act.

Even where an Act is not complete in itself, if by importing the general provisions of the Limitation Act the period fixed in a special Act is likely to be enlarged either by the process of computation in obtaining copies or by excluding the period during which a fraud was practised or during which another litigation was proceeding in a different Court, still the period of limitation would be affected. M KOPPARTHI LINGAYYA v. ARAVETI CHINNARAYANA, 33 M. L. J. 566; 41 M. 169; 7 L. W. 443 805

——— s. 5 9

Limitation Act, 1908—contd.

——— ss. 5, 15, applicability of—Execution, application for—Decree offered as security for costs—Exclusion of period during which decree served as security, whether allowable—Limitation, whether can be excluded by agreement—Estoppel.

It is the duty of the Court to look into the question of limitation itself and it is not relieved from the duty of doing so by the fact that the parties or one of them has agreed not to plead limitation.

If to an action the Statute of Limitation is pleaded and proof is given that the action clearly commenced after the period of limitation had expired, the defendant, notwithstanding the existence of any agreement, is entitled to a verdict.

Section 5 of the Limitation Act is not applicable to an application for execution of a decree.

A plaintiff wishing to appeal to the Privy Council against a decree of the High Court offered as security for costs a decree for rent which he had obtained against the defendant. The security was accepted by the High Court and the plaintiff was thereby enabled to appeal to the Privy Council. His appeal failed and costs were awarded against him. He then applied for execution of his rent-decree:

Held, (1) that the acceptance of the security by the High Court did not involve an order staying execution of the rent-decree, and that section 15 of the Limitation Act had no application to the case;

(2) that, therefore, the time during which the appeal was pending before the Privy Council could not be excluded from the period of limitation provided for the execution of the decree. Pat MIDNAPUR ZAMINDARY CO. v. DEPUTY COMMISSIONER OF MANBHUM, 3 P. L. J. 132. 570

——— s. 6 890

——— s. 7—Manager of Hindu family, whether can give valid discharge of decree-debt—Execution—Attachment—Dismissal of execution petition, whether removes attachment.

A major manager of a joint Hindu family is competent to give a valid discharge of a decree-debt within the meaning of section 7 of the Limitation Act so as to make the time run against the minor members of the family. M CHIVIKULA VENKATASUBBIAH v GOLLAPUDI VENKATESWARULU, (1917) M. W. N. 816 566

——— s. 7—Manager of joint family, whether can give discharge—Minority, effect of.

An elder brother, who is in the position of a manager of a joint Hindu family, can give a valid discharge within the meaning of section 7 of the Limitation Act without the concurrence of his minor brothers who are joint with him in interest. B HUCHRAO TIMMAJI v. BHIMRAO GURURAO DESHPANDE, 20 BOM. L. R. 161 851

——— s. 12 805

——— ss. 13, 20, scope of—Entries in debtor's books, whether payments.

Entries in the account books of a debtor cannot be treated as payments of interest within the meaning of section 20 of the Limitation Act. M PALANIAPPA CHETTIAR v. VEERAPPA CHETTIAR, 34 M. L. J. 41; 41 M. 445 466

——— s. 15 570

Limitation Act, 1908—contd.

——— s. 15, applicability of, to s 48 of Civil Procedure Code—"Prescribed", scope of—Order granting time to judgment-debtor, whether order staying execution.

An order granting time to the judgment-debtor is not an order staying execution of the decree within the meaning of section 15 of the Limitation Act.

The word "prescribed" in section 15 of the Limitation Act refers to periods prescribed by that Act, and has no application to the provisions of section 48 of the Civil Procedure Code A JURAWAN v. MAHABIR DUBE, 16 A. L. J 71; 40 A. 198 24

——— s. 20—Acknowledgment by judgment-debtor whether saves limitation against auction-purchaser.

An auction-purchaser of a property in execution of a money-decree is entitled to have the property purchased by him in the condition in which it was at the time of attachment. Therefore, an acknowledgment of a lien on the property made by the judgment-debtor after its attachment cannot prevail against the auction-purchaser, although such acknowledgment if made before attachment may save limitation as against the auction-purchaser. C RAJESWARI DASI v. BENODA SUNDARI DASI, 22 C. W. N. 278 533

——— s. 20—Mortgage without possession—Sub-mortgagee, rights of—Payment made by mortgagor to sub-mortgagee, whether saves limitation against sub-mortgagor.

A sub-mortgage comprises amongst other things the personal covenant of the sub-mortgagor and under that covenant his position in relation to the sub-mortgagee is closely analogous to that of a surety and he is thus entitled to recover the debt from the original debtor, though he is bound to pay it over to the sub-mortgagee in discharge of the sub-mortgage.

There is no essential distinction between his position and that of an acknowledged surety.

If the mortgagor, therefore, makes a payment to the sub mortgagee, it operates to save limitation also as against the sub-mortgagor. P RAM CHAND v. MEWA RAM, 3 P. R. 1918 213

——— s. 20—Part-payment of principal, endorsement of, not signed by payer, whether saves limitation.

An endorsement of a part-payment of the principal written on the back of a bond on behalf of the person making the payment, but not signed by the payer or bearing his mark, does not operate to save limitation under section 20 of the Limitation Act. C BALIRAM v SABHA SHEIKH 516

——— s. 20, scope of 466

——— s. 23 31

——— s. 29 805

——— Sch. I, Art. 11 528

——— ——— Art. 11—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, rr. 58, 63—Claim rejected for default—Limitation for title suit.

Article 11 of Schedule I of the Limitation Act applies in a case where a person sues to establish his right to property in respect of which a claim preferred by him under Order XXI, rule 58, Civil Procedure Code, has been dismissed for default and without investigation.

Limitation Act, 1908—contd.

The language of Article 11 of Schedule I of the Limitation Act of 1908 is more comprehensive than the language of the preceding Acts and the applicability of the Article cannot be restricted to those cases only in which the claim preferred under Order XXI, rule 58, Civil Procedure Code, has been disallowed after an investigation. C NOGENDRA LAL CHOWDHURY v FANI BHUSAN DAS 265

——— Sch. I, Arts. 11, 29, 120—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 63—Claim proceedings—Order releasing attachment—Suit by decree-holder to declare alienation fraudulent—Limitation, commencement of—Cause of action.

A suit by the holder of a decree to declare an alienation as fraudulent, based on an order passed under Order XXI, rule 63, Civil Procedure Code, is governed by Article 11 of the Limitation Act and should be filed within one year from the date of the order.

Order XXI, rule 63, Civil Procedure Code, gives a right of suit whether the order in the claim petition is correct or not.

Obiter.—Even if Article 120 be held to apply, the cause of action for a suit based on fraud does not arise on the date of the alienation, but on the date when the creditor seeking to set aside the alienation knows that he has been defrauded, defeated or delayed. M VENKATESWARA AIYAR v. SOMASUNDARAM CHETTIAR, 7 L. W. 280; (1918) M. W. N. 244 551

——— ——— Art. 11, scope of 1005

——— ——— Art. 29 551

——— ——— ——— Arts. 44, 126.

The fact that a Hindu father executes a sale-deed as guardian of his son will not take the case out of Article 126 of the Limitation Act and bring it under Article 44, which applies to cases where property belonging to a minor is transferred by his guardian. M GANESH AIYAR v. AMIRTHASAMI ODAYAR, 23 M. L. T. 245 605

——— ——— Arts. 57, 61, 62, 115, 120—Hindu Law—Joint family—Partnership of some members, claim by, against family for moneys advanced—Limitation—Cause of action, when arises—Barred debt, whether can be recovered—Set-off, claim by way of, whether allowable.

A suit by some of the members of a joint Hindu family who constitute a partnership against the family for advances made to it out of the partnership funds is governed by Article 120 of the Limitation Act.

The claim cannot be enforced in an action for partition after it has become barred either by way of equitable set-off or as an item in the account of dealings between the family and the partnership or by treating the liability of the family as assets or property to be brought into hotchpot at the time of division.

A suit lies by one firm against another firm notwithstanding that the firms have common partners. The proper prayer in such a suit ought to be for the taking of the accounts of both partnerships, if necessary for adjusting the rights of the partners, and for the grant of just and equitable reliefs which arise on the facts.

Limitation Act, 1908—contd.

Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J.—A Hindu joint family cannot be treated as of the nature of a partnership firm and a claim of some of the members who are members of a separate partnership firm against the joint family cannot be treated as the claim of one partnership against another partnership firm. The partnership, by lending to the joint family possesses an immediate cause of action against the latter and it can sue the other members of the family alone as defendants praying for proper equitable reliefs.

Per Phillips, J.—Relief by way of set-off is, strictly speaking, confined to a defendant and a plaintiff who invokes the aid of the Court against a defendant is not entitled to any equity as against him.

Where the members of the partnership who sue are themselves the managing members of the family, Article 107 of the Limitation Act would apply. M VELLAYAPPA MOOTHAN v. KRISHNA MOOTHAN, 34 M L. J. 32 428

——— Sch. I, Arts. 61, 62 428

——— ——— Arts. 62, 97, applicability of—Suit by vendee to recover purchase-money on deprivation of possession—Limitation, commencement of.

Limitation for a suit by a vendee, who has been deprived by his vendor of the land purchased by him, to recover the purchase money paid by him begins to run from the date of the failure of consideration, that is, the date on which the vendee is dispossessed from the land, and the suit is governed by Article 97 and not by Article 62 of the Limitation Act. C PARSURAM MAHAJAN v. BHAL CHANDRA SHAHA, 719

——— ——— Art. 97 719

——— ——— Art. 115 428

——— ——— Arts. 116, 120, 132—Mortgage for loan of paddy, suit on—Limitation.

A suit on a mortgage-bond executed for a loan not of money but of paddy is governed by Article 116 or Article 120 and not by Article 132 of the Limitation Act. C KANDARPA NARAN MANDAL v. SRIDHAR ROY 518

——— ——— Art. 120 428, 518, 551

——— ——— Art. 120—Suit for declaration of proprietary title—Adverse entry in revenue records, effect of—Cause of action—Limitation, commencement of.

A declaratory suit brought by a plaintiff who has all along been in enjoyment of the property is not barred simply because an entry adverse to his rights was made or because he came to know of that entry more than six years prior to the institution of the suit.

Even if the right to demand correction of the revenue entries is lost by limitation, the plaintiff is entitled to a declaration of his proprietary title, the period of limitation running from the date when the defendant attempted to oust the plaintiff from the property.

Where, therefore, in a suit for a declaration to the effect that plaintiff was owner of 1/12th share in certain lands and not of a 1/18th share only as recorded in the revenue papers, it appeared that the income derived from the land was spent on the upkeep of certain joint family property in which the plaintiff had a 1/12th share which share had been awarded to him:

Held, that the cause of action arose when the plaintiff asked the Revenue Officer to make an entry in his favour and the defendants denied his title. P GOKAL CHAND v. HUKAM CHAND, 73 P. W. R. 1918 912

——— Sch. I, Art. 126 605

——— ——— Art. 131 699

——— ——— Art. 132 518

——— ——— Art. 134—Transfer, whether includes permanent lease—Suit to recover debutter property transferred by shebait—Limitation, commencement of—Shebait, position of.

The word 'transfer' in Article 134 of Schedule I of the Limitation Act includes a transfer by way of a permanent lease.

A suit by a shebait to recover debutter property held by the defendant under a permanent lease granted by the plaintiff's predecessor is governed by Article 134 of Schedule I of the Limitation Act and must be brought within twelve years of the date of the transfer.

The representation of an idol by the shebaits is a continuing representation and limitation runs against the shebaits continuously and not as against each shebait individually as and when he succeeds to the office, the shebaits not being holders of successive life-estates in the management or in the property of the endowment. C MONMOTHO NATH LAHA v. ANNODA PROSAD ROY, 27 C. L. J. 201 567

——— ——— Art. 141 368

——— ——— Art. 142—Dispossession and discontinuance of possession of mine—Surrender—Relinquishment.

The mere fact that a mine has not been worked does not amount to a dispossession or discontinuance of possession within the meaning of Article 142, Schedule I, of the Limitation Act.

In this country a surrender or relinquishment does not require to be in writing but can be inferred from the acts of the parties.

Where a lessee, having been defeated in a suit by a rival lessee for restraining him from exercising his leasehold rights, ceased to pay rent to his landlords and some of the co-sharer landlords then granted a fresh lease to another person:

Held, that the lessee abandoned the lease and that the abandonment was accepted and acted upon by the co-sharer landlords. C BENGAL COAL COMPANY, LTD. v MONORANJAN BAGCHI, 22 C. W. N. 441 297

——— ——— Art. 144 368

——— ——— Art. 181 560

——— ——— Art. 182 301

——— ——— Art. 182 (2) 141

——— ——— Art. 182—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, rr. 11, 17 (2)—Execution application rejected for not specifying particulars, whether step-in-aid of execution—Res judicata in execution proceedings—Objection taken against one application, whether can be taken against subsequent application.

An application for execution rejected under Order XXI, rule 17 (2), of the Civil Procedure Code on the ground that it did not specify correctly all the particulars required to be specified therein by rule 11 of that Order, is not an application in accordance with law or a step-in-aid of execution taken in accordance with law within the meaning of Article 182, Schedule I of the Limitation Act.

Limitation Act, 1908—contd.

A decree-holder applied for execution on the 25th March 1916. His previous application made on 12th May 1914 was withdrawn, the order then made by the Court being "the execution case is dismissed for non-prosecution and the objection case of the judgment-debtor is also dismissed for the present." In that objection case the judgment-debtor had pleaded that the application of the 12th May 1914 was out of time, having been made more than three years after the application for execution which preceded it:

Held, that regard being had to the way in which the execution case of 12th May 1914 terminated, it could not be said that the objection of the judgment-debtor on the ground of limitation was adjudicated upon, so that no question of res judicata, constructive or otherwise, could arise and it was open to the judgment-debtor to take the same objection in the present case. C ISHAN CHANDRA SAMUI v. DULAL CHANDRA DE 220

——— Sch. I, Art. 182—"Where there has been an appeal," meaning of—"Review of judgment," whether includes application for re-hearing of suit dismissed for default.

The words "where there has been an appeal" in clause 2 of the last column of Article 182 of the First Schedule to the Limitation Act mean where there has been an appeal against a decree in the suit and cannot be held to include an appeal against an order made on an application to set aside that decree.

Clause 3 in the third column of Article 182 of the Limitation Act does not apply where an application for a re-hearing or review has been dismissed. The intention of the Legislature was to allow further time to a holder of a decree or order for costs where there has been an application for review which has been heard and a fresh decision has been pronounced, not to allow further time where an application for re-hearing or review has been put forward on untenable grounds and has consequently been rejected or dismissed.

Quære.—Whether the words "review of judgment" in clause 3 of Article 182 of Schedule I of the Limitation Act cover an application for re-hearing of a suit dismissed for default. Pat RAI BRIJRAJ v. NAURATAN LAL, 3 P. L. J. 119 575

——— ——— Art. 182, cl. (5)—Step-in-aid of execution—Filing list of witnesses, whether step-in-aid of execution.

A decree-holder applied for the execution of his decree and the judgment-debtor put in an objection to execution. The Court directed both parties to adduce evidence in support of their respective cases on a certain date. On that date the decree-holder filed a list of his witnesses who were present in Court, and intimated to the Court that he was ready to proceed with his case:

Held, that the conduct of the decree-holder implied an application to the Court to take the evidence which he was prepared to adduce to reple the objection of the judgment-debtor and should be taken to be an application to the Court to take some step-in-aid of execution. C BROJENDRA KISHORE ROY v. DIL MUHMUD SARKAR 604

Limitation Act, 1908 - concld.

Lis pendens, doctrine of 471

Lost grant, doctrine of, applicability of 419

Madras Civil Courts Act (III Mad. of 1873), ss. 13, 27 120

Madras Court of Wards Act (I of 1902), s. 41, scope of—Unnotified claims—Failure to give notice, effect of—Cessation of interest, finality of—Notified claims, priority of payment of, effect of, on unnotified secured claims—Executing Court, functions of, whether affected by section.

The penalty provided in the first part of section 41 of the Madras Court of Wards Act as to cessation of interest on unnotified claims is final, the claimant being left to prosecute his legal remedies for the amount already accrued due to him.

A restrictive construction should not be put on the highly general provisions of section 41 of the Madras Court of Wards Act.

The latter part of the section postponing unnotified claims to those notified or admitted under section 38 cannot be construed as depriving secured creditors who have notified their security or as authorising the application of money raised on their securities otherwise than in satisfaction of their claims. It only prohibits payments to them by the Court of Wards out of the unencumbered funds at its disposal, and does not prohibit the realisation of the security and satisfaction out of the proceeds of the secured creditor's claims.

The prohibition of payment in the section is confined to the Court of Wards and does not extend to the authorities executing decrees even during the continuance of its superintendence. Creditors, whether they have notified or not, are not prevented from obtaining decrees and executing them.

The provisions of the section do not affect the duties of executing Courts or the functions of the decree-collector under sections 321 to 325 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882 M SRINIVASA RANGA RAO v. RAJA OF KARVETNAGAR, 7 L. W. 206; 23 M. L. T. 127; 34 M. L. J 454, 41 M. 503 15

Madras District Municipalities Act (IV Mad. of 1884), ss. 172, 173.

Plaintiff sued the Municipal Council of Vizagapatam for injuries sustained by him by falling on a heap of gravel thrown on to the side of a road and allowed to project 9 feet into the roadway in the course of some repairs which were entrusted to a contractor:

Held, that the Municipal Council was liable in damages for negligence.

Per Seshagiri Aiyar, J.—Municipal Councils in Madras are statutory bodies with very circumscribed powers and are not self-governing in the sense that Municipal Corporations in England are. Though they are not a department of Government, their powers are derived from the Government and they are controlled by the provisions of the District Municipalities Act, Madras District Municipalities Act—concld.

The public have a right to use the full breadth of a public road and any obstruction to such use amounts to misfeasance.

Per Napier, J.—Section 173 of the Madras District Municipalities Act does not apply to the case of a contractor executing repairs to a road under the orders of a Municipal Council. The section has reference to temporary obstructions to a thoroughfare by the erecting of pandals or arches by a private person and has nothing to do with the execution of repairs by the employees of the Municipality. M MUNICIPAL COUNCIL OF VIZAGAPATAM v. WILLIAM FOSTER; 41 M. 538 308

Madras Estates Land Act (I Mad. of 1908), ss. 3 (4), 13 (3)—Landlord and tenant—Tenancy, incidents of—Improvements, what are—Mathiri kasavu and sadalwar cesses, legality of—Irrigation with well water—Garden rates, levy of, legality of—Contract and usage, suit based on—Presumption.

Mathiri kasavu (straw rent) and sadalwar are charges incidental to a ryot's holding and are payable with the rent.

A landlord is entitled to charge garden rates for crops grown with the aid of water from wells sunk by a ryot if they are based on any contract, express or implied, with the ryot or any local usage.

Section 13 (3) of Madras Act I of 1908 does not preserve the distinction between local usage and contracts for rents, express or implied, contained in section 11 of Act VIII of 1865.

Where, therefore, a claim for enhanced rent is not based expressly in the plaint on a contract with the ryot, express or implied, but on custom, it is competent for the Court to go into the question whether the usage is the result of a valid contract.

Where enhanced rent has been paid by tenants for a long period of time, not only can the existence of an agreement to pay rent at such rate be presumed but the consideration for the same can also be presumed. Both presumptions are presumptions of fact.

Section 13 (3) of the Madras Estates Land Act would not affect the liability of ryots to pay enhanced rents, if the improvements were made before the Act and if there had been a contract between the landlord and the tenant entered into before the passing of the Act to pay rent at such rates.

Where wells are sunk by a ryot in estate porambake, the mere abstention of the landholder from charging rent on the sites occupied by the wells might amount in law to a consideration for a contract to pay enhanced rates.

An improvement made by a ryot which prejudicially affects another land of the landholder, if made without his consent in writing, would not be an improvement of which the ryot could claim the advantage provided by section 13 (3) of the Act. M PRAYAGA DOSS JEE VARU v VENKAMA NAIDU, 23 M. L. T. 137; 7 L. W. 477; (1918) M. W. N. 343 641

—— —— s. 4—Landlord and tenant—Varam tenure—Lands left waste, liability for rent for—Custom, reasonable—Burden of proof—Agricultural holding, use of, as house site—Rent, liability for, at punjah rate.

Madras Estates Land Act—concld.

Section 4 of the Madras Estates Land Act does not override any custom or agreement not to charge rent upon portions left waste in a tenant's holding.

Where lands are let on waram tenure, it is open to the tenant to claim exemption from rent for portions that were left fallow through no default of his.

A ryot cannot claim exemption from rent by reason of his having put an agricultural holding to some other use. The landlord is entitled to claim rent at punjah rate for use of agricultural land as a house site.

Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J.—A custom to let lands lie waste without regard to reasonable area and without regard to good or bad seasons and existence or absence of facilities for irrigation for indefinite periods at the tenant's will and pleasure, with absolute freedom from liability to payment of any rent, is not a reasonable custom which can be recognised by the Courts.

The onus is on the ryot to prove that the lands were left waste through no default of his. M RAMASAMI SERVAIGARAN v. ATHIVARAHA CHARIAR, 23 M. L. T. 183; 7 L. W. 471; (1918) M. W. N. 340 663

——— s. 13 (3) 641

——— s. 185, scope of—Private land of zemindar —Evidence other than that specified in section, admissibility of—Presumption

Section 185 of the Madras Estates Land Act permits the landlord to produce any evidence other than that specified in the section to prove that the land in dispute is his private land, and not ryoti land.

The section raises a presumption in favour of the ryot, but the question to be considered is whether the evidence adduced by the landlord is sufficient to rebut that presumption. M APPU ROW v. KAVERI, 23 M. L. T. 154; 7 L. W. 271; (1918) M. W. N. 171 519

Madras High Court Appellate Side Rules, r. 2 699

Madras High Court Fees Rules, r. 40—Fees, award of, on higher scale—'Special grounds', meaning of—Fraudulent or reprehensible conduct of party, whether 'special ground.'

The 'special grounds' which would justify an award of fees to a party on the higher scale under rule 40 of the High Court Fees Rules are limited to cases where the special grounds are such as to affect the costs of the litigation. The reprehensible or fraudulent conduct of a party is not such a 'special ground' as would justify such an award. M GANTASALA KUPPIAH CHETTY v. GUNAVATHIAMMA, 22 M. L. T. 541 995

Madras Town Nuisances Act (Mad. Act III of 1889), s. 3.

Money or coins can be said to be used for the purpose of gaming under section 3 of the Madras Town Nuisances Act III of 1889 only if they are actually staked. To justify their confiscation the money or coins should have been actually used or displayed in the act of gambling.

Where some sovereigns were found tied up in the waist cloth of one accused and some others concealed in the mouth of another accused who were convicted under the Madras Town Nuisances Act and the Magistrate ordered confiscation of the sovereigns:

Madras Town Nuisances Act—concld.

Held, that the order so far as it related to the sovereigns found in the mouth of one of the accused was legal, as it could be reasonably inferred that they were intentionally secreted to avoid exposure but that the confiscation of the coins tied in the waist cloth was illegal. M APPAJI IYER v. EMPEROR, 34 M. L. J. 253; 7 L. W. 528; 19 CR. L. J. 301; 41 M. 644 205

Majority Act (IX of 1875), s. 2—'Capacity to act,' meaning of minor, renunciation of dower by, validity of.

The relinquishment of dower by a Muhammadan minor does not bind her when she attains age according to the Indian Majority Act.

The injunction of Muhammadan Law which prohibits acts being done by a minor to his prejudice must be taken to operate till the age at which the minor attains majority under the ordinary law of the land.

The Majority Act should not be construed so as to deprive a person of rights which he would otherwise be entitled to

A Muhammadan female cannot be said 'to act' in the matter of dower within the meaning of section 2 of the Majority Act when she gives up her rights to it.

When the Legislature by section 2 of the Majority Act permitted a person to act in the matter of dower, it only intended to allow that person who was not otherwise competent under the ordinary law to act in that matter to initiate the religious acts or ceremony which under the personal law he or she was capable of initiating. The legal consequences flowing from this primary act were not intended to be controlled by the section. M ABI DHUNIMSA BIBI AMMAL v. MUHAMMAD FATHI UDINI SAHIB, 23 M. L. T. 78; (1918) M. W. N. 246 293

Malabar Compensation for Tenants' Improvements Act (I Mad. of 1900), ss. 4, 9 to 12—Conversion of forest into paddy fields—Tanks and channels dug by tenant, claim for value of—Method of valuation—Absence of specific provision in contract, effect of—Scope of s. 9—Trees of spontaneous growth on plot reserved for landlord, whether 'improvements.'

Per Curiam (Seshagiri Aiyar, J., dubitante).—A tenant is entitled, under Madras Act I of 1900, to compensation for reclaimed lands only at the rates specified in the contract between the parties. He cannot, ignoring the valuation under the contract, resort to section 9 for appraising compensation for tanks and channels dug by him in land, which, at the time of the demise, was a forest.

In all matters which are provided for by the contract, the parties are governed by it.

Per Seshagiri Aiyar, J.—Section 9 deals with cases where, at the time of demise, the land was of some value and an additional value was imparted to it by the labour of the tenant. The section is intended to apply to cases where the Court has to fix the entire valuation under the Act, ignoring the contract, if any, between the parties. There cannot be first a valuation under the contract and a further valuation invoking the aid of section 9.

A tenant is not entitled to claim as improvements the value of trees of spontaneous growth standing on land reserved for the use of the landlord.

Malabar Compensation for Tenants' Improvements Act—concld.

Per Napier, J.—After the tenant has been given compensation at the rate fixed in the contract, he cannot for the purpose of valuing the improvements made by the construction of tanks and channels import the increase in the value of the annual net produce as a factor in ascertaining the value. The compensation for the value of tanks and channels must be ascertained under section 11. M THATHAMANGALAM PARAKAT SAMU MENON v. VALIA NAMBIDI, (1918) M. W. N. 141; 7 L. W. 287 242

—— —— ss. 5, 6, scheme of—Landlord and tenant—Ejectment, decree for, with compensation to tenant—Decree barred—Fresh suit in ejectment, maintainability of.

A landlord who obtains a decree in ejectment against his tenant, which also directs payment of compensation to the latter under the Malabar Compensation for Tenants' Improvements Act, cannot on the decree becoming barred maintain another suit on the same cause of action.

Per Wallis, C. J.—When a man has a cause of action and brings a suit upon it, that cause of action is merged in the decree, transit in rem judicatum, and then his remedy is in execution and if he does not enforce his remedy and allows it to become barred, his rights are gone.

The payment of compensation which is assessed in a suit for ejectment by a decree under the Malabar Compensation for Tenants' Improvements Act, is a matter relating to execution and is intended to be dealt with as such. According to the scheme of the Act, the decree for ejectment on payment of compensation is left to be governed by the law of limitation with regard to the execution of decrees and it was not intended to interfere with the general principle that a man who sues on his cause of action and obtains a decree and allows his decree to become barred has no further remedy.

Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J.—When a plaintiff has obtained in one suit based on some legal title a decree for the reliefs which he was entitled to as against a defendant and has allowed that decree to become barred, he cannot be allowed to bring another suit for obtaining the very same relief against the very same defendant, though on a different basis, if the latter ground of claim is founded on a right or title which existed and could have been relied on as a basis of relief when the first suit was brought. M NYNAM VEETILL MAYAN KUTTI v. VALAPPILAKATH KUNHAMMAD, 7 L. W. 143 34 M. L. J. 167; 23 M. L. T. 156; (1918) M. W. N. 205; 41 M. 641 110

—— ss. 9 to 12 242

Malabar Law—Karnavan, position of—Mortgage by karnavan to pay barred debt—Consideration—Tarwad, liability of.

The status of a karnavan in a Malabar tarwad is more akin to that of a manager of a Hindu family than to that of a Hindu father. The peculiar obligations which a Hindu son incurs in respect of the debts of his father are not those with which a junior member of a tarwad is chargeable with reference to the karnavan's debts.

Malabar Law—concld.

A mortgage executed by a karnavan in payment of a barred decree-debt is not binding on the junior members of the tarwad. M MANKOOTTIL CHATHUKUTTI NAIR v. KOMAPPAN NAIR, (1918) M. W. N. 144 572

——— —Uralan and Samudayi, position and functions of—Principal and agent—Prescription, acquisition of title by, by Samudayi to Devaswom properties—Right of suit by Samudayi—Possession, proof of—Limitation Acts, 1859, 1871, 1908.

A Samudayi cannot accurately be described in all cases as the agent of the Uralan. There may be a temple in which the Uralan is the person in whom the property and the management vest and such a temple may have a Samudayi who will be the agent of the Uralan. In such a case, the Samudayi will not be entitled to sue or defend actions in his own name. There may be institutions in which an absentee Uralan performs only the functions of a supervisor or controller, leaving the management and legal ownership of the Dewaswom properties in the Samudayi. The Uralan in such a case will have very nearly the powers of a Temple Committee and the Samudayi those of a trustee. The right of suit will be in the Samudayi in these institutions. There may be a temple in regard to which the founder's family which exercised the Uraima right ceased to exist generations ago. In such a case the Samudayi will be the real Uralan.

In the case of hereditary Samudayis, the declarations and acts of a Samudayi will not bind his successor-in-office belonging to the same family.

Alike under the Limitation Act of 1908 as under the earlier Acts of 1859 and 1871 it was competent for the Samudayi to acquire a title by prescription to the Devaswom properties and to be recognised as a trustee.

A Samudayi, therefore, is entitled to sue for recovery of the Devaswom properties on proof of possession adverse to that of the Uralan and of repudiation of his agency. It is not necessary for him to show that he became a trustee. It is enough if he proves possession and the management of the temple affairs.

Per Napier, J.—A hereditary Samudayi, whose office entails the doing of many acts of management, is not a mere agent of the Uralan affected by the ordinary principles of agency. M RAMAN SOMAYAJIPAD v. KUNHU KUTTI KOVILAMMA, 23 M. L. T. 187; (1918) M. W. N. 179; 34 M. L. J. 344; 7 L. W. 490 630

Maxim :—

"Ei qui affirmat non ei qui negat incumbit probatio." 504

Merchant Shipping Act (57 and 58 Vict., C. 60), s. 686—"Natural born British subject", whether includes subject of Native State.

The expression "natural born British subject" in section 686 of the Merchant Shipping Act does not include a natural born subject of a Native Indian State. B PUNJA GUNI v. EMPEROR, 20 BOM. L. R. 98; 19 Cr. L. J. 337; 42 B. 234 449

Mesne profits, claim for, nature and extent of 605

Mining lease—Lessee of share working mine, whether can be restrained by lessees of other shares—Accounts of profit, claim for, by other lessees, whether maintainable—Acquiescence.

Where a lessee of a share in a mine works the mine, the lessees of other shares are not entitled to an account of profits unless it is shown that the defendant has worked more than his fair share or that there has been an actual ouster or destruction of common property by his working the mine, nor can the plaintiffs get a decree for ejectment of the defendant from the mine. The proper remedy of the other lessees is a suit for partition and when such a suit is brought, the Commissioner for partition should be directed to award, if possible, to the lessee who has been working the mine the portion of the property of which he is in possession and on which he has spent money.

The claim of a lessee of a share in a mine for accounts of profits from the lessee of other shares who has been working the mine would be barred by acquiescence, if the plaintiff knowing that the other lessee was spending large sums of money to develop the mine did not promptly come in with his claim for an account of the profits. C BENGAL COAL CO., LTD v. MONORANJAN BAGCHI, 22 C. W. N. 441 297

Mortgage 919

——— Acquisitions by mortgagee—Redemption—Mortgagor, whether can claim possession on redemption.

A mortgagee who has acquired what any stranger or even the mortgagor himself could have acquired equally well despite the mortgage, cannot be compelled to hand over his rights to the mortgagor.

It is, therefore, competent to a mortgagee during the continuance of the mortgage to purchase an absolute occupancy tenure for himself and to treat it as his separate property after the mortgage comes to an end.

Plaintiff's father had mortgaged certain properties to the defendants and the latter during the subsistence of the mortgages bought out a number of occupancy tenants. The plaintiffs redeemed the mortgages by private arrangement but the defendants refused to give possession of the land which had been subject to the occupancy tenures, alleging that they had not acquired these tenancies as mortgages and that they were, therefore, entitled to retain them for their own benefit. Plaintiffs thereupon claimed possession of these tenancies on payment of the sum for which they had been acquired:

Held, that the mortgagees were entitled to retain the benefit of their acquisitions for themselves and that the plaintiffs' suit must fail. P GIRDHARI RAM v MUHAMMAD KARM DAD KHAN, 53 P. W. R. 1918; 26 P. L. R. 1918 266

——— and charge, distinction between 734

——— Co mortgagees, whether joint promisees—Payment to one co-mortgagee, whether discharges debt.

Co-mortgagees are joint promisees and the payment of the mortgage debt to one of them discharges the whole debt.

In view of the difference in the conditions of social life in India and in England, it is doubtful whether and to what extent the presumption that when a claim is on a money bond to two or more obligees, they are tenants-in-common and not joint tenants of the debt with the consequence that the discharge by one obligee cannot be set up as a defence against the other obligee suing for his share of the debt, which in England prevails only in cases in which equitable relief is claimed, should have effect given to it in India. U B MAUNG NYAN MO v. MA PO, 3 U. B. R. (1917) 42 627

Mortgage—contd.

——— decree, execution of—Property assessed to revenue—Decree describing property as muafi—Objection by purchaser in execution of money decree—Identity of property—Objector not deceived.

A mortgage-deed described the mortgaged property as muafi whereas it was assessed to a small sum of revenue. The mortgagee sued upon the basis of the mortgage and obtained a decree in which the property was again described as muafi. In execution it was objected by a previous purchaser of the property in execution of a money-decree that the property was not revenue-free and was, therefore, not the property mortgaged. At the time of the objector's purchase the burden of the mortgagee's loan had been duly notified:

Held, that as the objector was not in any way deceived when he purchased the property, the burden of the mortgage having been clearly notified at the time of his purchase, it was utterly unjust to allow a slight misdescription to prevent a Court from doing what was right. A BASANTI v. KUNJ BIHARI LAL, 16 A. L. J. 262 998

——— Ejectment, suit for—Redemption, whether can be allowed.

A Court can in its discretion pass a decree for redemption in a suit in which the plaintiff sues for ejectment. N KRISHNAJI HATKAR v. RAOJI 921

——— Endorsement of satisfaction without consideration, effect of—Assignee of mortgagee rights—Bona fide purchaser for value—Adverse possession against remainderman.

The principle of English Law that a deed imports consideration has no application to India, and an endorsement on a mortgage-deed that the mortgage has been satisfied made without consideration amounts only to a gratuitous promise not binding on the releasor.

An assignee of an equity of redemption who laims also to be an assignee of the mortgagee's rights but who has taken no re-transfer of the property from the mortgagee or his representatives, and whose assignor has taken no re-transfer of those rights, cannot set up the plea of bona fide purchaser for value without notice.

Where property is held by a Hindu widow under a life-interest adverse possession begins to run against the reversioner on the termination of the widow's interest. B BAI JAYAGAVRI v. PURSHOTAM DAS, 20 BOM. L. R. 177 926

——— , equitable—Hypothecation of immoveable property, whether passes fixtures.

Where immoveable property is hypothecated the fixtures pass to the mortgagee. The rule in this respect as between landlord and tenant does not apply as between mortgagor and mortgagee. C HARIPDA SADHUKHAN v. ANATH NATH DEY, 22 C. W. N. 758 211

Mortgage—contd.

——— Lease by mortgagee—Redemption of mortgage by owner or purchaser of equity of redemption—Determination of lease.

Obiter.—A lease created by a mortgagee determines ipso facto on redemption of the mortgage by the mortgagor or the purchaser of the equity of redemption. The position is, however, different where the mortgage is only assigned. M GOVINDASAMI PILLAI v. PETHAPERUMAL CHETTY 839

——— Lekha mukhi mortgage—Redemption, suit for—Failure of mortgagee to keep full and regular accounts, effect of—Presmption.

In a suit for redemption of a lekha mukhi mortgage, the question of the liability of the mortgagor and the mortgagees inter se was referred to a Local Commissioner, who found that the mortgagees did not keep full and regular accounts of the income and expenditure of the land in suit and who, therefore, based his report on the statement of the mortgagees' daubir:

Held, (1) that it was the duty of the mortgagees to keep full and regular accounts of the income and expenditure of the mortgaged land;

(2) that in view of their failure to keep such accounts every presumption should be made against them;

(3) that the report of the local Commissioner based on the statement of the mortgagees' own daubir must be accepted as correct. P ALLAH YAR v. THAKAR DAS, 46 P. W. R 1918; 24 P. L. R. 1918 9

——— Mortgagee giving up rights under mortgage in consideration of Hundi—Hundi insufficiently stamped—Mortgagee, whether can sue on mortgage.

Plaintiff gave up his rights under a mortgage in consideration for cash payment and a Hundi executed in his favour by the mortgagor. He made an endorsement on the back of the mortgage-deed that he had received the full amount of the mortgage-debt from the mortgagor. The Hundi executed by the mortgagor in his favour was not properly stamped:

Held, that the plaintiff by acknowledging the receipt of the entire money due on the mortgage-deed had discharged the mortgagor from his liability on the deed, the Hundi being the only contract between the parties, and that for want of proper stamp the Hundi being inadmissible in evidence the creditor must lose his money and could not sue on the original mortgage-deed. P BHAGAT RAM GANPAT RAI v. CHHAJJU RAM, 15 P. W. R. 1918 886

——— of holding—Purchaser of holding, whether can redeem—Suit on mortgage—Purchaser not made party, effect of.

Plaintiff, mortgagee of a raiyati holding, brought a suit on foot of his mortgage. Defendant, who was the purchaser of the holding and had been recognised by the landlord, applied to be made a party to the suit. He did not claim to redeem the mortgage, but set up a title paramount to the mortgagee and also questioned the bona fides of the mortgage transaction. His application was rejected. The plaintiff obtained a decree and purchased the holding in execution thereof. He then brought a suit to eject the defendant;

Mortgage—contd.

Held, that the defendant had a right to redeem the mortgage. C REBATI MOHAN DAS v. NADIABASHI DE, 22 C. W. N. 543. 521

——— Prior and puisne encumbrancers—Decree for sale in first mortgagee's suit—Puisne mortgagee not impleaded—Purchaser at auction sale, rights of—Accounts of profits, enquiry as to, after date of sale—Revivor of mortgage, nature and extent of—Subrogation, principles relating to—Improvements, right to, by transferee from purchaser.

Defendants Nos. 1 to 3 mortgaged some houses to the Hindu Permanent Fund on 29th March 1899. On 26th September 1899 they mortgaged the same houses and certain lands to S. On 9th February 1901 they again mortgaged the houses to plaintiff's husband. S sued on his mortgage, obtained a decree for sale, purchased the lands and houses and soon afterwards obtained possession. His decree was satisfied except for a small sum of Rs. 95. S. then redeemed the mortgage to the Fund. In 1906 plaintiff's husband, who was not a party to S.'s suit, claimed to redeem S. but did not prosecute his suit. After his death plaintiff sued on her mortgage, offering to redeem S. or his assignees, but she claimed to do so only on what would be found due on the prior mortgage up to the date of delivery of possession to S. In the meantime S. had sold the properties to 6th defendant:

Held, (1) that S. and his assignees were entitled to the principal and interest due on foot of the two mortgages dated March and September 1899, but were bound to account for the rents and profits of the properties from the respective dates on which S. obtained possession through Court, the account being carried up to the date fixed for payment;

(2) that 6th defendant was not entitled to the value of the improvements effected by him after his purchase.

If the owner of an equity of redemption is a party to a suit to enforce a mortgage, but a puisne encumbrancer is not, the purchaser becomes the assignee of the mortgage sued on, as well as the transferee of the equity of redemption, subject to the mesne mortgage, and if the purchaser obtains possession on sale from the owner, he must account for the profits at least in cases where the price he pays is not more than sufficient to pay the mortgage sued on; for in such a case the purchaser pays nothing for the equity of redemption and the profits of the land are to be considered as the money of the mortgagor placed in the hands of the purchaser to discharge the mortgage pro tanto.

Principles affecting the doctrine of subrogation and revivor of discharged mortgages discussed. M MUTHAMMAL v. RAZU PILLAI, 23 M. L. T. 105; (1918) M. W. N. 251; 7 L. W. 420 753 ——— Priority—Property belonging to five brothers mortgaged by four of them—Mortgagees, rights of, on partition.

A property belonging to five brothers, one of whom was a minor and was represented by his duly appointed guardian, the eldest of the four adult brothers, was mortgaged to N., and then it was mortgaged by the four adult brothers to G. On the adjudication of the four adult brothers as insolvents the Receiver in insolvency got the joint properties partitioned and the mortgaged property was allotted to the four adult brothers, which was then sold by the Receiver at the instance of a prior mortgagee who was paid off out of the sale-proceeds:

Mortgage—concld.

Held, that N. was entitled to the whole of the balance of the sale-proceeds in priority to G. as he had not lost the priority to the extent of the 1/5th share which belonged to the minor brother by reason of the partition and sale of the property. C GOPI NATH MONDAL v. ASHUTOSH GHOSE, 1003

——— Redemption—Purchaser of share of equity of redemption, whether can redeem entire mortgage

A purchaser of a share of the equity of redemption other than the mortgagee is entitled to redeem the entire mortgage. C BAIKANTHA NATH DEY v. MOHESH CHANDRA DEY, 22 C. W. N. 128 77

——— Redemption, suit for—Burden of proof—Admission of party, effect of—Amendment of plaint.

In a suit for redemption of a mortgage, the plaintiff has to prove, ordinarily, that there is a subsisting mortgage capable of being redeemed. The rule, however, is subject to exceptions. Where the defendant admits the existence of the mortgage, the onus is shifted to him to prove that he subsequently acquired an irredeemable right.

A plaintiff in a redemption suit may be permitted to amend a plaint which is based on a specific mortgage and claim a decree on the defendant's admission. M MADHAVAN VYDIAR v. LAKSHMANA PATTAR, (1918) M. W. N. 139; 7 L. W. 284 447

——— to two persons—Shares in mortgage-money not specified, effect of—Co-mortgagees, position of—Presumption—Redemption, partial, effect of.

Where money is advanced by two co-mortgagees without any specification of shares, the presumption is that each of them advances half the money; and if one of them accepts satisfaction of his interest as mortgagee from the mortgagor, the result is that the only mortgagee interest outstanding is the interest of the other co-mortgagee which extends to one-half of the mortgage-money. O RAM DATT v. DEOTA DIN, 4 O. L. J. 735 621

——— without possession—Sub-mortgagee, rights of 213

Muhammadan Law—Dower, incidents of.

Dower, under Muhammadan Law, is in the nature of a debt, being a recompense for the matrimonial restraint. The wife has a lien over the property of her husband in her possession for unpaid dower and she ranks pari pasu with other creditors in the distribution of her husband's estate. M ABI DHUNIMSA BIBI AMMAL v. MUHAMMAD FATHI UDINI SAHIB, 23 M. L. T. 78; (1918) M. W. N. 246 293

——— Minor—Alienation by de facto guardian, validity of.

Where a de facto but not a de jure guardian of a Muhammadan minor alienates the minor's property the alienee cannot enforce the alienation against the minor; but the minor, if he comes into Court to challenge the alienation, must before re-entry restore to the alienee all the benefits that he personally has derived from the alienation—this on the equitable ground that he who seeks equity must do equity. P SARDARA v KAURA RAM, 7 P. W. R. 1918; 152 P. L. R. 1917; 36 P. R. 1918 219

Muhammadan Law—concld.

——— Sale—Pre-emption, right of, whether can be defeated—Construction of document.

Where a transaction in its nature is a sale, the vendor and vendee cannot defeat the right of pre-emption arising under the Muhammadan Law by dressing it up in the garb of a lease.

In determining the real nature of the transaction the Court is entitled to take into consideration the sum paid down, the amount of the rent reserved and the value of the property. A MOHAMMAD NIAZ KHAN v. MOHAMMAD ADREES KHAN, 16 A. L. J. 233; 40 A. 322 227

Municipalities, liability of, for misfeasance—Gravel thrown on public road, injury caused by—Negligence—Damages—Extent of liability—Negligence of contractor, effect of, on relations between Municipality and public.

Municipal Corporations in India are liable for acts of misfeasance.

It is the duty of Municipalities to lay and maintain roads so that the public may pass over them safely and they are liable for injuries resulting to the public through the negligent or improper performance of that duty.

The liability of statutory bodies for negligence is not based on whether a profit is derived by the levy of a cess or toll from the public. The question whether it gives them an income over expenditure is not a criterion for enforcing liability.

Municipalities in India do not act in the exercise of sovereign powers or as agents of the State in laying or maintaining roads.

In the case of statutory bodies entrusted with the performance of public duties, their liability cannot be shifted to a contractor employed by them for a particular purpose. They may bargain with the contractor that he shall perform the duty and stipulate for an indemnity from him if it is not performed. But they are not thereby themselves relieved from liability to those injured by the failure to perform it.

Quære.—Whether a public body can be liable for mere non-feasance?

Whether the making of roads by the Government is an act of sovereign power? M MUNICIPAL COUNCIL OF VIZAGAPATAM v. WILLIAM FOSTER, 41 M. 538 308

Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881), ss. 4, 27—Promissory note, execution of, by illiterate person—Mark of executant, absence of—Execution, proof of, by authority—Agency.

A promissory note purporting to have been executed by one C. contained the words 'Nishi mark of C.,' but there was no separate mark:

Held, (1) that a separate mark was unnecessary to prove execution of the document;

(2) that the payee was at liberty to prove execution by the authority of the executant. M CHELLA BALAYYA v. KANUPARTHI SUBBAYYA, 40 M. 1171 813

——— s. 27 813

Negotiable Instruments Act—concld.

——— s. 56—Promissory note, transfer of balance due upon, validity of.

The object of section 56 of the Negotiable Instruments Act is simply to prevent a promissory note from being transferred for a portion only of the sum at the time due upon it. It has no application to the transfer of the whole of the balance due upon a promissory note. P JAI CHAND v. SARDAR SINGH, 5 P. W. R. 1918; 150 P. L. R. 1917: 264

Occupancy tenancy, devolution of—One of several tenants, whether can take up entire holding.

On the death of an occupancy tenant the occupancy right devolves by operation of law on all the heirs as co-tenants and any one of them willing to do so can take up the whole tenancy in the event of the other heirs being unwilling to do so. N KALWA v. BHAWAR SINGH 1001

Opium Act (I of 1878), s. 9—Illegal possession of opium—Joint possession—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 25—Excise Officer, whether Police Officer—Confession to Excise Officer, admissibility of.

A person found in possession of a quantity of opium in excess of what he can lawfully possess for his own personal use is guilty of an offence under section 9 of the Opium Act, and the fact that he used to give opium to the other members of his family to eat does not make them joint possessors of the opium with him. P EMPEROR v. WAZIR SINGH, 3 P. R. 1918 CR.; 19 CR. L. J. 364 588

——— s. 9 (c), (f) 974

Orissa Tenancy Act (II B. & O. of 1913), ss. 57, 215, 220, 221—Incumbrance, under-raiyati interest, whether is—Ejectment of under-raiyat—Procedure.

An under-raiyat in occupation of land is an incumbrancer upon such land within the meaning of section 215 of the Orissa Tenancy Act.

A purchaser at an auction-sale has one, and only one, remedy open to him for annulling an incumbrance, namely, that prescribed by section 221 of the Orissa Tenancy Act, and in cases where this remedy is not followed and a year is allowed to elapse by the purchaser without taking steps to annul the incumbrance affecting the lands or interest he has purchased, he is not entitled to eject the under-raiyat under section 57 of the Act. If the purchaser does take the steps open to him to annul the incumbrance and the under-raiyat refuses to give up possession consequential thereon, he can be ejected under section 57, but if the purchaser does not avail himself of the only remedy which is open to him he is not entitled to eject the under-raiyat in any other way. Pat SHIBA DAS v. GAJENDRA NATH DAS, 3 P. L. J. 112 593

——— ss. 215, 220, 221 593

Oudh Civil Digest (1917), para. 272—Certificate of fee—Government Pleader appearing for liquidator, whether bound to file certificate.

Paragraph 272 of the Oudh Civil Digest is mandatory and a Government Pleader appearing in a case for a Tahsildar, who has been impleaded in his capacity as a liquidator appointed under section 42 (1) of the Co-operative Societies Act, is not exempted from filing his fee certificate as required by the paragraph. O BENI MADHO SINGH v. LIQUIDATOR, DEWARA BANK, 4 O. L. J. 583 353

Oudh Civil Digest (1917)—concld.

Oudh Estates Act (I of 1869), ss. 15, 22, 23—Estate entered in List II and held under primogeniture sanad—Bequest in favour of person not taluqdar or grantee and outside line of succession— Sanad, applicability of—Ordinary law, whether includes terms of sanad.

Section 15 of the Oudh Estates Act is a declaratory section, operating both prospectively and retrospectively.

Where a person whose estate was entered in List II died before the Oudh Estates Act came into force, bequeathing his estate to his son-in-law, who was neither a taluqdar nor a grantee, nor a person who would have succeeded to the estate, had the testator died intestate:

Held, per Lindsay, J. C., that the effect of section 15 of the Oudh Estates Act was to put the sanad out of consideration altogether, and that the succession to the estate on the death of such a legatee would be governed by the rules which would have governed the succession if the legatee had bought the estate from a person, not being a taluqdar or grantee, or in other words, by the ordinary law, irrespective of the rule of succession contained in the sanad.

Per Kanhaiya Lal, A. J. C., that the effect of the section was to relieve such a legatee from the disability imposed by the Oudh Estates Act on taluqdars and grantees in the matters of transfer and succession, and not from any rules which might be applicable independently of the Act, and that the succession to such legatee would be governed by the rule of succession laid down in the sanad as restricting or qualifying the personal law.

Per Curiam, that the rule of succession contained in the sanad was inapplicable to a person who got the estate otherwise than by inheritance. O BALRAJ KUAR v. MAHADEO PAL SINGH, 20 O. C. 360; 4 O. L. J. 559 59

——— s. 22 368

——— ss. 22, 23 59

Oudh Rent Act (XXII of 1886), ss. 53, 107B, Ch. VII A—Tenant holding at favourable rent—Ejectment—Procedure—Resumption.

Section 107B of the Oudh Rent Act supersedes, in the case of tenants holding at a favourable rate of rent, section 53 of the Act.

Where there is a special provision governing a special class of cases the latter should be dealt with under it, and not under the general provision governing general cases.

A tenant holding at a deliberately, and not accidentally, favourable rate of rent comes under section 107B of the Oudh Rent Act, and is subject to resumption proceedings under Chapter VII A of the Act and cannot be ejected by notice as an ordinary tenant U P B R RAM KUMAR v. PARTAB BAHADUR SINGH, 4 O. L. J. 737 644

——— s. 107B 644

——— s. 108 (10) 357

——— Ch. VII A 644

Pakka adatias, position of 284

Pardanashin lady, deed executed by 645

Partition—Decree for partition, effect of—Rights of co-sharers—Remand for fresh enquiry "so far as appellants are concerned"—Suit, whether can be dismissed in toto.

The property in suit belonged to three brothers one of whom N. alienated part of it and in 1903 another brother T. brought a suit against his co-sharers for his one-third share and joined the alienees also as defendants. This suit was decreed even against the alienees, two of whom preferred appeals which having been accepted, the case was remanded for fresh enquiry "so far as the appellants were concerned". After remand a final decree was passed by which the whole suit was dismissed. An application for execution of the first decree having been made, the widow of the third brother demanded her share of the property and sought relief against the alienees:

Held, (1) that the original decree stood as between the plaintiff and those defendants who did not appeal and could not be treated as having been set aside as a whole;

(2) that inasmuch as every co-sharer is entitled to obtain possession of the share allotted to him under a decree for partition, whether he be the plaintiff or the defendant, the widow of the third brother in this case being herself a defendant was entitled to take advantage of the decree passed in favour of the plaintiff and to claim a one-third share under it. P DEBI SAHAI v. TARA CHAND, 44 P. W. R. 1918; 22 P. L. R. 1918 135

Partition suit—Consent decree by High Court, directing valuation—Supplementary decree by trial Court set aside—Execution—Limitation, commencement of.

In a partition suit the High Court on appeal passed a consent decree directing that the plaintiff do pay to the defendant the price to be ascertained by the Court of first instance within one month from the date of the valuation being made, and upon such payment being made the defendant do convey her share to the plaintiff. The case then went back to the Court of first instance, which made the valuation and passed a supplementary decree in the terms of the High Court decree. On revision the High Court held that no supplementary decree should have been passed and that the only decree in the case was the consent decree passed by the High Court. The defendant then applied for execution of the decree offering to execute the conveyance and agreeing to recover from the plaintiff as much as she could out of the valuation fixed by the Court of first instance:

Held, (1) that the decree was capable of execution;

(2) that limitation under Article 182 (2), Schedule I, of the Limitation Act began to run from the date on which the High Court set aside the supplementary decree passed by the Court of first instance. C GURU PADA HALDR v. TARIAT BHUSAN ROY CHOWDHURY, 22 C. W. N. 158 141

——Preliminary decree—Appeal—Final decree as regards portion of joint property—Supplementary final decree—Jurisdiction.

In an appeal from a preliminary decree in a suit for partition, the High Court during the pendency of the appeal stayed proceedings upon the preliminary decree, in so far as it related to a joint business. In the meanwhile the trial Court on the report of the Commissioner made a final decree partitioning all other properties involved in the suit. Subsequently upon the dismissal of the appeal by the High Court an application purporting to be under section 151, Civil Procedure Code, made by the plaintiff to the trial Court for the partition of the joint business, was refused with the remark that the only course open to the plaintiff was an application for review under Order XLVII, Civil Procedure Code:

Held, that the trial Court had refused to exercise a jurisdiction which was vested in it, inasmuch as it was quite competent to deal with as much of the suit as had not already been dealt with in the final decree and to make a supplementary final decree in regard to the joint business. C JASHODA DASEE v. UPENDRA NATH 671

Partnership, suit against—Absence of one partner from British India, effect of—Deduction of time as against absentee defendant—Legal representatives of deceased partner, position of—Release by one partner, whether binds other partners—Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 241, 263.

In a suit against a partnership firm for moneys due on accounts, the plaintiff is entitled to a deduction of the time during which any of the partners was absent from British India, but such absence will save limitation only as against the absentee partner and not as against those who were within jurisdiction.

The legal representative of a deceased partner does not continue to be a partner after the latter's death for purposes of winding up. He only becomes a lender in respect of any business that might be carried on by the surviving partners. If no business is carried on, he is a tenant-in-common with the surviving partners in respect of the assets of the business.

It is open to one of the partners of a firm to release a partnership liability.

After the death of one of the partners the surviving partners have power to release a claim. If the release is fraudulent, the other partners can avoid it and seek to recover their share of the released debt. The right, however, is personal to the partners, and the legal representative of a deceased partner is not entitled to it. M PALANIAPPA CHETTIAR v. VEERAPPA CHETTIAR, 34 M. L. J. 41; 41 M. 446 466

Patna High Court, decisions of Calcutta High Court, whether binding upon.

The decisions of the Calcutta High Court, which until recently exercised jurisdiction in the Province of Bihar and Orissa, although they do not prevent the Patna High Court from exercising an independent judgment, are entitled to the greatest respect and should not be departed from without cogent reasons Pat KRISHNA LAL JHA v. NANDESHWAR JHA 146

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 4—Jurisdiction—Offence committed on high seas by subject of Native State, whether cognizable by British Indian Courts.

British Indian Courts have no jurisdiction to try a subject of a Native Indian State for an offence committed on board a ship belonging to a subject of a Native State outside territorial waters. B PUNJA GUNI v. EMPEROR, 20 BOM. L. R. 98; 19 CR. L. J. 337; 42 B. 234 449

Penal Code—contd.

——— ss. 44, 323, 341, 385—Threat to report suspected case of smuggling liquor, whether extortion—'Injury,' meaning of—Joint trial of charges of wrongful restraint, attempt at extortion and causing hurt in attempt, legality of.

Accused, who was the proprietor of a certain estate, stopped complainant, a cooly, whom he suspected of smuggling Arrack from the Nizam's Dominions into British Territory, on the way, took and kept his liquor jar for the night and threatened to report the matter to the Police unless he paid something. He was charged with wrongful restraint, threat of injury to commit extortion and causing simple hurt in the course of the attempted extortion and was sentenced to a single fine of Rs. 100 for the three offences:

Held, (1) that the conviction under section 385 was bad, as complainant was not put in fear of any injury within the meaning of section 44 of the Penal Code and the accused only threatened to do what he was bound by law to do;

(2) that the conviction under section 341 was bad, as there was no physical restraint of complainant's person;

(3) that the charge of voluntarily causing hurt, which was non-cognisable and for which there was no complaint to a Magistrate, should not have been tried on the Police charge sheet with the other charges and that this irregularity prejudiced the accused, as the evidence of hurt was not considered except as combined with the evidence on the other Police charges.

For the purpose of section 385, Indian Penal Code, it is necessary that the accused should have put some person in fear of injury in order to extort some property from him. 'Injury' includes only such harm as may be caused illegally to a person's mind, body, reputation or property. M In re MANTRIPRAGADA MATTAPALLI NARASIMHA RAO, 19 CR. L. J. 445 973

——— ss. 75, 379 183

——— ss. 96, 97, 141, 447—Trespass, resistance to—Private defence, right of, exercise of—Persons exceeding right, whether constitute 'unlawful assembly.'

The right of private defence against an act of trespass on one's property is not lost by reason of the omission to send word to a Police Station which is at some distance from the place of occurrence.

Persons who exercise their right of resisting an unlawful trespass on their property do not become members of an unlawful assembly by repelling attacks made on them or by exceeding their right of private defence. M PENUMESA THIRUMALRAJU v. EMPEROR, 19 CR. L. J. 248 40

——— ss. 97, 324, 334—Private defence, right of, extent of—Inflicting wound with sharp weapon on grave and sudden provocation—Offence.

Accused was coming along the road on his bicycle when he was set upon and assaulted by the complainant. He fell off the bicycle on to the ground with the complainant on top of him. In the struggle which ensued the accused wounded the complainant in the breast with a sharp knife:

Held, that the accused was guilty of an offence under section 334 of the Penal Code, inasmuch as he acted under grave and sudden provocation.

Penal Code—contd.

The right of an accused person to defend himself upon a criminal charge can only be limited by the provisions of the Statute Law. A YUSUF HUSAIN v. EMPEROR, 16 A.L J. 169; 20 CR.L J. 371; 40 A. 284 675

——— ss. 97, 99, 141—Right of private defence, extent of—Unlawful assembly—Rioting.

The right of private defence extends to section 141 and subsequent sections of the Penal Code just as much as it extends to any other offence punishable under the Penal Code. Where a person in possession of property sees an actual invasion of his rights to that property, if that invasion amounts to an offence under the Code, he is entitled to resist it by force and to collect for that purpose such numbers and such arms as may be absolutely necessary for this purpose, provided only that there is no time to have recourse to the protection of the Police authorities. Pat FOUZDAR RAI v. EMPEROR, 4 P. L. W. 111; 19 CR. L. J. 241; 3 P. L J. 419; (1918) PAT. 254 33

——— s. 99 33

——— s. 99—Right of private defence against public servant 742

——— s. 141 33, 40

——— s. 147—Rioting—Warrant, defective execution of—Assault on Police—Offence.

Two persons were accused under section 498 of the Penal Code of the abduction of one K. The Magistrate, intending to act under section 90 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, ordered the issue of a warrant for the arrest of K. By mistake, however, the warrant stated that K. herself was charged with an offence under section 498. The officer, to whom the warrant was made over for execution, went with some constables to the village of K. and on her failure to furnish bail arrested her and had taken her a short distance from the village, when the accused rescued K. and inflicted injuries on the Police:

Held, that the accused were guilty of an offence under section 147 of the Penal Code, the common object being to rescue K., the causing of hurt to the Police being a necessary incident of the rescue and, therefore, a part of the common object P ATTAR SINGH v. EMPEROR, 9 P. R. 1918 CR; 14 P. W. R. 1918 CR; 19 CR. L. J. 390 742

——— s. 182—False information—Petition of resignation containing untrue statements—Offence.

The accused, a peon of the Court of Wards, had a quarrel with one S, brother of a zilladar employed by the Court of Wards, and afterwards submitted a petition of resignation to the Collector, the officer in charge of the Court of Wards, in which he gave a distorted version of the whole affair in order to forestall any proceedings which might be taken against him by S. or his brother:

Held, (1) that the petition did not amount to a complaint;

(2) that the accused was not guilty of an offence under section 182 of the Penal Code inasmuch as he never intended the Collector to use his powers to the injury or annoyance of the persons mentioned in the petition nor had he any knowledge that such a result was likely. A DEBI v. EMPEROR, 16 A. L. J. 105; 19 CR. L. J. 257 113

Penal Code - contd.

——— s. 182—False information—Suspicion, expression of, whether amounts to giving false information.

Accused made a complaint to the Police that a hukka had been stolen from his house and that he suspected two persons. It was found that the hukka had really been stolen:

Held, that the stating of his suspicion by the accused did not amount to giving false information. C ANANGA MOHAN DUTTA v. EMPEROR, 27 C. L. J. 230; 22 C. W. N. 478; 19 CR. L. J. 336 352

——— s. 188 751

——— s. 295—Killing cow with intention of offending religious feelings of Hindus—Offence.

The killing of a cow with the intention or knowledge of offending the religious susceptibilities of Hindus is not an offence under section 295 of the Penal Code.

Where in a village the Sikhs killed some fowls by the process known as jhatka in the vicinity of a mosque, thereby causing annoyance to the Muhammadans, who in retaliation killed a cow with the knowledge that the Sikhs would be likely to consider such killing as an insult to their religion:

Held, that the Muhammadans were not guilty of an offence under section 295 of the Penal Code. P ALI MUHAMMAD v. EMPEROR, 1 P. W. R. 1918 CR.; 160 P. L. R 1917; 10 P. R. 1918 CR; 19 CR. L. J. 314 330

——— ss. 299, Exp. (1), 300 (2)—Accelerating death of person suffering from disorder-Knowledge of disorder—Offence.

Explanation (1) to section 299 of the Penal Code assumes that the bodily injury was inflicted with the intention of causing death or the knowledge that it would be likely to cause death.' It was intended to repeat the English rule that an injury which accelerates the death of a dying man is deemed to be the cause of it, and where death has been caused it is no defence that the deceased was suffering from a complaint which would have caused his death in any event. Section 300 (2) of the Code makes it clear that the offender is not responsible for death in such a case unless he knew that the condition of the deceased was such that his act was likely to cause death. S IMPERATOR v. ISMAIL, 11 S. L. R. R. 79; 19 CR. L. J. 319 335

——— s. 302—Murder—Death caused by arsenic—Offence.

Accused administered arsenic to a boy of nine years of age with the object of preventing the boy's father from giving evidence against the accused in a criminal trial. The boy died from the effects of the poison:

Held, that the accused was guilty of murder, inasmuch as he knew that the act committed by him was so imminently dangerous that it must in all probability cause to the boy such bodily injury as was likely to cause death. A GAURI SHANKAR v. EMPEROR, 16 A. L. J. 178; 19 CR. L. J. 382 686

——— s. 304—Beating woman to death believing her to be possessed by evil spirit—Offence.

Accused, believing the deceased to be possessed by an evil spirit, beat her to death in the hope of curing her. The deceased protested that she was not possessed and did not consent to be beaten:

Penal Code—contd.

Held, that the accused were guilty of an offence under the second part of section 304 of the Penal Code. U B NGA PO THA v. EMPEROR, 3 U. B. R. (1917) 54; 19 CR. L. J. 375 679

——— s. 323 973

——— ss. 324, 334 675

——— s. 341 973

——— s. 341—Wrongful restraint—Joint owner locking up shop—Civil dispute—Procedure.

One of two joint owners of a shop leased it to the complainant without the consent of the other joint owner, whereupon the latter put her lock on the shop. The complainant accused her of wrongful restraint:

Held, that the accused had committed no offence.

Obiter dictum.—Even if the action of the accused could be construed as coming within any of the penal provisions of the Penal Code, yet the matter in dispute was so plainly a civil dispute that a Magistrate would not only be justified, but would be acting in a very desirable way, if he dismissed the complaint as being an abuse of the process of a Criminal Court. B BAI SAMRATH v. EMPEROR, 20 BOM. L. R. 106; 19 CR L. J. 351 463

——— s. 343—Wrongful confinement—Prostitute kept in brothel house—Offence.

Accused No. 1 brought the complainant, his mistress, to Bombay and after living with her for a few days in a brothel house left her in charge of accused No 2, the brothel-keeper, who kept guard over the complainant and allowed her to go out only on rare occasions under proper control. Accused No. 1 was aware of the conditions under which the complainant would have to live in the house:

Held, that both the accused were guilty of the offence of wrongful confinement. B BANDU EBRAHIM v. EMPEROR, 20 BOM. L R 79; 19 CR. L. J. 258, 42 B. 181 114

——— s. 378—Trees in possession of landlord cut by tenant—Offence.

Where trees standing on a demised land are in the possession of the landlord, it is theft on the part of the tenant to sever them from the ground, apart from any question of the possession of the land itself.

A clause in a kabuliyat provided that if the tenant cut any trees he would pay to the landlord compensation at a certain rate. The tenant knowing this clause mala fide cut the trees in order to injure the landlord:

Held, that the tenant was guilty of theft. C ABDUL ALI FAKIR v. NETALI FAKIR, 27 C. L. J. 228; 19 Cr. L. J. 334 350

——— s. 379 183

——— s. 385 973

——— ss. 415, 420—Cheating—Disposing of woman by misrepresenting caste and obtaining money—Offence.

To palm off a woman as belonging to a caste different to the one to which she really belongs with the object of obtaining money amounts to the offence of cheating as defined in section 415 of the Penal Code. P EMPEROR v. JHANDA SINGH, 6 P. R. 1918 CR; 16 P. W. R. 1918 CR.; 19 CR. L. J. 335 351

——— s. 420 351

——— s. 425—Mischief—Cutting down trees without impairing value—Offence.

Penal Code—contd.

Where there is a dispute between the parties as to the ownership of a tree and one of them cuts it down, the case is beyond the cognizance of a Criminal Court and outside the scope of section 425 of the Penal Code. The cutting down of a tree does not amount to mischief unless it destroys or diminishes the dignity or value of the tree. Pat SARDAR SINGH v. EMPEROR, 4 P. L. W. 291; 19 CR. L. J. 339 451

——— s. 430, essentials of—Diminishing supply of water used for agriculture—Prevention of waste and storage of water for sale whether 'mischief'—Cutting bund erected on channel.

An offence under section 430 is committed when a person without any sort of right takes water to which another is entitled, whereby the latter is deprived of the full supply that he has a right to claim. Such taking, in the absence of a bona fide claim of right, evidences an intention to cause wrongful loss.

Neither the prevention of the water from running waste, nor the storing of it with the intention of selling it to other landowners makes the act of taking any the less an offence when deprivation is caused to the person legally entitled to the water.

The cutting of a bund erected on a channel, whereby a person is wrongfully deprived of the use of water, constitutes an offence under section 430 of the Penal Code. M CHIDAMBARAM PILLAI v. MUHAMAD KHAN SAHIB, 34 M. L. J. 206; 23 M. L. T. 248; 19 CR. L. J. 356 580

——— ss. 441, 443, 456, 509—Lurking house trespass by night—Evidence—Intention—Presumption.

Where the evidence shows that a man has been found lurking at night inside the house of another person, a perfect stranger to him, or a person in whose house he has no apparent business, the prosecution is entitled to ask the Court to infer from these facts that there was a guilty intention on the part of the accused sufficient to bring his action within the purview of section 441 of the Penal Code.

In dealing with cases of this sort Magistrates should not overlook the existence of section 509 of the Penal Code, when they are considering the allegation on the part of the prosecution that the entry by the accused into the premises in question must presumably have been with intent to commit some offence.

Per Walsh J.—Where in a case of house-trespass the accused alleges that he went to the house to carry on an intrigue with a woman who was the inmate of the house, then if there was an invitation or complicity by the woman, combined with an intention to preserve strict secrecy, it is difficult to say that there was any intention to annoy a third person; but if that third person had expressly prohibited the accused, then his act becomes a direct defiance to an express order, and it is impossible to say that an intention to annoy the author of the order cannot be inferred from it. A LALA v. EMPEROR, 16 A. L. J. 157 (Foot note ; 19 CR. L. J. 243 35

——— s. 443 35

——— s. 447 40

Penal Code—concld.

——— s. 448—Criminal trespass—Bona fide claimant guarding property—Offence.

The essence of an offence under section 448 of the Penal Code is that there should be an intention to insult, annoy or intimidate the owner of the property or such person as is acting on behalf of the owner.

Where a person who is a rival claimant to some property comes on the premises in good faith with the intention of guarding the property, he is not guilty of criminal trespass, Pat MEWA LAL v. EMPEROR, (1917) PAT. 563; 3 P. L. J. 147; 19 CR. L. J. 249; 4 P. L. W. 359 41

——— s. 456 35

——— ss. 463, 464, 467, 471—Forgery—Burden of proof.

In order to establish that a document is forged, the prosecution must give conclusive evidence to establish that the document is a false document within the meaning of section 464 of the Penal Code, and further that it was forged by the accused with one of the intents mentioned in section 463.

In a charge of forgery it is for the prosecution to prove that the document is a forged one and that the accused did forge it, and not for the defence to prove that the document is a genuine one. Pat LACHMI SINGH v. EMPEROR, (1918) PAT. 36; 19 CR. L. J. 344 456

——— s. 465 740

——— s. 467 456, 740

——— s. 471 456

——— ss. 497, 498—Enticing away married woman—Intention—Adultery, proof of—Benefit of doubt.

For a conviction under section 498 of the Penal Code there must be an intention that the woman should leave her husband's control without any definite intention that she should return to him or an intention that she should remain away indefinitely.

Where it was alleged that the accused committed adultery with a woman while shut up in a shop with her angry husband outside, their entry in the shop together having been discovered at once and the door having been chained on them immediately:

Held, that it did not appear likely that the accused would commit adultery under such circumstances. P AHMAD v. EMPEROR, 145 P. L. R. 1917, 19 CR. L. J. 441 969

——— s. 498 204, 966, 971

——— s. 509 35

Pleader and client—Admission of fact by Pleader, whether binding on client.

An admission of fact by the Pleader of a party is binding upon his client and the opposite party cannot be arbitrarily deprived of the benefit of the admission. C JAHADALI v. AJIMANNESSA BIBI 18

——— Pleader for judgment-debtor purchasing decree, effect of—Judgment-debt, whether satisfied.

That the effect of the purchase of a decree by the Pleader for the judgment-debtors is not to satisfy the decree and to release the judgment-debtors from their liability, although the Pleader holds the decree

Pleader and client—concld.

assigned to him in trust for his clients, and, if called upon by his client to do so, is bound to assign the decree to him. No Court will, however, decree such a re-conveyance except upon equitable terms. C NAGENDRAE BALA DASSI v. DEBENDRA NATH, 22 C W. N. 491; 27 C L. J 388 13

Pleadings, construction of—Court, duty of.

Pleadings in the Mufussil Courts, which are loosely drawn up and do not contain exhaustive statements as to the basis of claims and defences, describing in accurate legal language the alternative and distinctive ways of founding and describing the rights put forward therein, should not be taken too literally and the substance of the averments should be looked into. M PRAYAGA DOSS JEE VARU v. VENKAMA NAIDU; 23 M. L. T. 137; 7 L. W. 477; (1918) M. W. N. 346 641

———, construction of—Litigating large rights in trivial proceedings—Practice—Court, duty of.

Per Seshagiri Aiyar, J.—Courts should, as far as possible, refuse to allow plain plaints to be construed as containing hidden causes of action and pronounce opinion thereon. Litigants should not convert trivial and innocuous proceedings into suits for adjudication of grave issues and substantial rights. M RAMAN SOMAYAJIPAD v. KUNHU KUTTI KOVILAMMA, 23 M. L. T. 187; (1918) M. W. N. 179; 34 M. L. J. 344; 7 L. W 490 630

——— Finding on point not covered by issue—Evidence taken—Remand 419

——— Inconsistent pleas in different suits, whether can be allowed.

It is an elementary rule based on the most obvious grounds of justice, equity and good conscience that parties litigants cannot be allowed to take up inconsistent positions in Court to the detriment of their opponents.

In 1906 plaintiff sued K. for recovery of possession of land on declaration of title. K. objected to the plaintiff's claim for recovery of possession on the ground that a lease granted by the plaintiff to S. was in existence at the date of the suit. K.'s objection was given effect to and though plaintiff's title was declared, his claim for recovery of possession was disallowed on the ground that the lease in favour of was in force at the date of suit. Subsequently in 1913 plaintiff brought the present suit for recovery of possession against K. and S. The suit was opposed by K. on the ground that it was not maintainable inasmuch as the plaintiff could and should have made the same prayer for possession against S. in the previous suit since the lease in favour of S. had terminated before the institution of the previous suit:

Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to succeed on proof that no sub-tenancy created by him existed at the date of the institution of the present suit.

Held, further, that it would be manifestly unjust, if the defendants were allowed to defeat the present claim on proof that, contrary to their previous allegation, a decree for recovery of possession might and should have been made in favour of the plaintiff in the previous suit. C GIRISH CHANDRA BIT v BIPIN BEHARI KHAN, 27 C. L. J. 535 159

Pleadings and proof, variance between—Appellate Court, whether can raise new point.

It is an elementary rule that the determination of causes depends on the allegations made in the pleadings and the proof.

An Appellate Court is not entitled to raise new points involving fresh evidence in appeal and to remand the case for the trial of questions which never occurred to the parties previously. C BASEEMATI DEBI v. TARIT BASANI DASSI 416

Possession, suit for—Some of several heirs, whether can sue for whole estate.

Where some only out of several collaterals of a deceased proprietor bring a suit for possession of the property left by him, they can recover possession only of the shares to which they are entitled and not of the whole estate. P BHARI v. KHANNU, 7 P. R. 1918 162

Pre-emption suit 666

Presidency Towns Insolvency Act (III of 1909), s. 7, order under—Suit to set aside order, maintainability of—Appeal.

No suit lies to set aside an order passed under section 7 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act. The proper remedy for the party aggrieved is to appeal against the order. M HAJEE ABDUL LATEEF SAHIB v. OFFICIAL ASSIGNEE OF MADRAS, 40 M. 1173 847

Press Act (I of 1910), s. 3—Press exempted from depositing security—Subsequent order requiring security, validity of—Procedure, proper.

An order under section 3 (2) of the Press Act can be passed only by the Local Government.

The keeper of an old press on the passing of the Press Act made the necessary declaration but was exempted from depositing security under section 3 (1) of the Act. Subsequently the District Magistrate directed him to deposit security within fifteen days:

Held, (1) that the District Magistrate had no power to issue such an order;

(2) that the proper procedure for the District Magistrate was to issue a notice to the keeper of the press to show cause why the order exempting him from security made at the time of the filing of his declaration should not be cancelled or varied in such manner as may seem good to the District Magistrate. Pat GANESH LAL v. EMPEROR, 4 P. L. W. 155; 19 CR. L. J. 355 579

Presumption 621

Principal and surety 693

——— Contribution, suit for—Surety, liability of, to contribute to payment of principal's debt.

Where the Chairman of a Company under an agreement very beneficial to himself financed the Company with money borrowed from a third person and at the request of the latter some of the Directors executed a pro-note as sureties, whereby, along with the Chairman, they made themselves jointly liable for the payment of the loan:

Held, that the sureties were not liable to contribute to the sum realised by the creditor from the principal. L B ABDUL BARI CHOWDRY v. JOAKIN. 231

Probate and Administration Act (V of 1881), s. 5—"Deposited in a Court of competent jurisdiction," meaning of—Properly authenticated copy, what is.

Section 5 of the Probate and Administration Act does not require that the Will should have been deposited once and should have remained in Court for all time. The words in the section "when a Will has been proved and deposited in a Court of competent jurisdiction" do not mean "continues to remain in deposit." It is quite sufficient if the Will had in fact been deposited in a foreign Court of competent jurisdiction and that Court had before it the original Will at the time it made a judicial pronouncement as to the validity of the Will.

Probate and Administration Act —contd.

The copy of the Will, which has to be produced in a Court in British India under section 5 of the Probate and Administration Act for the issue of Letters of Administration with a copy of the Will annexed, does not necessarily mean a copy authenticated under the seal of the foreign Court; a copy authenticated by the notarial seal of a notary as provided for by the judicial process of a foreign Court is a properly authenticated copy within the meaning of the section. C SUSHILABALA DASI v. ANUKUL CHANDRA, 22 C. W. N. 713 166

——— s. 13.

Section 13 of the Probate and Administration Act forbids Letters being granted to a minor. L B MA SHAN MA BYU v. MA CHIT SAW, 10 BUR. L. T. 184 138

——— ss. 23, 41—Object of Act—Letters of Administration, to whom may be granted—S. 41, applicability of.

The object of proceedings under the Probate and Administration Act is to determine only the question of representation of the deceased for the purpose of administering the estate, and not for the purpose of determining any question of inheritance.

Any decision on questions such as adoption in administration proceedings is not final and would not operate as res judicata in any subsequent suit in which the party dissatisfied with the decision might raise the same question. It is not desirable, therefore, that such questions should be gone into in administration proceedings.

Where a sister applied for Letters of Administration to the estate of her deceased brother who had no children of his body, and the father of the minor respondent acting as her guardian set up that she had been adopted by the deceased and his wife, and the District Judge finding that the adoption had taken place rejected the application:

Held, that prima facie the sister was a person under section 23 of the Probate and Administration Act to whom Letters might be granted, but that even if she might as the result of litigation turn out to have no right to any part of the estate in consequence of the minor having been adopted with right of inheritance, she was a person to whom Letters of Administration might be granted under section 41 of the Act. L B MA SHAN MA BYU v. MA CHIT SAW, 10 BUR. L. T. 184 138

——— s. 34—Administrator pendente lite, position of—Probate Court, power of, to direct Administrator pendente lite to advance to widow contesting Will money for maintenance and conduct of case.

The position of an Administrator pendente lite in Probate proceedings is closely analogous to that of a Receiver in a partition suit and section 34 of the Probate and Administration Act gives ample power to the Court to direct the Administrator pendente lite to do such acts as may be necessary in the interests of the several parties to the proceedings.

A testator left immoveable property, the annual income of which was ten thousand rupees, and also cash and money lent out at interest. By a Will purporting to have been made by him, the widow was allowed Rs. 20 a month and her minor sons were given shares in the estate much less than what they would get by the law of inheritance. During the Probate proceedings the widow, who contested the Will, claimed on behalf of herself and her minor sons sums reasonably sufficient for their maintenance and also sufficient to enable her to contest the Will and to put her case adequately before the Court:

Held, that the Administrator pendente lite should be directed by the Court to advance to the widow one thousand rupees and thereafter under the orders of the Court such sums as might be found to be reasonably necessary for the maintenance of the widow and her minor sons and for the proper conduct of their defence in the Probate proceedings. C GOUR MONI DASSI v. BRODA KANTA JANA 657

——— s. 41 138

——— s. 98 (1)—Order directing executor to furnish accounts annually, legality of.

An order directing an executor to furnish accounts annually is not in accordance with the provisions of section 98 (1) of the Probate and Administration Act. C JAGAT DURLAV MAZUMDAR v. INDU BHUSAN MUZUMDAR 58

Probate and Administration Act —concld.

Provincial Insolvency Act (III of 1907), s. 6 (3)—Petition of insolvency, dismissal of, on ground that debtor is able to pay debts.

Where a debtor, who fulfils either of the conditions laid down in section 6 (3) of the Provincial Insolvency Act, presents a petition to be adjudged an insolvent, the Court is not entitled to dismiss the petition on the ground that the petitioner is well able to pay his debts and that the application is made really to defraud creditors. P MEHR SINGH v. DAYA NAND COLLEGE, LAHORE, 27 P. R. 1918; 40 P. W. R. 1918 850

——— s. 15 850

——— ss. 16, 18, 20, 23—Petition for adjudication—Court, power of, to call upon debtor of insolvent to pay money into Court.

Where a debtor presents a petition for adjudication as an insolvent, the Court has no power, without making an order for adjudication or appointing a Receiver, to order a debtor of the insolvent to pay into Court any money which he owes to the insolvent. N GANPAT WANJARI v. AMRITA 537

——— ss. 18, 20 537

——— s. 22—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908,) O. XXI, r. 90, applicability of, to contracts of sale by Receiver—Jurisdiction—District Court, powers of superintendence of, over acts of Receiver.

A District Court has no jurisdiction to entertain an application under Order XXI, rule 90, Civil Procedure Code, to annul a contract of sale completed by a Receiver. Its powers are limited to applications preferred within 21 days of the contract under section 22 of the Provincial Insolvency Act.

The District Court has, however, powers of supervision over the Official Receiver and can give him

Provincial Insolvency Act—concld.
directions not to complete a contract of sale in exercise of such powers. M AVANASHI CHETTI v. MUTHUKRUPPAN CHETTI, 7 L. W. 406; 34 M. L. J. 319; (1918) M. W. N. 345 885
——— s. 23 537
——— s. 36—Annulment of transfer—Notice to transferee, form of—Notice to prove debt, whether sufficient.
When a question arises whether a transfer should or should not be annulled under section 36 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, it is requisite that the transferee should have proper notice that proceedings are contemplated under that section and a proper opportunity to put his case before the Court.
The question of proof of a debt under the Provincial Insolvency Act is different from the question of annulling a mortgage under section 36. C JUGALPADA DUTT v. GANESH CHANDRA PAL 168
——— s. 36—Transfer impugned—Antecedent debts—Dower claims.
In a case arising under section 36 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, the burden of proving that the transaction impugned was carried out in good faith and for valuable consideration is on the transferee.
Antecedent debts might constitute a good consideration for a conveyance impugned under section 36 of the Provincial Insolvency Act.
The question whether a transfer challenged under the provisions of section 36, Provincial Insolvency Act, was in good faith involves as an important element the value for which the properties were sold.
An insolvent had transferred certain property to his wife in lieu of dower within two years before his adjudication. He continued in possession of the property along with his wife, but it was found that the dower debt was genuine and that the value of the property transferred was not incommensurate with the amount of the debt:
Held, that the transaction could not be impugned under section 36 of the Provincial Insolvency Act. C BASIRUDDIN v. MOKIMA BIBI, 22 C. W. N. 709 915
——— s. 43 (2)—Omission to enter property in schedule—Offence.
Where an insolvent, not knowing or forgetting that an equity of redemption is a valuable asset, failed to show in his schedule of assets certain land belonging to him but mortgaged with possession to two of his scheduled creditors:
Held, that he was not guilty of an offence under section 43 (2) of the Provincial Insolvency Act. P WADHAWA SINGH v. EMPEROR, 2 P. W. R. 1918 CR.; 158 P. L. R. 1917; 19 CR. L. J. 272 128
——— s. 46—Appeal, presentation of, after time—Time occupied in obtaining copy of order, exclusion of.
The Provincial Insolvency Act is not a self-contained enactment, nevertheless the general provisions of the Limitation Act should not be introduced into the construction of section 46, clause (4), of the former Act.
Recourse should not be had to the general provisions of the Limitation Act in dealing with the admission of petitions and appeals presented after the time prescribed under the provisions of the Provincial Insolvency Act. M KOPPARTHI LINGAYYA v. ARAVETI CHINNARAYANA, 33 M. L. J. 566; 41 M. L. J. 9; 7 L. W. 443 805
——— s. 47 850

Provincial Small Causes Courts Act (IX of 1887), ss. 15, 16—Suit to recover mutharfa, whether cognisable by Small Causes Court—Jurisdiction, question of, consideration of—Procedure.
A Court in order to satisfy itself as to its jurisdiction is required to examine the plaint and decide on the plaint and not on the written statement what is the nature of the claim.
A suit to recover a sum from a tenant levied as mutharfa, irrespective of the area of the land upon which the tenant builds and of the dimensions of the house built by him, is cognisable by a Court of Small Causes, whether the sum is regarded as rent or as a tax. Pat ERNEST MYLNE v. NATHU SUNDI, 4 P. L. W. 218 887
——— Sch. II, Art. 1 910
——— ——— Art. 13 699
——— ——— Art. 31—Suit for mesne profits of grove wrongfully received by defendant, whether cognizable by Small Cause Court—Jurisdiction.
A suit to recover mesne profits of a grove which the plaintiff has been wrongfully kept out of possession of by the defendant, falls under Article 31, Schedule II of the Provincial Small Causes Court Act and is not cognizable by a Small Cause Court. A DRIG PAL SINGH v. KUNJAL, 16 A. L. J. 55; 40 A. 142 689
Public street—Caste procession, obstruction to—Declaration of right and injunction, suit for, whether maintainable—Special damage, proof of, requisites of—Obstruction, what constitutes.
Where a marriage procession is obstructed from passing along a public road, an action lies, on proof of special damage, for a declaration of the right to pass along the road and for an injunction restraining the obstruction.
In such cases, proof of actual obstruction or the use of violence is unnecessary. It is enough to show that owing to the hostile attitude of the obstructors, the procession was not able to start.
By special damage is not meant actual pecuniary loss.
The special damage may consist in the inconvenience or loss consequent on a postponement of the marriage or waste of time involved in taking another route, or it may consist in some damage peculiar to the community constituting the procession. M GANAPATHY MOOPPEN v. SUBBA NAYAKKAN, 23 M. L. T. 258 834
Punjab Alienation of Land Act (XIII of 1900), s. 16—Mortgage—Debt, whether can be separated from security—Execution—Mortgage-debt, whether can be sold apart from security.
A mortgage-debt cannot be separated from the security and sold in execution of a decree, where the mortgage itself is not liable to sale. The sale of the debt would carry with it the security.
Where, therefore, the provisions of section 16 of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act prevent a decree-holder from selling up his judgment-debtor's mortgage rights, he cannot sell up either the debt or the security. P LAL CHAND v. ALLAH DAD, 16 P. R. 1918; 37 P. W. R. 1918; 16 P. L. R. 1918 528

Punjab Courts Act (III of 1914), s. 41 (3)—Appeal, second, on point of custom—Certificate, defective, effect of.

A second appeal on a point of custom cannot be admitted upon a certificate granted by the lower Appellate Court in terms which do not satisfy the requirements of section 41 (3) of the Punjab Courts Act. P YAD RAM v. MANBHARI, 4 P. W. R. 1918; 148 P. L. R. 1917 87

——— s. 41 (3)—Custom—Burden of proof, whether question of law or of custom—Appeal, second—Certificate, necessity of—Certificate refused on wrong ground, effect of.

The question of onus probandi in a custom case is not a pure question of law unconnected with custom. On the other hand, it is not, under all circumstances, a question relating to the validity or existence of a custom except in so far as, in proving or disproving the validity or existence of a custom, a party to a suit may be held to be entitled to an initial presumption in his favour on the strength of a generally accepted rule of custom as laid down by judicial decisions or otherwise.

Where the lower Appellate Court, holding that the parties were governed by custom, decided that the defendant, the sister of the last male holder, on whom the onus lay of establishing that she was entitled to succeed to the property of her deceased brother in preference to his collaterals, had failed to discharge the onus:

Held, that the question of onus probandi in this case was one relating to the existence of a custom governing the succession to the property of the deceased, and that, therefore, a certificate under section 41 (3) of the Punjab Courts Act was necessary to the institution of a second appeal regarding the said question. P BHARI v. KHANNU, 7 P. R. 1918 162

——— ss. 41 (3), 44 - Lower Appellate Court, refusing certificate—Revision, whether lies.

Where in a case in which a question of custom was in issue the lower Appellate Court refused to grant a certificate under section 41 (3) of the Punjab Court Act, on the ground that no question of custom arose:

Held, that the lower Appellate Court had failed to exercise the jurisdiction vested in it and the order was, therefore, open to revision under section 44 of the Act. P SARUP SINGH v. JOWAHRI, 18 P. R. 1918 732

——— s. 44 732

Punjab Government Notification No. 99, dated 23rd February 1883 326

Punjab Land Revenue Act (XVII of 1887), s. 36 117

——— s. 44—Mutation entries, effect of—Presumption—Burden of proof.

Where the parties were present at the time when certain mutation entries were made with their consent, and the Revenue Officers made every effort to ascertain what the parties wished to be done, the entries themselves being quite clear, the onus of proving that a mistake was made lies heavily upon the party who asserts that his intention was not correctly expressed by the entries, and this onus is not discharged by showing merely that there is a certain amount of confusion in the report of the patwari and that the area given by that party is considerably in excess of the area received by him. P WADHAWA SINGH v. BALWANT SINGH, 2 P. W. R. 1918; 153 P. L. R. 1917 277

Punjab Municipal Act (III of 1911), ss. 13 (a), 175, 219—Street—Removal of obstruction, when justified—Private property.

Section 175 of the Punjab Municipal Act does not authorise a Municipal Committee to call upon anybody to remove a projection or an obstruction, unless it is proved by the Committee that the site on which the projection or obstruction stands is part of a "street" within the meaning of section 13 (a) of the Act.

Where, therefore, the petitioner was convicted under section 219 of the Punjab Municipal Act and ordered to demolish a latrine situated in a street close to his house and it appeared that the latrine had been in existence for 65 years, during which time the Municipal Committee treated it as private property:

Held, that the conviction could not stand. P SHAHAB-UD-DIN v. EMPEROR, 15 P. W. R. 1918 CR.: 19 CR. L. J. 254 46

——— ss. 86, 242—Profession tax, levy of—Munsif, whether follows profession.

The Punjab Government imposed a profession tax in the Una Notified Area and the plaintiff, a Munsif, was assessed to pay the tax. He paid it under protest and then brought a suit for the recovery of the amount:

Held, (1) that the suit was not one concerning an act purporting to be done by any person by order of the Local Government and was not, therefore, excluded from the jurisdiction of a Court of Small Causes;

(2) that the Munsif could not be said to follow a profession in the popular sense of the term and the Government could not have intended that he should be liable to pay a profession tax. P COMMITTEE OF NOTIFIED AREA, UNA v. CHATAR BEHARI NARAIN, 74 P. W. R. 1918 910

——— ss. 175, 219 46

——— s. 242 910

Punjab Redemption of Mortgages Act (II of 1913), s. 12—Mortgages by father and mother of minor—Redemption of only one mortgage—Suit by mortgagee—Principles applicable—He who seeks equity must do equity.

The proceedings under the Punjab Redemption of Mortgages Act are summary and in a disputed case neither party should be prejudiced by the Collector's action when the matter is later on submitted to the decision of the Civil Courts

Defendant's father mortgaged some land with possession to the plaintiff for Rs. 193 odd. After the father's death the defendant's mother, as his de facto guardian, created an additional mortgage of Rs. 100 on the land. Defendant made an application under the Punjab Redemption of Mortgages Act, and the Collector ordered redemption to take place on payment of Rs. 193 odd only. The plaintiff then instituted a suit under section 12 of the Act:

Held, that the defendant could not redeem the land without redeeming both the mortgages, inasmuch as had the Collector not intervened and the minor had applied to the Civil Courts for entry, he would have obtained a decree conditional on payment of both mortgages and his position could not be allowed to be improved by what turned out to be an erroneous executive order. P SARDARA v. KAURA RAM, 7 P. W. R. 1918; 152 P. L. R. 1917; 36 P. R. 1918 219

Punjab Tenancy Act (XVI of 1887), s. 59 433

Putni, construction of—Chowkidari chakran lands, whether included in putni.

Where a putni is granted in respect of a whole mouza, unless there is a provision to the contrary in the terms of the putni lease, the chowkidari chakran lands which form part of the Zemindar's estate in the mouza must be held to be included in the putni.

A clause in the putni lease of a whole mouza which reserves to or confers upon the Zemindar the right to appoint or dismiss chowkidars, has not the effect of reserving to the Zemindar and of excluding from the putni the chowkidari chakran lands in the mouza. C NAFAR CHANDRA CHANDRA v. BEJOY CHAND, 22 C. W. N. 487 526

Railways Act (IX of 1890), s. 75—"Value", "loss," meanings of—Carrier, duty of—Misdelivery, effect of—Damages, suit for.

The term "value of the articles" in sections 75 of the Railways Act means intrinsic or market value, i.e., the price for which they would reasonably sell at the time in the market as well as the value in the market, independent of any circumstances peculiar to the plaintiff.

The loss for which a Railway Company is protected from liability by section 75 of the Railways Act must be loss to the Railway Company itself and it must be loss which occurs while the goods are in the custody of the Company in their capacity as carriers, and cannot apply to a loss to the owner. Negligent misdelivery of goods to a person other than the owner is not such a loss as is contemplated by section 75 of the Railways Act.

Whether the goods are to be delivered to the consignee at his house or at the termination of the journey depends on agreement and on the usual course of business. If the goods are delivered at the house to which they are addressed, the carrier has done all he contracted to do and the mere fact that he delivers to some other person than the consignee at that house is no proof of breach of duty on his part. But if he delivers at any other place to any person other than the consignee, he does so at his peril. But where the carrier is not bound to deliver at the house of the consignee, his liability as carrier ceases when he has brought the goods to the station of destination and has tendered or delivered them within a reasonable time to the consignee or has allowed the consignee reasonable time in which to remove the goods.

Plaintiff delivered 24 account books to the defendant Railway Company for carriage to Nagpur. The books arrived safely at Nagpur but were negligently delivered to some person other than the consignee. The intrinsic value of the books was below Rs. 100. The plaintiff sued the defendant Company for 25,000 as damages for the loss of the books:

Held, that the defendant's liability was not saved by section 75 of the Railways Act, inasmuch as (a) the intrinsic value of the books was below Rs. 100, and (b) the loss occurred not while the books were in the custody of the defendant Company as carriers, but after their arrival at their destination. B RAMCHANDRA JAGANNATH v. G. I. P. RAILWAY CO., 20 BOM. L. R. 591 401

——— s. 76—Goods consigned under risk-note B, loss of—Damages, suit for—Burden of proof.

Railways Act—concld.

In a suit for damages against a Railway Company for the loss or non-delivery of goods consigned under a risk-note in form B, the burden of proving the cause of loss or non-delivery is on the plaintiff. C EAST INDIAN RAILWAY CO. v. KANAK BEHARY HALDAR, 22 C. W. N. 622 691

——— s. 120, scope of—Railway officials, applicability of section to—'Person', meaning of—Removing passengers from compartments in which they are entitled to travel—Offence.

The word 'person' in section 120 of the Railways Act includes Railway officials.

The section applies to acts mentioned therein, even if they are committed by Railway servants.

Where a Railway guard removed two gosha ladies from a first class compartment in which they were entitled to travel and forced them to occupy another compartment:

Held, that he was guilty of an offence under section 120 of the Railways Act. M CUFFLY v. MUHAMADALI MUHAMMAD IBRAHIM SAHIB, 19 CR. L. J. 313 329

Recognised sub-division, what is.

A recognised Sub-Division of a Survey number is a holding which has a separate assessment fixed for it. N GADADHAR v. CHUNNILAL, 14 N. L. R. 55 541

Registration Act (XIX of 1843), s. 2—Registration Act XVI of 1908), s. 50—Unregistered sale-deed accompanied by delivery of possession—Subsequent registered deed—Priority.

A prior unregistered sale-deed, which is not compulsorily registrable and which is accompanied by delivery of possession, is not invalidated by a subsequent registered sale-deed of the same property either under section 2 of the Registration Act of 1843 or under section 50 of the Registration Act of 1908. The person claiming under the prior unregistered deed, however, must not only prove the deed but also the delivery of possession.

A title which has once vested by virtue of a deed, be it unregistered, cannot be divested by a subsequent registered document. Pat ASGAR ALI v. DOST MOHAMMAD 354

Registration Act (XVI of 1908), s. 17 483

——— s. 17—Agreement by reversioner not to enforce right to declaration, whether compulsorily registrable.

An agreement by the reversioners of a deceased Hindu not to enforce their right to a declaration in respect of a gift of the property of the deceased made by the latter's widow is not a document conveying any right, title or interest or purporting or operating to extinguish any right, title or interest, vested or contingent, in immoveable property and is not, therefore, compulsorily registrable. A BHANA v. GUMAN SINGH, 16 A. L. J. 191 629

——— s. 17—Compromise containing lease, whether requires registration.

A compromise between landlord and tenant creating a lease and not incorporated in a decree of Court requires registration under section 17 (1) (d) of the Registration Act and is not admissible in evidence unless so registered. Pat SRIKISHUN LAL v. SHEOBALAK GOPE, 4 P. L. W. 247 638

Registration Act—1908—contd.

——— s. 17—Letter from mortgagor to equitable mortgagee showing object of mortgage, whether requires registration.

A letter addressed by the mortgagor of an equitable mortgage to the mortgagee, showing for what purpose he has deposited the title-deeds, is not a document requiring registration under the provisions of the Registration Act as a mortgage. C HARIPADA SADHUKHAN v. ANATH NATH DEY, 22 C. W. N. 758 211

——— ss. 17, 49—Secondary evidence of unregistered lost document, admissibility of, to prove oral agreement not affecting land.

Secondary evidence of a lost unregistered document affecting an interest in immoveable property and therefore required to be registered is not admissible as evidence of any transaction affecting such property but such evidence is admissible to prove the document so far as it evidences an oral agreement not affecting the land or any interest in land. L B MA PAN U v. MA SHWE TINT 91

——— s. 17 (1) (b), (2) (xi)—Relinquishment of portion of mortgage debt, agreement for—Registration—'Interest,' meaning of.

An agreement by which a mortgagee agrees to relinquish a portion of the mortgage debt is one which 'purports to limit or extinguish interest' in immoveable property and requires registration.

Per Napier, J.—A receipt for money paid in discharge of a mortgage debt is an instrument which operates to extinguish the mortgage within the meaning of section 17 (b) of the Registration Act. Extinction by receipt applies to the right, title and interest and thereby makes the amount covered by the security an 'interest' within the meaning of clause (b). Where the effect of the document is to 'limit', the same meaning must be applied to the word 'interest' and it must be read as applying to the amount of money secured. M CHUNDOORU LAKSHMANA SETTY v. DUGGISETTY CHENCHURAMAYYA, 34 M. L. J. 79; 7 L. W. 229; (1918) M. W. N 262 132

——— s. 17 (1) (d)—Lease, parol—Subsequent memoranda, whether compulsorily registrable 859

——— s. 17 (1) (h)—Document relinquishing rights in property—Registration.

A document relinquishing rights in immoveable property of the value of Rs. 100 or upwards and indicating a clear intention that the title should pass at once, is a conveyance and not merely an agreement to convey and is compulsorily registrable P GOPI RAM v. RAM DHAN, 10 P. W. R. 1918; 157 P. L. R. 1917 228

——— s. 28—Place of registration—Jurisdiction of Registrar—Transferor not entitled to property—Transfer, ostensible—Burden of proof.

In the absence of fraud on the part of the transferee and collusion between him and the transferor, the mere fact that the transferor has no title to that portion of the property which is situated within the jurisdiction of the Registrar is not a bar to the Registrar's jurisdiction to register the document.

Where a party alleges that a document to which he put his signature in token of resigning an interest does not contain a correct statement of the facts and of the intention of the parties, the burden of proving his allegation lies on such party. Pat RAMDEI v. CHUNDRA BALI BIBI, 4 P. L. W. 237 399

Registration Act—1908—concld.

——— s. 49 91

——— s. 49—Unregistered deed of gift, admissibility of, to explain origin of possession.

In a suit for possession the lower Court held that although an unregistered deed of gift relied upon by the defendant was inadmissible in evidence for want of registration and could not, therefore, affect the subject of the gift, yet it was admissible for a collateral purpose, viz., for the purpose of proving that defendant took possession of the subject of the gift from the date of the gift and remained in adverse possession of it for more than twelve years before the date of suit. There was no reference to delivery of possession in the deed of gift:

Held, that the deed was inadmissible in evidence even for the purpose of showing that the defendant had been in adverse possession of the property from the date of the deed. P SURJAN DAS v GANDA MAL, 13 P. W. R. 1918 889

——— s. 49—Unregistered sale-deed, admissibility of, to prove dower.

An unregistered sale-deed purporting to convey certain property of the value of Rs. 1,000 to the plaintiff in lieu of her dower is admissible in evidence to prove two collateral purposes: (1) that the dower was fixed at Rs. 1,000 in cash and (2) that a certain person stood surety for the payment of the sum. P MUHAMMAD BAKHSH v. AMIR BEGAM, 23 P. R. 1918 837

——— s. 50 354

——— s. 77—Suit to enforce registration—Procedure—Suit for recovery of possession on declaration of title by purchase or on specific performance of contract of sale, maintainability of—Frame of suit—Alleged transferee from vendor, whether can be joined as party.

Before a plaintiff can institute a suit under section 77 of the Registration Act to enforce registration of a document, he must follow strictly the procedure prescribed by the Act for obtaining registration of documents.

B executed a conveyance of certain land in favour of A but did not register it. Neither did he put A in possession of the land. A brought a suit against B praying for possession on declaration of title or on specific performance of the contract of sale. A made C a party to the suit, on the ground that the latter held a kobala of the land executed in his favour by B:

Held, that in such a case though A could not sue for enforcement of registration under section 77 of the Registration Act without following strictly the procedure laid down in the Act for enforcing registration of documents, yet as the agreement to sell remained unperformed, A was entitled to claim specific performance of the agreement to sell.

Held, further, that to avoid multiplicity of suits it was necessary for the plaintiff to join C as a party to the suit properly framed for specific performance. C NASIRUDDIN MIDDA v. SIDHOO MIA, 27 C. L. J. 538 361 ulation XVII of 1806, s. 8—Mortgage Foreclosure—Notice misdescribing land, validity of. here land is mortgaged with a share in the hilat, a foreclosure notice issued under Regulation II of 1806 which specifies the land but omits ention the shamilat, is altogether invalid.

foreclosure notice cannot be held to be valid regards one part of the mortgaged land and valid as regards the other part.
Where a foreclosure notice misdescribes the mortgaged property, the mortgagor is very likely to be misled by the misdescription. P KARM ILAHI v. BINDRA BAN, 17 P. R. 1918; 39 P. W. R. 1918; 18 P. L. R. 1918 540

Relief, whether can be granted when cause of action accrues after suit 863

Religious institution—Takia of Rasul Shahi Faqirs in Lahore, whether wakf.
The Takia of Rasul Shahi Faqirs in Lahore is a religious institution and waqf property. P MUHAMMAD ABDUL KADIR v. HUSSAIN BIBI, 11 P. W. R. 1918 879

Remand 18, 419

——— Further inquiry by lower Appellate Court, order for—Lower Appellate Court, whether can remand case to first Court for further inquiry—Procedure.
A case was remanded to the lower Appellate Court for further inquiry. On the return of the case a preliminary objection was taken by the respondent that the further inquiry should have been made by the lower Appellate Court itself and that it had no authority to remand the case to the first Court for the recording of further evidence but should have itself recorded any further evidence it deemed necessary:
Held, that it was not the intention of the Chief Court, when issuing the remand order, that the lower Appellate Court should be precluded from directing the first Court to record any additional evidence, if necessary. P PARTAP SINGH v. PARTAPI, 147 P. L. R. 1917 907

Res judicata—Execution proceedings—Objection disposed of at one stage, whether can be raised at subsequent stage.
Where in execution an objection is raised and gone into, the same objection cannot be considered on any subsequent application in execution. If it is decided against the judgment-debtor it is decided for good and all against him, and if decided in his favour is equally binding.
Where a decision of the execution Court is that no property of a judgment-debtor can be attached, that decision is final. Pat JADUBANS PANDAY v. EKRAM RAI, 4 P. L. W. 279 654

Restitution of conjugal rights, suit for—Cruelty—Defence.
In a suit for restitution of conjugal rights it appeared that the parties had been on bad terms or a considerable period, that the husband suspected he wife's fidelity and that he had been bringing ivil and criminal cases against her:
Held, that the wife had reasonable grounds for lieving that her health and safety would be endgered if she returned to her husband's custody that the plaintiff was not, therefore, entitled to a e. A HAMID HUSAIN v. KUBRA BEGAM, 16 A. L. 32 728

il) 812, 850

ower of, to interfere at inter-

Revision (Civil)—concld.

Where the record of a case has been sent for by the High Court and there appears on the record an obvious error, it is right and proper that the High Court should dispose of the matter even at an interlocutory stage and thus save the parties to the litigation unnecessary expenses and undue delay. Pat BANKEY BEHARI v. RAM BAHADUR, 4 P. L. W 281; (1918) PAT. 223 891

Revision (Criminal) 117, 119, 122, 332, 682

Riparian rights—Upper and lower owners, rights of—Natural right to use water of stream for irrigation—Prescriptive right to exclusive use of water, acquisition of.
Riparian owners have a natural right to use the water of a natural streamlet for purposes of irrigation so long as that use is reasonable.
Where, however, a lower riparian owner has acquired a prescriptive right to the exclusive use of the water of a rivulet for irrigation purposes, a higher owner cannot use the water of the streamlet so as to interfere with the rights of the lower owner. Pat MAHABIR SAHU v. RAM SARAN SAHU 19

Shamilat deh recorded as shamilat tarf—Declaration, suit for—Admission, effect of—Appropriation of compensation money, effect of—Limitation, commencement of—Fresh invasion.
In a suit for a declaration to the effect that the plaintiffs were the owners of a certain share of the village shamilat land, it appeared that the land in suit was entered as shamilat deh in the Settlements of 1856, 1868 and 1891-92. But in 1893 the entry was changed and the land was shown as shamilat of taraf Bedi—one of the 3 tarafs in the village, the plaintiffs' taraf being known as taraf Vedi—in consequence, as was urged on behalf of the Bedi defendants, of an admission made by the plaintiffs or their ancestors in that year. It appeared further that portions of the land having been acquired by the Government in 1906 and again in 1911 the compensation money was taken by the Bedis on the last occasion:
Held, (1) that the old entries being all in plaintiffs' favour the admissions of the Vedis meant nothing more than that the Bedis should continue to manage the land taking whatever income might accrue and incurring whatever expense might occur;
(2) that the action of the Bedis in 1911 in taking all the compensation money was a fresh invasion of the plaintiffs' rights and the suit was, therefore within time. P HARNAM SINGH v. MAKHAN SINGH, 43 P. W. R. 1918; 21 P. L. R. 1918 31

Sind Courts Act (XII Bom. of 1866), s. 16—"Misbehaviour," scope of—Pleader, duty of—Letter containing personal attack on Judge, whether misbehaviour.
The jurisdiction of the Judicial Commissioner under section 16 of the Sind Courts Act extends not only to professional misbehaviour but to general misbehaviour; but while this jurisdiction is unlimited, the Court is reluctant to take cognizance of misconduct not connected with the office of Pleader unless it is morally disgraceful or shows that the individual is not a proper person to hold that office.
A Pleader by virtue of his sanad has certain rights and privileges, but he is not a chartered libertine and those rights and privileges carry with them corresponding duties and restraints.

Sind Courts Act—concld.

A Pleader is an officer of the Court and is bound to assist the Court in the administration of justice. Criticism which is permissible to a private individual is not permissible to a Pleader. The co-operation of Pleader and Judge would be impossible if the Pleader were attacking the Judge in the public press. Nor would it be possible for the business of the Court to be conducted with dignity, decorum and impartiality when the Pleader is posing in public as the chastiser of the Judge. Such condnct is not only a breach of the Pleader's duty to the Court but must also result in an actual obstruction to the administration of justice.

A letter published by a Pleader, alleging that a certain Judge is indolent and takes credit for cases not tried but compromised, even if written in good faith and even if it does not constitute the offence of libel, amounts to misbehaviour under section 16 of the Sind Courts Act. S MR. M., PLEADER, re enquiry against, 11 S. L. R. 81; 19 CR. L. J. 322 338

Specific performance of contract—Contract embodied in solenamah, whether can be enforced after solenamah set aside by Court.

Where a suit for specific performance of a contract to grant a lease was brought on the basis of an agreement embodied in a solenamah filed in Court which was subsequently set aside by the Court:

Held, that there was no contract subsisting which the plaintiff could put before the Court for enforcement.

Held, further, that in such a case the plaintiff could not fall back upon some verbal agreement to grant the lease. C JIBAN KRISHNA CHAKRAVARTI v. RAMESH CHANDRA DAS 225

Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 9, applicability of—Dispossession by co-owner—Joint possession, whether can be decreed.

Section 9 of the Specific Relief Act applies to cases where a co-owner in possession of property jointly with other co-owners is dispossessed by the latter. N GHOOTI v. SITKU 557

——— s. 9—Possession of Thakur Bari, what constitutes.

Where plaintiff appointed the pujari of a Thakur Bari, defrayed the expenses of worship, repaired the building and held the actual possession of the key by which the door of the Thakurghar was opened:

Held, that the possession of the plaintiff was such physical possession as the provisions of section 9 of the Specific Relief Act were intended to protect, notwithstanding that the Thakur Bari, as the residence of a deity was open to the public. C NARENDRA NATH LAHIRI v. CHARU CHANDRA BOSE, 497

——— s. 21—Contract to refer to arbitration, when bars suit—Institution of suit, whether refusal to perform contract.

Per Fletcher, J. (Shamsul Huda, J., dissenting).—The mere filing of a suit by a plaintiff who has entered into an agreement with the defendant to refer the matter in dispute to arbitration is not a refusal on his part to perform his contract within the meaning of section 21 of the Specific Relief Act.

The plaintiff and the defendants who were brothers entered into a registered agreement whereby, to evoid litigation, they agreed to refer their dispute to arbitration. The plaintiff, however, shortly afterwards instituted a suit in respect of the m covered by the agreement:

Held, per Fletcher, J.—That the suit was not b by the proviso to section 21 of the Specific R Act, inasmuch as its mere institution did not am to a refusal within the meaning of that section.

Per Shamsul Huda, J.—That the institution of t suit amounted to a refusal on the part of the plaint to perform the contract he had entered into to have the dispute settled by arbitration instead of by suit, so that the suit was barred by the proviso to section 21 of the Specific Relief Act. C DURGA PRASAD JANA v. DINABANDHU JANA, 22 C. W. N. 362 279

Specific Relief Act—concld.

——— s. 22—Specific performance of contract, suit for—Delay, effect of—Abandonment, failure to enforce registration, whether amounts to.

Mere delay in the institution of a suit for specific performance of a contract to sell land is not sufficient to defend the claim. The delay must be of such a character as to give rise to an inference of the abandonment of the right or should disclose some prejudice to the defendant.

The failure of the plaintiff to obtain compulsory registration of the deed in his favour is not of itself sufficient to prove abandonment. Pat BATULAN v. NIRMAL DAS, 4 P. L. W. 192 244

——— s. 27 (b)—Specific performance of contract, suit for—Subsequent bona fide transferee for value—Burden of proof.

A party pleading an exception must prove the exception.

Where in a suit for specific performance of a contract the plaintiff proves his prior contract, the burden of proving a subsequent bona fide transfer for value without notice under section 27 (b) of the Specific Relief Act lies on the party alleging it. Pat DHARAMDEO SINGH v. RAM PRASAD SAH, 4 P. L. W. 152 470

——— ss. 42, 52, 54 834

Stamp Act (II of 1899), s. 2 (10), Sch. I, Art. 23—"Conveyance," meaning of—Letter reciting previous sale and admitting receipt of consideration, whether conveyance—Interpretation of Statutes—Fiscal enactments.

The Stamp Act is a fiscal Act and must be rigorously construed in favour of the public, whenever any ambiguity arises.

A conveyance is an instrument which transfers property from one person to another.

A document ran as follows:—

"I am enclosing herewith the original sale-deed in respect of the land measuring 38 kanals 18 marlas, Khasra No. 3388, in Mauza Mozang, situate on J Road, which I have sold to you for the sum Rs. 1,000 and in respect of which I have alread received the purchase-money from you:"

Held, (1) that the document was a mere le reciting an earlier sale and an earlier receipt of consideration for that sale;

(2) that at most it was a receipt for the consi tion money and an admission of the sale not in itself the instrument of sale o

(3) that had for the words "w words "which I hereby sell" document would have been

Reg[illegible]ip Act—concld.

W[illegible]hat therefore the document was not a con-shan[illegible]ce and was not liable to stamp duty. P
XV[illegible] to [illegible]MJI v. EMPEROR, 1 P. W. R. 1918; 151 P. L. R.
A[illegible] 261
as[illegible] — Sch. I, Arts. 13, 35 —Lease, agricul- in[illegible]al—Document hypothecating moveable property
-Stamp duty chargeable.

[illegible]n agricultural lease is exempt from stamp duty [illegible]nder exemption (a) to Article 35, Schedule I of the Stamp Act.

A document which gives the landlord the sole right over the whole crop until the rent is paid and in which the tenants agree not to alienate or otherwise do away with the crops without his consent until such payment, is an instrument evidencing an agreement relating to the hypothecation of moveable property by way of security for the repayment of a future debt and as such is liable to stamp duty chargeable on a bill of exchange under Article 13 (b) of Schedule I of the Stamp Act. L B MAUNG HTAT v. MAUNG SAN DUN 109

—— —— Art. 23 261

—— —— —— Art. 35 109

Stare decisis, doctrine of—Wrong application of law, effect of.

An unconscious application of wrong law cannot set up a principle of stare decisis merely because it has been left unchallenged for a few years owing to the ignorance of the people affected by it. N UJIYARA v. TILOCHAN 435

Succession—Posthumous son, suit by—Burden of proof—Legitimacy, proof of.

In cases of succession to landed property of a large value as well as to a jagir, more than ordinary care should be taken to place the legitimacy of a posthumous son beyond all possible dispute.

One T., a jagirdar and landowner, having died, his landed property was mutated in the names of his widows and his jagir lapsed to the Government. Plaintiff brought a suit for possession basing his claim on the ground that he was the deceased's posthumous son. There was no documentary evidence and the claim rested entirely upon the oral evidence of witnesses, the majority of whom were in some way or other interested in the plaintiff. It appeared that the alleged mother of the plaintiff supported his claim but avoided a medical examination even when called upon by the other widows to do so:

Held, that under the circumstances the plaintiff had failed to prove that he was the son of the deceased proprietor. P JAGIR SINGH v. DALIP KAUR, 42 P. W. R. 1918 57

Succession Certificate Act (VII of 1889), s. 4—Succession certificate, whether necessary where one member of a plaintiff firm dies.

[illegible]In a suit on a hand note executed in favour of a [illegible]m, the full amount of the claim should be decreed [illegible]n where one of the members of the firm dies [illegible]ing the pendency of the suit and his legal da[illegible]esentative who is added as a plaintiff doe[illegible] produce any succession certificate to the decre[illegible]ed partner. C PULIN BEHARY ROY v. ABDUL J. 132; 40 A. [illegible] 911

Revision (Civ[illegible]suit by heir of deceased against debtor, without certificate.

—— High Court, [illegible]ection 4 of the Succession
Executory stage [illegible]ing of a decree in favour Succession Certificate Act—concld.

of a person, claiming to be entitled to the effects of a deceased person against a debtor of the latter for payment of the debt, without the production of a certificate as required by the section. The section is no bar to the maintainability of such a suit. Pat ALICE THORP v. SHAMAT LAL, 3 P. L. J. 160 733

Suit financed by third person, effect of.

If the case of a plaintiff is a genuine one it does not matter much who found the money to finance the suit. C AHAMUDDIN TAMIJUDDIN v. AMIRUDDIN 216

Taluqa, suit for possession of—Lord Canning's Proclamation of 1858, result of—Second Summary Settlement in Oudh, effect of—Governor-General's letter, dated 10th October 1859, effect of—Sanads, title conferred under, nature of—Hindu widow holding sanad in her name, position of—Trustee--Succession to taluqa—Oudh Estates Act (I of 1869), s. 22—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Arts. 141, 144—Limitation to be determined on case set up in plaint—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 116—Estoppel of tenant, not applicable to person setting up under-proprietary title by adverse possession—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s 11, Expl. IV—Res judicata, partial.

At the time of the annexation of Oudh a taluqa was in the possession of a Bais Thakur B. S. After the annexation the First Summary Settlement of the taluqa was made with him. He died issueless in 1857 and was succeeded in possession by his widow D. K. belonging to the clan of Amethia Thakurs. She was in possession when Lord Canning's Proclamation of confiscation was issued in 1858.

The Second Summary Settlement of the taluqa was made with her. and in the various proceedings relating to this settlement she was described as the wife or widow of B. S. She never in any way acknowledged that any third person had a right in the taluqa, although she made subsequent declarations to the effect that she had no intention of giving it to Amethia Thakurs. She was still in possession when the letter of the Governor-General, dated the 10th of October 1859, was published, by which it was declared that every taluqdar with whom a Summary Settlement had been made subsequent to the date of the re-occupation of Oudh had thereby acquired permanent, heritable and transferable proprietary rights in the taluqa for which the engagement had been taken.

As provided by this letter, a sanad in the original form was granted to D. K. in her own name in 1860. In 1861 a sanad in the revised form, i.e., the primogeniture sanad, was similarly granted to her. Her name was subsequently entered in Lists I and II of the Oudh Estates Act.

After her husband's death she took steps to provide for the devolution of the taluqa upon a collateral relative of her deceased husband B. S., but later on cancelled the provision in 1866 and 1873. In the proceedings held at the time of the First Regular Settlement she described herself as the wife or widow of B. S. and gave the history of the taluqa as having come down in the family of B. S. This Regular Settlement was made with her not on the basis of these representations but on the ground that she had acquired the full title to the taluqa under the sanads.

Taluqa—contd.

She continued in possession of the taluqa till her death intestate in 1893, after which the above-mentioned collateral relative of B. S. took possession of the entire taluqa.

Then R. B. S., as the right heir of D. K., being her brother's grandson, sued the collateral relative of B. S. for possession of the taluqa and succeeded in obtaining a decree in 1900. In 1911 R. B. S, setting out his title to the entire taluqa under this decree, brought a suit in ejectment against B. B. S. as a trespasser, who was at that time in possession of one of the villages comprised in the taluqa. B. B. S. was at that time aware of the facts upon which he relied in the present suit, mentioned below, for the purpose of showing that he was the rightful owner of the whole taluqa, but he set up an under-proprietary title in respect of the village, his case being that he and his predecessors had been in adverse possession as under-proprietors for many years upon payment of the revenue and cesses due in respect of the village. The suit of R. B. S. was, however, decreed in 1911 on the finding that B. B. S. was not an under-proprietor of the village.

In 1913 B. B. S. instituted the present suit against R. B. S. He claimed to be the nearest male heir of B. S. and as such to be entitled to possession of the taluqa in preference to R. B. S. who was a stranger to the family. R. B. S. relied upon his title arising from the provisions of section 22, clause 6, of the Oudh Estates Act and pleaded limitation as well as res judicata as a bar to the suit:

Held, (1) that Lord Canning's Proclamation of 1858 having resulted in divesting all landed property from proprietors in Oudh and transferring and vesting the same in the British Government, the Second Summary Settlement did not of itself vest the absolute proprietary and heritable rights in taluqas but amounted to a permission to the persons with whom the settlements were made to engage for the payment of the Government revenue; the effect of the declaration contained in the Governor-General's letter, dated the 10th of October 1859, being to invest the taluqdars in possession under the Summary Settlements with permanent, hereditary and transferable proprietary rights in their taluqas, including the perpetual privilege of engaging with the Government for the revenue of those taluqas; the two sanads addressed to D. K. having purported to confer upon her and her heirs for ever the full proprietary right, title and possession of the taluqa, and the intention of the Government in the matter being deducible from the acts of the Government itself and not from the conduct and declarations of D. K., D. K. took the taluqa in her own right as full owner, and not in the right of her husband B. S. as a Hindu widow, nor as such widow with special powers of alienation superadded, so that if she failed to exercise the special powers of transfer conferred upon her the taluqa would revert after her death to the nearest male heir of her deceased husband according to the rule of primogeniture, nor even as a trustee for the reversioners of her deceased husband B. S., for there was no evidence to show that she had by any express or implied acknowledgment, declaration or conduct constituted herself such a trustee: and that, therefore, succession to the taluqa was governed by the terms of section 22 of the Oudh Estates Act, under which R. B. S. was the right heir of D. K.;

(2) that D. K. having been found to be in possession of a full estate, the case was governed by Article 144 and not by Article 141, Schedule I, of the Limitation Act; but that, as the point of limitation was to be determined in view of the plaint allegations, which were to the effect that the plaintiff was entitled to succeed on the death of D. K. not as her heir but as an heir of her husband B. S., Article 141 applied and the suit was barred;

(3) that B. B. S. not being debarred under section 116 of the Evidence Act from raising in the previous suit the proprietary title in respect of the village then in dispute, inasmuch as he asserted at that time an adverse subordinate title and not a title derived from the superior proprietor, or from setting up both proprietary and under-proprietary titles at one and the same time on the ground of inconsistency, the present suit was barred by res judicata under section 11, Explanation IV, Civil Procedure Code, so far as the said village was concerned, and not in respect of the entire taluqa, inasmuch as title to the entire taluqa was not a point which properly belonged to the subject of the previous litigation. O BISHESHAR BAKHSH SINGH v. RAMESHAR BAKHSH SINGH, 4 O. L. J. 648; 21 O. C. 1 368

Temple lands in Tanjore District, incidents of.

Nature and incidents of lands held by temples in Tanjore District discussed. M MUNA MUHAMMAD v. MUTHU ALAGAPPA CHETTIAR, 23 M. L. T. 161; 34 M. L. J. 234; 7 L. W. 380 894

Testamentary direction for disposal of occupancy holding, whether can be given by occupancy tenant.

An occupancy tenant in the Central Provinces cannot leave any testamentary direction for the disposal of his tenant right by his widow after his death. N KALWA v. BHAWAR SINGH 1001

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 26 26

——— s. 41—Transfer by ostensible owner—Consent of Hindu widow, whether consent of person interested.

Quære:—Whether the "consent of the person interested" required by section 41 of the Transfer of Property Act can be said to be furnished where the only consent given is that of a Hindu widow, as tenant for life, the remainderman being no party to such consent. B GIR JAYAGAVRI v. PURSHOTAMDAS, 20 BOM. L. R. 177 92€

——— s. 43—Mortgagor—Mortgagor having no title but subsequently obtaining one—Attesting witness of mortgage deed purchasing property subject of.

A mortgagor had lost title to a property at the time he mortgaged it along with other properties. But the title to that property had come back to the mortgagor when an attesting witness to the mortgage bond purchased the equity of redemption:

Held, that the provisions of section 43 of the Transfer of Property Act would come into operation and that, therefore, the mortgagee's lien was enforceable against that property in the hands of the purchaser of the equity of redemption, who being an attesting witness to the mortgage bond could not be held to be a bona fide transferee without notice: C NIBARAN CHANDRA SEN v. NAGENDRA CHANDRA SEN, 22 C. W. N. 444 984

——— s. 51 753
——— s. 52 718

——— s. 52—Lis pendens, doctrine of, applicability of—Mortgage—Subrogation—Mortgagee decree-holder consenting to grant time to mortgagor for paying off mortgage by loan from third person—Mortgage, whether kept alive.

The essence of section 52 of the Transfer of Property Act is that a transaction entered into during the pendency of a suit cannot prejudice the interests of a party to the suit who is not a party to the transaction.

A mortgagee, who held two mortgages on the same property, obtained a decree on his first mortgage and during the execution of that decree consented to the postponement of the sale and the granting of time to the mortgagor to enable him to pay off the mortgage with money borrowed from one H:

Held, that H. by paying off the first mortgage obtained a lien over the mortgaged property prior to the second mortgage, and that the transaction being acquiesced in by and being presumably for the benefit of the mortgagee, section 52 of the Transfer of Property Act had no application to it. Pat BENODE BEHARI BOSE v. HIRA SINGH, (1915) PAT. 76 726

——— s. 52, scope of—Lis pendens, doctrine of, applicability of, to parties ranged on same side—'Any other party', meaning of—Purchases at auction sale, applicability of doctrine to.

The doctrine of lis pendens contained in section 52 of the Transfer of Property Act is applicable only as between opponents with regard to alienations made by any one of them during suit and it cannot be extended to parties to the suit who are ranged on the same side and between whom there is no issue for adjudication. The section does not bar a transferee from one of the parties pending suit from raising an issue which his transferor and transferees from his transferor after decree are at liberty to raise.

The expression 'any other party' in the section means any other party who can be said to be arrayed on the opposite side to the party alienating owing to the existence of some issue between them upon which the Court is called to adjudicate in the suit, which may thus be regarded as a contentious suit between them in which each of them requires the protection of the doctrine against alienations by the other.

The doctrine of lis pendens is an extension of the doctrine of res-judicata and makes the adjudication in the suit binding on alienees from the parties pending the suit, just as the law of res judicata makes the adjudication binding on parties to the suit and alienees from them after decree.

The doctrine of lis pendens applies to purchases at auction sales in execution of decrees against parties to the suit as well as to private alienations by the parties. M MANJESHWARA KRISHNAYA v. VASUDEVA MALLYA, 7 L. W. 104; 23 M. L. T. 70; 34 M. L. J. 263; 41 M. 458 471

——— s. 53, scope of.

Section 53 of the Transfer of Property Act does not expressly give a right to sue, but gives to a creditor an option to avoid certain transactions, and the right to sue does not accrue until he exercises that option. M VENKATESWARA AIYAR v. SOMASUNDARAM CHETTIAR, 7 L. W. 280; (1918) M. W. N. 244 551

——— s. 55—Vendor and purchaser—Promissory note, execution of, for part of consideration—Suit on pro-note—Lien for unpaid purchase-money, enforceability of—Intention of parties - Co-vendors not impleaded, effect of.

Where a pro-note is executed by a vendee of immoveable property for part of the sale consideration, it is a question in each case whether the parties intended that the security was to be in lieu of the actual cash and whether the vendor was thereby to abandon his lien for unpaid purchase-money.

The lien created by section 55 (4) of the Transfer of Property Act is different from the equitable lien known to English Law, for under the latter though the legal estate passes at the time of sale, the equitable estate does not pass until the purchase-money has been completely discharged.

Ordinarily one of several vendors of immoveable property cannot enforce his charge on the property without making his co-vendors parties to the suit, save where the share of the party seeking enforcement thereof has been definitely fixed.

Where one of two vendees executed a pro-note for part of the sale price in favour of one of two vendors and amounts in discharge thereof were entered on the pro-note and the vendor in whose favour the note was executed sued on it without impleading his co-vendor:

Held, that the above circumstances indicated an intention to abandon the lien allowed by section 55 of the Transfer of Property Act. M KRISTNASWAMI IYENGAR v. SUBRAMANIA GANAPATHIGAL, 23 M. L. T. 85; 7 L. W. 210; (1918) M. W. N. 231 523

——— ss. 58, 100—Mortgage and charge, distinction between—Sale in execution of decree without attachment, validity of—Consent decree, whether can affect properties not subject-matter of suit.

In a suit on a mortgage a compromise was effected, by which the mortgagor consented to a decree being passed against him on condition that if the decretal amount were not paid according to the instalments specified in the decree, the mortgagee would be entitled to recover it by sale of the mortgaged properties and in case of a deficiency in the sale-proceeds by sale of certain other properties (lot No. 2 specified in the schedule to the compromise petition). Payments not having been made in accordance with the decree, the mortgaged properties as also the other properties (in lot No. 2) were put up to auction-sale and were purchased by the mortgagee himself, who was put in possession by the Court. The mortgagor applied for setting aside the sale, and again a compromise was made under which the sale was to be set aside on the mortgagor paying the full amount of the decree within two months. The mortgagor failed to carry out this compromise and the sale to the mortgagee was confirmed In the meantime the mortgagor had mortgaged lot No. 2 to the plaintiff for the express purpose of paying off the decretal amount due to the mortgagee:

Held, (1) that, inasmuch as before the mortgage to the plaintiff lot No. 2 had been auction-purchased by the mortgagee, the mortgagor had no subsisting title, right or interest in those properties which he could pass to the plaintiff by the mortgage;

Transfer of Property Act—concld.

(2) that, as the auction-sale in execution of the mortgage decree was with the consent and at the request of the mortgagor, it was immaterial whether there was a formal attachment of lot No. 2 or not.

Semble.—Though the consent decree could not affect the properties comprised in lot No. 2 which were not the subject-matter of the suit, yet a valid charge was created thereon outside the suit by the compromise petition of the mortgagor.

The distinction between a mortgage and a charge under section 100 of the Transfer of Property Act is that in the case of the former there is a transfer of the property to the creditor which requires registration, while in the case of the latter there is no such transfer the debtor only agreeing that the property shall be security for the re-payment of the debt. C SAMIRUDDIN v. ABDUL SYED 734

——— s. 59—Mortgage, proof of.

A mortgage need not be contained in one or any other particular number of documents. It may be collected from a variety of documents so long as the effective document is a duly signed, attested and registered instrument in accordance with section 59 of the Transfer of Property Act. A MOTI CHAND v. LALTA PRASAD, 16 A. L. J. 121 596

——— s. 60 447

——— ss. 60, 88, 89—Mortgage, suit on—Decree, sale under, not in compliance with Transfer of Property Act—Redemption, right of—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882*), s.* 244*—Questions arising between auction-purchaser at sale under mortgage decree and mortgagor, whether to be decided in execution—Suit, maintainability of.*

In a mortgage suit for sale the decree made did not specify a day for payment as prescribed by sections 86 and 88 of the Transfer of Property Act. In execution of the decree the mortgaged property was attached, sold and purchased (with the permission of the Court) by the decree-holder. The sale was confirmed. The mortgagor thereafter sued for redemption:

Held, that as the property and all right, title and interest of the defendants in the suit for sale had in fact been sold under the decree of a competent Court, and such decree had not been appealed against, it was immaterial whether or not the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act were complied with and that even though such provisions had not been complied with, the mortgagor was debarred from a right to redeem;

Held, also, that the present suit was barred by section 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, inasmuch as the questions now raised could and sould have been raised before the sale was confirmed and, if so raised, would have been decided by the Court executing the decree. P C GANAPATHY MUDALIAR v. KRISHNAMACHARIAR, 23 M. L. T. 198; 27 C. L. J. 367; 34 M. L. J. 463; 4 P. L. W. 310; (1918) M. W. N. 310; 22 C. W. N. 553; 16 A. L. J. 353; 41 M. 403; 20 BOM. L. R. 580 855

——— ss. 88, 89 855

——— s. 100 734

——— s. 111A 212

——— s. 123 483

Trial, de novo 328, 337

U. P. Land Revenue Act (III of 1901), s. 36 51

U. P. Municipalities Act (II of 1916), s. 326 (1), applicability of, to criminal proceedings—Cattle Trespass Act (I of 1871*), s.* 22*—Illegal seizure of cattle—Compensation.*

Section 326 (1) of the U. P. Municipalities Act has nothing to do with proceedings in a Criminal Court. It relates only to suits of a civil nature in a Civil Court. It does not, therefore, apply to prosecutions under the Cattle Trespass Act.

Accused, servants of a Municipality, seized and impounded cattle belonging to the complainant which had not done any damage to Municipal trees:

Held, that the seizure was illegal and unjustified and that the accused were liable to pay compensation under section 22 of the Cattle Trespass Act. A SATOLA v. EMPEROR, 16 A. L. J. 148; 19 CR. L. J. 368 592

Will, interpretation of.

Where a Will executed by a Hindu gentleman in favour of his wife declared that he left his property to her absolutely and entirely, that he liked her to retain certain old servants in her employment so long as they behaved themselves, and that if she wished to utilise the powers she possessed in order to make an endowment of a religious or a charitable nature, such an object would meet with his approval, though if she did this he would be opposed to her giving the manager of the endowment too free a hand:

Held, that under the above Will the testator devised a full and complete estate, and not merely a life-estate, to his wife. O GANGA BAKHSH SINGH v. GOKAL PRASAD, 4 O. L. J. 744 645

Zarpeshgi ijara, construction of—Mortgagor and mortgagee—Interest and rent.

No general rule can be laid down as to the effect of a zarpeshgi transaction. Every case must depend upon its own facts.

Plaintiff executed a zarpeshgi ijara in favour of defendant, which stipulated that in the event of the plaintiff's failure to re-pay the zarpeshgi money the defendant would be entitled to retain the land till re-payment. It further stipulated that out of the annual consolidated jama of the property transferred to the possession of the defendant, estimated at Rs. 112-8-0, the defendant was entitled to retain a certain sum on account of interest, revenue, cesses and irrigation charges and that the balance should be paid to the plaintiff:

Held, that the intention of the parties was to create the relationship of mortgagor and mortgagee, and that the amount advanced to the plaintiff could not be viewed as an advance of the rent fixed upon the land. Pat MOHAMAD HANIF v. MOORAT MAHTON, 4 P. L. W. 146 153

Zemindari papers, value of—Enhancement of rent—Proof.

Zemindari papers, such as jamabandis, being ex parte papers, ought to be carefully scrutinized before they are held sufficient to make the tenant liable for the rent shown in them. Every case in which a Zemindar seeks to obtain enhancement on the strength of his papers must depend upon its own facts. Pat CHARITTER RAI v. KAILASH BEHARI, 4 P. L. W. 213; (1918) PAT. 145; 3 P. L. J. 306 422

UNIVERSITY LIBRARY